ASKS ARMY RULE FOR HERRIN

GREECE ANGRY AT TURKS; MAY RECALL ENVOY

Patriarch's Ouster Stirs War Talk.

BULLETIN.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—(By the Associated Press.) — As officially viewed at London, the expulsion of the Greek patriarch by the Turkish government may eventually demand some kind of action by the allied governments.

ATHENS, Jan. 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—Indignation was apparent throughout the country today over the action of the Turkish government in expelling the Most Rev. Dr. Constantinos, ecumenical patriarch of the Greek Catholic church. There was every reason to believe tonight that the government will refer the expulsion to The Hague tribunal and that if Turkey ignores the tribunal's verdict, it will recall the Greek diplomatic representative at Angora.

[A United Press dispatch from Athens, received earlier in the day, said Greece had recalled its charge d'affaires at Angora.]

It is understood the government has sent a strong protest to the Angora authorities, pointing out that the expulsion constitutes a violation of Turkey's treaty obligations and is an act of hostility towards Greece.

Premier Calls Situation Grave.

Parliament adjourned tonight for forty-eight hours or more to allow the government to deal with the situation, the gravity of which was not disguised by the premier in talks with diplomatic visitors today.

The premier said the prime desire of Greece was to maintain peace but that she could not tolerate the tearing up of treaties.

The cabinet council held a long session to discuss the expulsion but no official communique was issued aside from the brief statement embodying the premier's report on the government's instructions to its representatives abroad to notify the various governments of Turkey's action.

The departed patriarch is due to arrive at Saloniki tomorrow.

Parliament Also Sends Protests.

The national assembly has sent a protest to the parliaments of the world against the expulsion, while the archbishop of Athens will make an appeal to all Christian churches.

Describing the expulsion of the patriarch as a brutal act of violence and an effrontery to the civilized world, the newspapers publish indignant protests. Some of them do not conceal their anxiety regarding the consequences of the incident.

Leaders Talk of War.

The Ethniki Phoni, organ of the minister of interior, Gen. Kondilis, says:

"Turkey will only decide to become reasonable when the nations she opposes rise against her. We favor peace, but it must be a just peace, based on respect for existing treaties."

Former War Minister Pangalos declared no satisfaction could be obtained by peaceful measures; it was only by force of arms that Turkey could be brought to reason.

League Decision Aids Turkey.

GENEVA, Jan. 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—According to league of nations officials the mixed commission which has been supervising the exchange of populations of Greece and Turkey recently ruled that the most Rev. Dr. Constantinos, ecumenical patriarch of the Greek Catholic church was technically exchangeable because he arrived in Constantinople after the armistice.

The commission recommended that the patriarch be permitted to remain in Turkey, but the Angora government insisted it would only permit a Greek patriarch, who was a Turkish subject residing in the country. The Turks, it was stated, disclaimed any intention of violating the Lausanne treaty in favoring the abolition of the patriarchate as an institution.

WOULD PAY N. Y. POLICEMEN FOR KILLING BANDITS

New York, Jan. 31.—[United Press.] As an antidote for New York's crime wave, George S. Dougherty, former police commissioner and chief of detectives, suggests an "open season" for robbers, and the payment of bounties to policemen killing such criminals.

Dougherty would have the city pay bounties as follows: For killing one bandit man, $1,000; for killing two, $2,500; for killing three or more, $5,000.

8 SWITCHMEN HURT AS ENGINE STRIKES SPEEDER

Eight switchmen were injured, two of them seriously, in a collision last night between a locomotive and a motor speeder on which they were riding.

The accident occurred in the huge freight yard at Clearing. Freight cars which have been backed up one side of a hill are allowed to slide down the other by gravity. By a control operated from the top of the hill they are switched into one or another of a fan of tracks below. A switchman rides each of the cars downhill to break its speed at the proper point. The workmen then ride uphill on the motor speeder to repeat the process.

The collision took place at the foot of the hill. The engine was coming down, and the speeder was climbing. Most of the men saw their peril, and jumped in time to avoid the worst of the crash. The more seriously injured were H. C. Heffran, 55 West 63d street, and J. H. Stott of 6211 South Halsted street. The others injured are J. Bay, 6230 Eggleston avenue; Edward Correll, 6229 Marshfield avenue; R. C. Froline, 311 West Grand avenue; E. N. Heidekruger, 9020 Cottage Grove avenue; Fred Hall, 5913 Normal boulevard, and B. A. Duncan, address unknown.

"MUCH COLDER ON SUNDAY" CALLED WELL OVER ZERO

The weather forecast of "Fair and much colder Sunday" does not mean that a blizzard is headed for Chicago or that a subzero wave is coming this way.

Unofficially, it was explained at the weather bureau office last night that the expectation is for a minimum of 15 above zero, probably to be reached Sunday night, and as a likely minimum for Monday and that night as well.

"Much colder" was explained as having the 40 above zero at 7 o'clock last night as its starting point, as that was the hour at which the weather instruments were read for the forecast.

Cash Settlement for Bride of Two Months.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 31. — [Special.]—The split between Charlie Chaplin and his two months' old bride of 16 years reached the stage of a public announcement of cash settlement plans today.

The announcement was made by Edwin McMurray, San Francisco lawyer and uncle of Lita Grey Chaplin, following a family conclave of the comedians bride's kinfolk in Hollywood last night. Various guesses are made on the amount of settlement. One report says Mrs. Chaplin wants $500,000.

Statement by Rival Counsel.

Mr. McMurray issued the following statement: "Negotiations are in progress. They are of a purely personal and financial nature. There is no connection between these negotiations and any contemplated action for divorce or separation."

Lloyd Wright, attorney for the comedian, made this statement:

"It is true that I have had some conversations with Edwin McMurray, Mrs. Chaplin's attorney, but they were in the nature of friendly conferences, and nothing was said of a financial settlement of any kind. So far as I know Mr. and Mrs. Chaplin are perfectly happy, and there has been no occasion for or any talk of a financial settlement."

To Live Under Same Roof.

Attorney George Beebe of this city is associated with McMurray on the negotiations. The two lawyers announced that Mrs. Chaplin would refuse any personal interviews. Members of Mrs. Chaplin's family, with her mother, Mrs. Lillian Curry-McMurray-Spicer, as spokesman, announced that Mrs. Chaplin will continue to live under the same roof as Chaplin.

Despite this announcement, Mrs. Spicer and Mrs. Chaplin were located not at the Chaplin mansion of forty rooms but in the home of Lita's grandfather, W. E. Curry of Beverly Hills. They were asleep and could not be seen, according to Mr. Curry.

Charley at Mansion.

Chaplin's big black limousine was waiting by the front steps of the mansion which until the announcement of the financial pact had been the scene of various interviews with Mrs. Chaplin. Yoshi, smiling Japanese man servant, said: "Yes, Charlie is inside, but he is so busy with plans of his new picture that he cannot be interviewed."

Chaplin's eagerness to call quits on his latest matrimonial venture has been no secret since the return here of the comedian and his bride, three days following the ceremony in Mexico.

It was understood that Chaplin had agreed with Lita that she should have the use of the large mansion until after birth of the baby. The break, coming sooner than expected, may change all this.

Chaplin Lawyer Not Informed.

New York, Jan. 31.—Nathan Burkan, legal representative of Charlie Chaplin, said tonight that he knew nothing of the report that attorneys are negotiating a financial settlement betgween the motion picture actor and his wife.

PLEA TO STATE POINTS DANGER; NEW K K K CLASH

Officials Say Klan Annuls the Law.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Herrin, Ill., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Herrin's blood feud smoldered tonight while citizens awaited the result of Sheriff George Galligan's request made this afternoon that Gov. Small order the city under martial law.

Three national guard officers from Carbondale arrived early in the evening to survey the situation and report to Adj. Gen. Black before he confers with Gov. Small and Galligan tomorrow evening in Springfield on the question of granting the sheriff's request. Galligan late tonight was on his way to Springfield.

SHERIFF GEORGE GALLIGAN.

Events leading to the demand that state troops take over the government of the turbulent town followed shortly the report of the coroner's jury inquiry into the shooting of S. Glenn Young, Ora Thomas, and two others last Saturday, a report which was made early in the afternoon and which made no recommendations of culpability for the quadruple slaying.

Chief and Klansmen Clash.

The development began with a demand from John Smith, Young's successor as Klan leader in Herrin, upon Police Chief Matt Walker that he reinstate a discharged patrolman. This demand was backed, Walker says, with a threat to shoot. This clash in the chief's office in the city hall brought from Walker and Galligan a statement that 500 klansmen were armed in Herrin threatening bloodshed.

Smith appeared at the chief's office to oppose the firing of Patrolman Harold Grain from the police force. The man had already been discharged. He is the only member of the force not actively anti-Klan. Hot words followed Walker's refusal to retain Grain and some say both men threatened to draw and shoot it out. Smith denies this, declaring he was unarmed. Walker also denies that he attempted to draw his gun.

"It would have been suicide," he asserted. "I was surrounded by an angry crowd of gun toting klansmen."

Speeds to Sheriff.

Following the meeting Walker swore out a warrant charging Smith with disorderly conduct and left immediately with his son, Harry, and Patrolman Ross Lisenby for Marion.

Here, after explaining the situation to Sheriff Galligan, the two officers joined in sending the following telegram to Adjt. Gen. Carlos E. Black at Springfield:

"Deeper trouble now on at Herrin. Myself and Chief of Police Walker at Herrin fully believe that martial law in the city of Herrin is the only solution of the trouble. Quick action is necessary, and only martial law will avail anything."

Sheriff Galligan took Harry Walker and the patrolman under his protection in his bomb proof jail and Chief Walker returned to Herrin. Galligan has repeatedly called on the state for troops in time of trouble. This is the first time he has asked for martial law, which supersedes the authority of all local officers.

Wants 100 Soldiers.

"There are 500 armed klansmen in Herrin. The police and my forces are powerless," Galligan said later. "I want 100 soldiers sent here to disarm every klansman in Herrin. Then, maybe, between the police and my men we can take care of them."

Galligan is strongly anti-klan. For this reason it has been said by his enemies in Herrin that his action today was unjustified and his request was merely in reprisal for the murder of his chief deputy, Ora Thomas.

In reply to this Galligan points to a proclamation he issued this morning before the Herrin chief had seen him, in which he pleaded for the assistance of all law abiding citizens, friends and enemies alike, in a campaign of "lawful" law enforcement, promising to be governed entirely by facts and not to be influenced by former prejudices.

Denies He Will Resign.

In the statement the sheriff said he will not resign his office and announces he will not fill the deputyship made vacant by the death of Ora Thomas.

"It is not my desire to antagonize any one," the statement said, "or by

Cop Confesses Hand in Fatal Train Holdup

Policeman Bernhard P. Smith of the Chicago detective bureau confessed last night that he was one of a quartet of train robbers who on the night of Dec. 30 shot and killed Russell Sage Dickey, a Chicago and Northwestern railroad express guard, in an attempt to seize a strong box containing $100,000.

Smith's confession was accompanied by that of a fourth member of the band, this fourth robber a railroad employe. Two of the robbers confessed on Friday. At that time it was supposed that only two men committed the crime. Now, the confessions of four have been obtained.

Policeman Smith lives at 2407 Wineman avenue. He is 28 years old, married, and father of two children, one an infant. He has been the driver for crime squad No. 16, of which Sergt. William Freeman is the commander. His father is Sergt. Theodore Smith, a well known detective, recently transferred from the detective bureau to Summerdale station.

Baggageman Confesses.

The other man to confess, fourth of the band, is Ralph Norris McKee, 4936 North Robey street, aged 29, married, and father of two children, employed as a baggageman by the Chicago and Northwestern for eleven years.

They confessed that, together with Bernhard Mylin, a former railroad employe, and Edward J. Smith, Chicago and Northwestern baggageman, both of Milwaukee and both of whom confessed on Friday, that they planned to hold up the Viking train, a crack train of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, and loot the strong box of the $100,000 they knew it contained. McKee put his confession to writing, but Policeman Smith would only make his orally.

Edward Smith and Mylin were trapped Friday when a revolver and two silver platters stolen from the mails were traced to Smith. They later included Policeman Smith and McKee in their confessions and both were taken into custody yesterday.

Lieut. John Norton of the Chicago detective bureau was assigned by Chief of Police Collins to aid the railroad agents. Together with Chief Special Agent William T. Dineen, Agent W. E. Biggs and Inspectors Muldoon, Dickson, Lynch and Faupell, they ran down Edward Smith.

In the first confession neither named the two arrested yesterday. Mylin, who killed Dickey, escaped from the train at Glencoe and commandeered a taxicab, driving to the Davis street station of the "L" in Evanston. He said a Willys-Knight automobile would be waiting for him there, and it was there he left the taxicab after throwing away his revolver.

While the police were tracing the revolver, which was recovered, they spent much time in trying to trace the Willys-Knight automobile. They were not successful in this.

Names Policeman as Assistant.

Mylin at first said he didn't meet an automobile. He said he took the elevated to Howard avenue, then rode the electric line back to Milwaukee. Edward Smith said he left the train at Evanston unsuspected and also returned to Milwaukee. Neither tried to minimize his own guilt.

Chief of Detectives William Schoemaker happened to see Smith, whom he knew.

"You're not telling all," he challenged. "Some one was to meet you two at Davis street. Tell me who it was."

"Policeman Bernard Smith of your detail," Smith (unrelated to his accomplice) said pondering. Then he included McKee's name.

The plan they told was this:

Edward Smith, a baggageman, knew there would be $100,000 on the Viking Dec. 30 as there usually was. He suggested to Mylin that he do the robbery, apparently lone handed, but he would be on the train to assist. Mylin agreed.

Arrange Details of Robbery.

Policeman Smith, known to all three, had made some remarks that he would like to be in on a big robbery. Edward Smith remembered. He sent McKee to tell the policeman of the plot and ask his assistance. McKee did this, meeting the policeman the morning of the attempted robbery.

The policeman agreed. His part was to have his automobile parked at the Evanston station to protect the escape. They had previously assured themselves that Dickey would not put up a fight. But he did, however, when Mylin flashed his revolver and demanded the key to the steel chest. Mylin killed him.

Policeman Smith was lured from his home last night by a telephone call from Policewoman Mary Boyd. She talked mysteriously to him, then advised him to meet her on the corner, saying she would be the woman with the red hat. She was there, but there were many other police there, too.

Tomorrow the four will be sent to Waukegan for trial, as the murder took place in Lake county.

WHO LET FLATS IMPERIL LIVES? TOLL: SIX DEAD

Quiz Tomorrow on 'Why' of Firetrap.

A question people are asking: Just what official neglect—in fire or building inspection—permitted the fire trap at 5830-32 Blackstone avenue to continue to house nearly a hundred men, women and children, six of whom are now dead?

Did anyone in the city hall ever protest against this peril to life?

How many similar flimsy fire traps are allowed to house Chicago people.

Six charred bodies lay in a 60th street morgue last night while state, city, and county officials sought to lodge blame for the apartment building fire disaster on the Midway early yesterday morning.

Tomorrow morning a coroner's jury of representative Hyde Park business men will meet. It may take them several days to hear all the testimony of survivors of the holocaust in the four story flat building at 5830-2 Blackstone avenue. The fire took the lives of four women, a baby, and a man who hurled himself to death on the pavement, four floors below.

One of City's Worst Flat Fires.

It was, save one, the biggest casualty list in an apartment house fire for fourteen years.

The dead:

ANTHONY BARRE, 50 years old.
OLIVE BARRE, 50 years old, his wife.
DORIS BARRE, 10 months old, their daughter.
MRS. ELIZABETH PRYOR, 45 years old.
LORETTA PRYOR, 15 years old, her daughter.
MISS DORA JONES, 50 years old.

The injured:

MRS. ALICE BARR, 45 years old; burned about face and body.
STEPHEN COTTON, his wife, Elizabeth, and daughter, Anita, 8 years old; burned about body.
MRS. TILLIE DETZEL, right burns.

The entire machinery of the state fire marshal, State's Attorney Crowe, Coroner Oscar Wolff, and Mayor Dever's office was joined in what promised to be a rigid investigation. Noteby Appleby, colored janitor, was arrested by Hyde Park police. Later he was released. He will be called again.

J. H. Frazier, manager of the building, and Mrs. Beulah Taylor Fritz, millionaire owner, were questioned by Coroner Wolff.

Startling testimony was developed, it is said, in the questioning of Mrs. Fritz. As a result of her story a police search was ordered for a drug crazed man. Mrs. Frits admitted that she and other tenants had been suspicious of the man's action.

Seek Fire Cause.

Ten other points on the cause of the fire, the reason for its rapid spread, and the blame for the deaths already have been unearthed by the investigating forces. These are:

1. Testimony by Battalion Chief Horace McLane to Coroner Wolff that all rear doors were locked.

2. Reports of tenants and firemen that apartment doors opened inward, instead of outward.

3. Lack of proper fire escapes made the center of the building a death trap. Acting Chief Marshall Seyferlich declared the wooden interior, dried thirty years, was so much tinder.

Had Been O. K.'d by City.

4. Question of culpability, if any, of city inspecting forces which, presumably, had O. K.'d what Seyferlich called a "death trap."

5. Charge of tenants that several hundred pounds of waste paper were stored in the basement, near the furnace.

6. Reports of an all-night booze party in one flat. Admission of a beer party by tenants to the coroner last night.

7. Assertions of firemen that electricity, recently replacing gas, had been wired by amateurs.

8. Complaints, alleged to have been frequent, that the colored janitor, a radio fan, sat up to all hours, smoking many cigarets.

9. A theory that a carelessly tossed cigaret rolled into an unoccupied flat containing furniture.

10. Cause for reported failure of firemen to obtain water from at least one plug for seventeen to twenty minutes.

Coroner Promises Action.

"Some one must pay for these innocent lives," said Coroner Wolff. "Such a death list is not possible in a building where all safeguards are maintained. I am going to find out before the survivors can be tampered with."

Building Commissioner Frank Doherty declared the building was last inspected for fire hazards four years ago. He blames the city council for giving him only twenty-five men to cover the entire city.

Thirty thousand persons watched the dying fire at dawn and thousands more stood around all day in the ice and slush to watch the firemen dig for bodies.

Hundreds more gathered about the doors of the 60th street morgue, where the bodies had been taken.

Firemen described the fire, fought just before the funeral services for the late Chief Fire Marshal Buckley, as the most appalling seen in years.

Victims' Plight Hopeless.

A still alarm came in about 3 o'clock yesterday morning. Some one had noticed smoke coming apparently from the basement. When Battalion Chief Horace McLane arrived the building was an inferno. Screams of dying men, women and children were mingled with the groans of those who had hurled themselves from windows as the flames shut off other means of escape.

The victims' plight was hopeless from the start of the flames, firemen asserted. So rapidly did the flames rush up through the old structure, in its day one of the finest on the south side, that there wasn't a chance for them. It was only through heroism of inmates of the house and outsiders, including University of Chicago students from nearby dormitories, that so many were saved.

The victims were trapped on the third and fourth floors. A scanty ladder type fire escape on the front of the building was not sufficient to care for all of them, firemen asserted. Moreover they didn't have time to reach it before the hallways were filled with flames.

Leaps to Death.

Anthony Hardie, a packer for Marshall Field & Co., who had been in this country from Scotland only three years, died when he leaped from the fourth floor to the street.

The next body to be found was that of his wife, Olive.

Some time later firemen digging in the ruins found Miss Loretta Pryor, 16 years old, who was soon to wed. Her financé came from Hammond, Ind., as soon as he heard of the fire, went to the morgue and wept as he identified the body. Later the body of her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Pryor, was taken from the ruins.

Thousands looked on while scores of policemen held them back when the next body was found.

And it was not until noon that the last body was taken from beneath the ruins.

Fight Second Fire.

To further handicap the firemen, at the height of the fire, burning embers borne on a high wind set fire to the apartment building at 5714 Harper avenue, a few blocks away. Half the fire fighting forces had to be diverted to extinguish the blaze, which forced occupants of the three story structure to the street, thinly clad.

Some of the twenty-eight families burned out in the Blackstone avenue fire lost all their possessions.

Property loss in the fire is estimated at $50,000

Mayor Dever yesterday ordered the most rigid investigation possible. He declared that if any one in city hall was responsible for the disaster he would take "summary action."

Mayor Dever indicated that if the inquiry shows old world's fair construction of the apartment house was the cause of the fire's toll, he will demand radical changes in building ordinances and inspection forces.

FIRE DESTROYS SPIRITS

Fifteen thousand cases and 250 barrels of distilled spirits which were stored by the government in the Railway Terminal warehouse were destroyed by fire which caused damage estimated at more than $100,000 last night.

The warehouse is a seven story building extending from 444 to 458 West Grand avenue, half a block from the river. The government liquor was stored on the sixth floor and on the top floor where the fire originated. Until the arrival of a fire tug it was feared the building and adjacent ones would be completely destroyed because the firemen were unable to fight the flames at close quarters on account of the alcohol fumes.

The high pressure lines from the tug made it possible to conduct the fight from a distance.

Smash Past Steel Doors.

Firemen eventually smashed their way past the steel doors of the government liquor vault. Meanwhile, the amount of water thrown into the blazing top story was so great that it had covered the floor below to a depth of several inches. Valuable merchandise stored on all the floors was badly damaged by water, smoke, and fumes.

Among the firms which had space in the warehouse were Pitkin & Brooks, dealers in glassware; the National Fruit company, the V. Thompson company, wholesale flour dealers, and the Emerson Drug company. In addition, firemen said, a large quantity of sugar and of newsprint paper was stored in the building.

FLAMES FRAME FLAT SURVIVORS IN HEROIC POSE

Tales of Bravery Abound as Lives Are Saved.

Many stories of personal heroism were brought out during the hours of horror as the Midway apartment building was destroyed with its toll of six lives.

A dozen persons owe their lives to R. G. Overall, who lived on the lower floor and could easily have escaped, it is said, without endangering his life. Here is his story:

"About 2:30 I went to the bathroom. As I was returning I heard a man shout. I thought it must be a holdup. My wife heard it, too, and told me to come in and lock the door. We smelled no smoke. Hardly had I bolted the door than I heard a wild scream from a woman. It wasn't two minutes since I had closed the door, yet when I opened it again I was met by a blast of flame.

"I returned and wrapped my wife in a blanket, rushed through the flames with her, and placed her in a spot that was not burning. Then I went back in and floundered through the smoke until I found our two children, Robert, 6, and Raymond, 4. I carried them to the street, my wife running after me.

He Arouses Others.

"By that time the whole building was in flames. There was a great roaring sound as though a high wind had sprung up. I plunged back in and up to the second floor. I aroused Mr. and Mrs. Sims and helped them get their two children, David and Junior, to the street.

"I helped George Ericson get his wife and baby to the street and then he came back in with me and we ran through the building, pounding on doors. Ericson carried out Mrs. P. N. Robinson, 77 years old."

Robert Hilton, University of Chicago student, clad in a tuxedo and fresh from a party, saw the limp form sprawled across a fire escape at the third floor. With the flames only a few feet away, he climbed up, threw the body of Mrs. Hardie over his shoulder, and brought her to the street. She had been burned and asphyxiated.

An Outstanding Feat.

Two telephone operators of the Del Prado hotel, next door, were among the hundreds in that building and in other homes and apartment buildings nearby who were forced to flee. But before they went they performed one of the outstanding feats of the fire.

With smoke choking them, they paused to look across a narrow alleyway and saw H. R. Ditzell and his crippled son framed in a window by flames. Death seemed certain.

The two girls, Rose Baker and Margaret Lockitt, took an ironing board and ran it across between the two windows. Ditzell and the boy crossed to safety.

Miss Isabelle Cummings, a divorcée, and her little daughter Shirlee, were certain of safety. They were on the first floor. But there was Mrs. Selma Cummings, 60 years old and a paralytic, mother and grandmother. Miss Cummings braved the smoke and flame to help her aged mother into a wheel chair and then trundled her down the smoke filled hallway to safety by the rear door, leading the child by one hand.

Carried Down Ladder.

Stephen Cotton, 48 years old, one of those burned, told a dramatic story of his experiences, typical of others in the fire. From his bed at the Illinois Central hospital he said:

"I was awakened by my wife when she smelled smoke at about 3 o'clock We then woke our 9 year old daughter When I opened the door of our apartment in order to reach the fire escape, at the rear, a huge cloud of smoke poured into the room. We were cut off from the fire escape.

"Then I attempted to open the window and was again choked off by smoke from the outside.

"By this time my wife was hysterical. I shouted to firemen outside and they raised a ladder to our window and we were carried down."

Dr. Robert Black and his wife of the Del Prado hotel were epic figures.

DRAGS FOLKS TO SAFETY

Time and again Dr. Black dived into the burning building and dragged men, women, and children to safety, stopping long enough to revive those overcome.

In the meantime his wife sat at the Del Prado hotel switchboard, in the absence of the regular operators, and called, one after the other, the hundreds of guests.

"There's a fire next door; there is no danger. Dress and leave quietly and quickly," she advised each, while the smoke almost choked off her voice.

Firemen did their duty well. Lieut. William Johns and his men of truck company No. 34 braved death to carry Mr. Burman and his wife from the fourth floor down the ladders to safety.

Charles Hill of engine company No. 93 rescued a little girl whose body he stumbled over in a smoke filled hall.

Mrs. Alma Norden, sister of Anthony Hardie, told a dramatic story of how her brother, his wife, and baby daughter died. She was awakened by the smoke and tried to rouse them. Soon the smoke became too much for her and she walked down the hall. Then she heard Mrs. Hardie open the door and cry for help.

"Alma! Alma! For God's sake come and get my baby," she pleaded. But it was too late, Mrs. Norden couldn't get back.

The door shut, as if to block out the suffocating smoke. Hardie must have tried to save his wife and baby until all hope perished. Then he jumped four stories to the cement below and died.

FIRE DESTROYS HOPE OF IDENTIFYING THE WOMAN OF MYSTERY

Mystery surrounds the identity of Miss Dora Jones, one of the dead in the Midway apartment fire. For five years she had lived in the destroyed flat building. To inquiries of the owner as to her relatives and her past history she has always said that if anything happened, her story would be found in her dresser. The dresser was destroyed by the flames that killed her.

YOU can understand, perhaps, why we put such very strong emphasis on Scholle quality in furniture. If you'll give it a moment's thought, it will be clear to you.

You ought not to think of the furniture you buy as you do of other merchandise; food is quickly consumed; clothes wear out and have to be replaced; even your automobile doesn't last, and isn't expected to last, more than a few years, as a rule.

But furniture is a more or less permanent thing; you want it to last, and expect it to last a long time. And unless it's of superior quality, it won't last. There's no durability in anything but substantial quality; you know it.

Therefore, we press the point—Scholle-quality. We make a very special point of it when the goods are made. We know how they're made, and what they're made of; and what you can expect of them. And there's another good reason why we're very particular about Scholle-quality.

Our guaranty of satisfaction or money back is behind every piece of furniture we sell. It has to be good, for that reason. You buy here on our judgment and knowledge of quality; you don't have to trust exclusively to your own. We put our judgment and knowledge at your service. We can't afford to be mistaken; we certainly can't afford to let you make a mistake.

This sale is a good occasion to get what we offer in furniture, and service, and satisfaction, at lower prices than usual.

RENNAN LAYS OLITICAL TRACK R DEVER'S CARS

Will Help Traction Plan Through Council.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Mayor Dever's transportation plan [illegible] is reaching a point where there [illegible] be a turn for the better or worse. The indications yesterday were in its favor.

George E. Brennan, of much influence and more sagacity, said privately yesterday to friends that he favored the mayor's plan. That means considerable. Mr. Brennan, who knows the ins and outs of politics, heretofore has been credited with unrelenting opposition to municipal ownership and operation. Therefore it is a safe guess that the M. O. in the mayor's plan is not a highly disturbing feature.

Means Council Approval.

Of still more significance, however, is Mr. Brennan's O. K. With it the ordinance will be recommended by the local transportation committee and can pass the city council.

Just before the mayor's inauguration, when the aldermen rebelled against the slate of council committees, it was Mr. Brennan who straightened out the situation. Again, when trouble loomed large against the mayor's selections for the zoning board, it was Mr. Brennan who untangled that situation.

While the advocates of the mayor's plan appear impatient to get it out of committee, they are said to have been cautioned against undue haste; but the committee's recommendation reasonably can be expected within a short time followed by council approval immediately before or immediately after the aldermanic election of Feb. 24.

Popular Action in April.

Council action may be hastened a little by the rumored threats of certain aldermen to resist Democratic organization advice after the election. Council approval means that the people will be given a chance to determine whether they want the Dever plan at the April election.

Advocates of the ordinance, who have been feeling out sentiment among the aldermen, claim that a majority of the council have already indicated an intention to vote for it. Others insist upon knowing definitely the details of what the ordinance proposes before committing themselves.

Many municipal ownership advocates —including the Chicago Federation of Labor—are expected to oppose the ordinance. Victor A. Olander, secretary of the Illinois Federation of Labor; John J. Fitzpatrick, president, and Edward N. Nockels, secretary of the Chicago federation, spent two hours with Mayor Dever yesterday afternoon.

Hint at Change in Views.

The union leaders said later they will ask the council committee tomorrow for more time in which to prepare and present their views. On the federation's traction committee are Christ Madsen, J. J. Walt, and Ald. Oscar Nelson. The alderman voiced his opposition to the ordinance before the council committee until it barred him from talking until after the committee members get through their own discussion of the measure.

During the conference between the mayor and the labor leaders the alleged opposition by the Democratic organization to Nelson's reelection came up for discussion.

The labor leaders said they urged the mayor to support Nelson. What the mayor promised is not known. This is just an incident in the general situation.

Awaits Action by Busch.

The technical status of the ordinance at present is that it is waiting action by Corporation Counsel Busch and his several assistants who are preparing amendments, suggested by the aldermen. The Federation of Labor insists on having the wording of these amendments before proceeding.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 31.—First Assistant State's Attorney Gorman of Chicago and Detective Sergeant Homer arrived here from Sacramento today to take Raymond J. Bischoff back to Cook county to face charges of a $4,-000,000 confidence game.

Gorman and Homer met Sergt. P. J. Loftus of the Chicago police force, who with local detectives captured Bischoff ten days ago. Bischoff has waived right to protest extradition. Gorman and Homer will start back to Chicago with Bischoff Monday morning. Bischoff jumped bonds of $25,000 in Chicago two years ago.

Religion Aids Girl in Her Work, Miss Addams Says

Applying religion to girl problems of today was suggested yesterday to 500 members of the Woman's Church Federation protectorate, in session at the Sherman hotel, by Miss Jane Addams of Hull House, as a means of helping girls to a better understanding of their difficulties. An attitude of helpfulness on the part of older people, instead of absolute domination, would bring the generations into closer touch with each other, Miss Addams said.

VICTIMS AND SCENES OF MIDWAY APARTMENT HOLOCAUST

Exterior and interior views of four story apartment house at 5830-32 Blackstone avenue, which was destroyed by flames early Saturday morning with a toll of six lives. Five persons were injured. Some leaped out of the windows.

INSANE FATHER KILLS HIS TWO SMALL CHILDREN

Says Spirits Prompted Him to Do Deed.

Pottstown, Pa., Jan. 31.—Walter Bingaman, a farmer of Warwick township, near here, while in a religious frenzy today beat to death two of his three children. When policemen broke into the farmhouse they found the farmer's father, George C. Bingaman, 73 years old, also dead. His death probably was due to excitement and heart disease.

Tonight Bingaman was in the Chester county jail violently insane, the police said.

Bingaman's Wife at Neighbor's.

Bingaman's wife was at a neighbor's house when the tragedy occured.

The dead children were H. Priscilla Bingaman, 3, and William E. Bingaman, 18 months.

Thursday night, according to Mrs. Bingaman, her husband tried to convert her to his way of thinking in religion.

An argument followed and he tried to strangle her. She was rendered unconscious for some time. Friday night her husband again attacked her and she fled to the house of a neighbe and remained there overnight, fearing to return to her home.

Find Children Slain.

Today she became alarmed when nobody was seen about the farmhouse and the authorities at West Chester were notified. Breaking into the house, they found Bingaman and a 5 year old son, Walter Jr., stretched across a bed, with the dead grandfather and the two lifeless children in the same room.

Bingaman said he was prompted by "spirits" to kill the children.

DOG TEAMS NEAR END OF JOURNEY AGAINST DEATH

All Records Smashed by Hardy Mushers.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Jan. 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—Leonard Seppalla and his team of twenty dogs, which were expected to arrive at Nome, Alaska, today with antitoxin for a diphtheria epidemic, had almost reached Bering sea when the latest report came here.

Seppalla, undefeated Alaskan dog racer, left Kaltag, 200 miles west of Ruby, at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon on the last lap of the 948 mile trip with the 300,000 units of antitoxin with which the Nome health board expects to control the epidemic.

Mushing behind a picked team of Malmutes, Seppalla was endeavoring to break his own record for the Kaltag-Nome journey, a distance of 300 miles, and set up a new world record for dog team travel.

The serum was started on its 948 mile journey to Nome Tuesday from Anchorage. It was taken 297 miles on the Alaska railroad to Nenana, where it was transferred to dog team relays. The hardiest and most experienced sourdough mushers of the north answered a call for drivers broadcast over the telegraph wires of the United States signal corps.

Seppalla, champion driver in the dog Derbies formerly run at Nome, was expected to break his record in the present relay. When he arrives he will have covered more than 600 miles, having journeyed 300 miles eastward to Kaltag to pick up the package of serum. He hoped to make the return in 20 hours, or 3 days and 14 hours, for the 650 mile trip from Nenana to Nome. The best known time between these two towns is 9 days.

Flyer is Ready.

Fairbanks, Alaska, Jan. 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—Arrangements for Roy S. Darling to fly from here to Nome, taking from Nenana to Nome 1,100,000 units of antitoxin that left Seattle by steamer this morning, were being pressed here late today.

The only development, said Darling, that would prevent him from executing the authority given him from Washington by the departments of the navy and of justice, would be considerable improvement in Nome by the time the antitoxin arrives at Nenana, about a week from today.

Five Dead; Many Sick.

Nome, Alaska, Jan. 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—Five persons have died from diphtheria, 22 cases have been reported, 30 persons are suspected with having the disease, and 50 others have come in contact with diphtheria patients during an epidemic raging here, it was announced today.

A. McCORMICK'S WIFE BECOMES MOTHER OF SON

A son who will be named Ralph was born at 3:50 p. m. yesterday to Mrs. Allister McCormick at the Presbyterian hospital. The boy weighed a few ounces more than six pounds. I. N. Sproat Heaney, who attended Mrs. McCormick, reported that she and the child were progressing satsfactorily.

Mrs. McCormick was Joan Stevens, an English girl, whom Mr. McCormick married following his unfortunate engagement to Miss Mary Landon Baker of Chicago.

Electric Line Responsible for Blaze in Highland Park

Fire which it is believed was caused by an electric curling iron, which an employé had forgotten to disconnect on Friday night, destroyed the beauty shop owned by Anthony Lencioni and a bowling alley in the basement of the same building in Highland Park yesterday. It was feared for a time that the fire would spread to other buildings on Second avenue. The damage was placed at $10,000.

4 EXTRA JUDGES OF COUNTY COURT TO BE DROPPED

Appropriations for the four extra judges who have been assisting County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki ended yesterday, and Judge Jarecki was notified he must drop them. Anton J. Cermak, president of the county board, said this is done on the recommendations of Efficiency Engineer J. L. Jacobs.

President Cermak said the Superior court judges have agreed to relieve the County court of the necessity of hearing special assessment cases, and Judge Jarecki will be able to conduct the other business of the County court alone. The judges who are thus dropped are from downstate counties, Judges Hoover, Weaver, Biggs, and Vankeuren.

Judge Jarecki said the decision to deprive him of his aids is a political move. President Cermak denied this and said it was just an expedient, inasmuch as John J. Sloan, president of the board of local improvements, could not get quick enough action in special assessment matters in the County court.

The county board sentiment was said to be that inasmuch as the city council appropriated $150,000 for extra clerk hire in the election commissioners' office and Mayor Dever approved, there is now too much of a duty evolving upon Judge Jarecki and they sought to relieve him of some.

WHY

Only Schulte Can Give You the Schulte Standard of Optical Service

Optometrists of the highest standing in their profession are proud to associate themselves with a large organization, exclusively optical, such as Schulte's. Firms who conduct optical departments as a side-line cannot secure men of this calibre.

Specialists who conduct their own office and merely prescribe glasses have not the equipment for filling their own prescriptions. They must send you elsewhere to have lenses ground, which takes extra time and trouble and usually considerable extra expense. Also a division of responsibility results when glasses are wrong.

At Schulte's the entire transaction is accomplished under one roof. The registered optometrist who examines your eyes (without charge) prescribes your lenses and also superintends the grinding. He advises the type of frame most suitable to your personality and fits them so they are comfortable and satisfactory in every way.

Such wonderfully complete service has enabled Schulte to build one of the largest optical practices in the world. Over 400,000 people in Chicago and New York now wear Schulte Glasses.

FLYERS' U. S. TRIUMPHAL AN EPIC OF ETHER

Capital Delirious in Defense Day Fete.

Yesterday's installment of the story of the American world flyers told of the wild enthusiasm with which they were greeted in Boston. The airmen, to use their own words, "fairly reveled in it," yet were prey to a strange uneasiness; for, as they said, there were 3,000 miles still to fly.

BY LOWELL THOMAS.

[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate and the McClure Newspapers Syndicate.]

SECTION LXXI.

Before their arrival in Boston the world flyers had flown across the Pacific, across the continents of Asia and Europe, and across the Atlantic. But the continent of North America still lay ahead of them. With the exception of their flight from Turkey to England, this was the easiest part of their trip around the world. But there were two factors that increased the hazard.

In the first place, their world cruisers had long passed the average life of an airplane, and until they were thoroughly tested by experts in Dayton no one knew for certain but that they might go to pieces in the air as a result of the abnormal strain they had been subjected to while flying in both arctic and equatorial regions, and while buffeted about by rough seas in Alaska, the Kurile islands, and the North Atlantic.

Overwhelmed with Hospitality.

Secondly, there was the ordeal by banquet and reception which the airmen were subjected to from the time they reached Boston until they completed their great undertaking at Sand Point field, Seattle. The manner in which they survived the latter is surely one of the outstanding feats of the world flight.

With the possible exception of the experiences of Admiral Dewey after his return from the Battle of Manila, I doubt if there has ever been anything in American history to compare with the triumphal tour of the world fliers, and it seems to me that the story of it from their lips is one of the most interesting parts of the world flight narrative.

"At two minutes past 12 on Sept. 8, we left Boston air port for New York," said "Les" Arnold. "Ahead of us in three escort planes flew Gen. Patrick, Assistant Secretary of War Davis, and Senator Wadsworth of New York. Behind us came ten other planes carrying journalists and photographers. Then there also was a radio operator who broadcasted everything that happened as far west as Omaha.

Twenty Planes Form Escort.

"As we passed over Providence, R. I., we could see jets of steam coming from every factory whistle, all traffic in the streets had stopped and the roofs were black with people waving to us. After leaving Providence, Gen. Patrick turned off the course so we could fly over New London, Conn., which was my home town. In New Haven they have a big whistle, used as a fire alarm, but the continuous blowing of it means a riot call. Although I had been away from home for a long long time and was now merely speeding by through the sky at the rate of ninety miles an hour, darned if they weren't blowing the riot call! Naturally I got a big kick out of that.

"As we passed over Bridgeport, ten more planes from Long Island, came out to escort us to Mitchel field. After passing Greenwich, Rye, and a lot of other small cities, we crossed the East river, and turning south from the Bronx flew right down the heart of Manhattan island. It was a glorious sunny day, and to look down on Times Square, 5th avenue, old Broadway, and the towering skyscrapers at the lower end of the island was another of the most thrilling experiences of the entire world flight.

"Every ocean liner, every tug, and every ferry seemed to be blowing a welcome to us. Strange as it may seem, this was the first time that one of the six of us had ever visited New York. 'Hank' Ogden had had to fly all the way round the globe to get here! Even crowds in this busiest of all the cities of the earth stopped for a moment to greet us and we could see that even the traffic on Broadway was held up. Although we had been thrilled at seeing Bangkok, Calcutta, Aleppo, Stamboul, Vienna, Paris, and London from the sky, we all agreed that looking down on Manhattan island was the most inspiring sight of all. As Ibanez, author of the 'Four Horsemen,' said when he caught his first glimpse of New York, to realize that human beings could build such a marvelous city as this made one proud to be a man.

"We flew over the Battery and on out to salute the Statue of Liberty before cutting across Brooklyn on our way to Mitchell field. As we swung over Meadowbrook Country club we looked down and saw rows and rows and rows of autos. There must have been ten thousand of them, and the edge of Mitchell field was black with people.

"General Patrick and the two planes accompanying him landed first. The crowd, thinking it was us, nearly mobbed them. We had to circle round until the police cleared the field. Then we glided down into the wind right over the heads of the people. When we taxied into position the crowd broke through the police lines again and for ten minutes we had to fight to keep souvenir hunters from pulling the planes to bits. Finally we fought our way to the receiving stand, where Senator Wadsworth made a speech and presented us with marvellous gold cigaret cases on one face of which was an embossed replica of a Douglas cruiser and on the other an engraved map of the world showing the route over which we had flown.

Wales on the Job.

"When we were in London the prince of Wales had told us that he intended to visit America and he promised to be waiting for us in New York. Sure enough, there he was. He came over, his face all smiles, and as he shook hands he said: 'Great show, boys. Well done.'

"Instead of going right on to New York, as we would liked to have done, we ran our planes into the hangars and then did our usual evening's work, looking them over carefully and servicing up. That night, after attending a reception given by Col. Hensley, commanding officer at Mitchel field, we retired as early as possible in order to be in shape for our flight to Washington the next day.

"Sept. 9 was a dark, foggy day and it was not until nearly 10 o'clock that we got off, with Gen. Patrick again leading. A stiff head wind held us up seriously, and, although our three planes had plenty of gas on which to get through despite the wind, our escort had to come down at Aberdeen, Md. From Mitchel field we flew over Coney Island, Governor's island, Hoboken, Philadelphia, and Wilmington. Gen. Mitchell, who had flown out from Washington, met us at Aberdeen, while the escort planes were taking on more gas. In passing over the B. & O. yards in Baltimore we saw scores of locomotives all blowing their whistles. To our amazement we could hear them faintly. It was the first time that any of us had ever been able to hear any sound whatsoever above the roar of our 450 horse power Liberties.

New Orleans Goes Dead.

"Ten miles beyond Baltimore the motor of the New Orleans suddenly stopped dead. Can you imagine what it feels like to be sailing along several thousand feet in the air and all at once to have your engine freeze? If so, then you can only realize about half the emotions of disgust and distress that swept over Erik and Jack, for here they were within a few miles of Washington, where they knew that many of the heads of the government of the United States, possibly even the President himself, were waiting to welcome them at the most important reception of all."

But luckily the engine of the New Orleans had picked out the right place to go wrong. At that moment the world flyers happened to be directly above the only field in that locality suitable as a landing ground for such large planes. Several of the escort ships, including Gen. Patrick's, landed beside the New Orleans. At the general's request Erik jumped into a De Haviland and took the place of Lieut. Louis Meister, who had been piloting Gunnar Nelson. So he flew into Washington with his brother for a passenger. Jack stayed with the New Orleans and discovered that the timing geers had slipped, thereby causing the motor to freeze.

All Officialdom Waits.

When the flyers arrived at Bolling field they were welcomed by the President and Mrs. Coolidge, the members of the cabinet, and practically every high official in Washington. Owing to the delay caused by the bad weather and high winds and because the general did not want the boys to take any unnecessary risks at this late stage of their flight, the world cruisers were several hours behind their schedule. But in spite of drenching rain and important engagements, the President and his cabinet waited patiently, passing away the time by looking over the various planes at Bolling field.

Meanwhile Harding was busy changing engines in the New Orleans so that she could be flown on to Washington the next morning. Hundreds of people came out from Baltimore to watch him, and nearly all of the girls asked "Smiling" Jack for permission to inscribe their names on his plane's tail surface.

Sept. 7 had been set aside as Defense day, and as it would mean only a delay of two additional days Gen. Patrick ordered the world flyers to remain over and take part in the national defense demenstration. While they were waiting the airmen were entertained by the general and made official calls at the White House and at the office of Gen. Pershing.

Meanwhile hundreds of telegrams and cables of congratulation were pouring in from all parts of the world. They came from people in every walk of life, from the king of England to the Western Union messenger boys of Boston.

The king's cable read:

"Will you kindly convey to Lieut. Smith and the other flyers my hearty congratulations on completion, for the first time in history, of the circling of the world by airplanes? I have followed with interest and admiration the progress of this heroic undertaking."

Huge, Impressive Ceremony.

"Defense day proved to be another day of thrills for us," continued "Les" Arnold. "At 1:15 we took off and flew over Washington to Arlington, where we dropped flowers on the tomb of the unknown soldier. Mrs. Coolidge had sent us bouquets of roses from the White House garden. Then we circled around over the White House and flew down Pennsylvania avenue to the capitol. No other planes were allowed in the air at the same time. This was in order that the people of Washington might have an opportunity of seeing our cruisers.

"Returning to Bolling field, we jumped into awaiting autos, proceeded to the peace monument, and then rode in the parade. Pennsylvania avenue was jammed, and we had never heard such a roar as went up from that throng.

"Although the personal congratulations we received in Washington and the telegrams and cables from all over the world seemed to take it for granted that our flight was over and that we had won the race to be the first to fly around the globe, all this embarrassed us, because we knew all too well that thousands of miles of flying still lay before us. Moreover, on our very next hop, across the Alleghenies, we had a narrow escape from disaster."

THE WAY OF TRIUMPH

The route of the world flyers from Boston to Washington. All along the way crowds gathered in hundreds of thousands to welcome the victorious airmen; and plumes of steam from a myriad of whistles and clouds of gunpowder smoke from naval guns arose on the air in tribute noisy enough on land, but oddly inaudible on the planes above the roaring motors.

R. R. GATEMAN FINED FOR BEING ASLEEP AT POST

John Cannoa, Northwestern railway gateman at Highwood, was fined $15 yesterday after Marshal Frank Llewellyn had testified he had found the watchman asleep at his post at 10 o'clock Friday night as a limited train was roaring past.

The crossing which Cannoa is supposed to guard is considered one of the most dangerous on the north shore. Marshal Llewellyn said he arrested the gateman, who was intoxicated, and guarded the crossing himself for the remainder of the night.

OIL COMPANIES QUIT MEXICO; PUT BLAME ON LABOR

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

Mexico City, Jan. 31.—The Texas Oil company has closed its sales office here and dismissed its employés. On the heels of a notice that President Calles would issue in a few days a decree establishing a court of arbitration between labor and the owners of factory and other industries, there also comes a report that the Corona Oil company has closed its big oil refinery at Tampico and will move to the Dutch island of Curacao, off the coast of Venesuela. Labor difficulties, its dissatisfaction with the decision to set up a court of arbitration, and the continued activity of labor agitators among the oil companies' employés are reported as the causes for the decision of the Corona company to leave Mexico.

Oil circles here say the Corona and Aguila companies, who have offices at Curacao, have brought in excellent wells, and that the Dutch government is giving them inducements to establish refineries on the island, including the right to import raw oil from Venezuela and Colombia free of duty, and low export duties.

PRIEST READY TO FORGIVE IF RELICS RETURN

Forgiveness awaits the thief who stole the vestments, relics and other personal belongings of the Rev. James J. Mertz, S. J., of Loyola university, providing he returns them, Father Mertz said yesterday. They were in a suitcase in his room in the Loyola dormitory, he reported to the Rogers Park police and they are worth $1,000,000 to him, but valueless to any one else.

Should they be returned to him C. O. D. or otherwise his prayers will do more good for their present possessor than the stolen articles, he said.

ALL CITY JOINS IN LAST TRIBUTE TO FIRE CHIEF

Seyferlich Will Succeed Buckley, Report.

Arthur R. Seyferlich, first assistant fire marshal, probably will be named to succeed the late Fire Marshal Buckley, it was reported in administration circles yesterday. Seyferlich, who is now acting chief, was chief during the Thompson administration. Mayor Dever, it is said, favors the selection of Seyferlich, in order that seniority in service may be continued as the basis for promotion.

"Chief Buckley, the city of Chicago bids you farewell, but your name will remain on its imperishable roll of honor. God grant you the peace you have earned."

With this benediction from the Rev. Father James E. O'Brien, the body of Fire Marshal Edward J. Buckley, clad in the blue uniform of his service and adorned with the marshal's badge, was lowered to its rest in Calvary cemetery yesterday at noon.

All City Honors Him.

All Chicago, it seemed, sought to honor the memory of the chief, whose thirty-seven years record in the fire department is probably unmatched for devotion to duty and spectacular displays of courage in numberless fires.

Mayor Dever, his cabinet, every member of the city council and practically every county official, as well as judges of both the Municipal and State courts, followed the funeral cortege which wound from the family home at 46 East Oak street to the Holy Name Cathedral, where Father O'Brien celebrated the solemn requiem high mass.

Thousands blocked the streets near the home and scores of policemen were required to hold in check the other thousands who surrounded the cathedral. Inside every pew was occupied and the side aisles were crowded with mourners. Traffic in the streets through which the procession passed had been rerouted since 8 o'clock in the morning.

The last, with the exception of the immediate family to view Chief Buckley's body, Mayor Dever, his cabinet, and the aldermen, formed an aisle before the doors of the home, through which the casket was borne by Battalion Chiefs David J. Mahoney, Charles N. Heaney, and Francis Byrne, and Capts. James E. Miller, James Hughes, and James Galvin.

The Line of March.

Ten Lincoln park motorcycle policemen riding slowly at the head of the column forced a way for the procession through the crowds, west in Oak street to Rush, south to Cass street, and thence south to Superior street and the cathedral.

One hundred city policemen, Acting Fire Marshal Arthur R. Seyferlich and the firemen's band were next in line of march. Then two hundred uniformed firemen, delegations from the departments of Milwaukee and Peoria and several hundred members of the Knights of Columbus and the Elks. Nearly a hundred veterans of the department, long since retired and many of them struggling along with crutches or canes, preceded the aerial truck heaped high with the floral offerings of the whole city.

Then the hearse, and behind it Chief Buckley's red automobile, draped in heavy mourning, and followed on foot Fireman Otto Dahl, the late chief's favorite chauffeur, carrying the battered helmet the marshal had worn for many years.

Tears were in the eyes of many in the vast auditorium of the cathedral when Anthony Corcoran, a clerk assigned to the marshal's personal staff, and Thomas Loftis, sang the "Ave Maria" during the services.

WOMAN IS GIVEN YEAR IN JAIL AND A FINE OF $200

Mrs. Myrtle Bashor was sent to the Bridewell for a year yesterday by Judge Frank Padden. She was also fined $200. She was charged with running a disorderly house.

Her daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Kobel, was fined $200 when it was shown she lured girls into Mrs. Bashor's establishments.

The convictions followed a raid on an establishment run by Mrs. Bashor at 1654 North Ashland avenue. Assistant State's Attorney William B. Steinberg prosecuted the two women.

ANSWERING THE LAST CALL FOR THEIR CHIEF

Firemen, formed in a hollow square, stand at attention as the body of Chief Buckley is borne from the Holy Name cathedral to the hearse, thence to be taken to its last resting place. All the city joins in paying tribute to the late fire chieftain. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

FIELD MUSEUM GETS TOMBS OF ANCIENT EGYPT

Two of the most ancient monumental tombs of Egypt, each more than 4,500 years old, have been brought from the shadow of the great pyramid of King Zoser in the acropolis of Memphis to the Field museum here where they have been reërected in the Egyptian hall.

One of them, the tomb of Unis-Ankh, erected in 2600 B. C., contained 206 great blocks of stone, weighing in all 96 tons. It is the smaller of the tombs. In reërecting them, it was necessary to use hidden steel girders to support the structures, but their outward appearance is unchanged. The second tomb, that of Neter-User, was erected in 2700 B. C.

It required hundreds of laborers and great cranes to lift the stones from their resting place in the Egyptian sand. The work in Chicago was directed by John E. Glynn of the museum's maintenance staff.

BERGER QUOTES FABLE TO RAP HOUSE REBELS

Says G.O.P. Has Right to Keep Them Out.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Representative Victor Berger [Soc., Wis.], who supported the La Follette ticket in the last campaign, took a shot at his progressive Republican associations in a speech in the house today.

VICTOR BERGER.

Mr. Berger accused them of repudiating their progressive principles when they sought to retain recognition on standing committees as Republicans. He said the Republicans had a perfect right to control their own organization.

Replies to Frear.

The address was in reply to the speech of Representative Frear [Rep., Wis.], one of the La Follette group, who on Thursday sought to defend the right of the Wisconsin members to remain in the Republican party.

"Aesop tells a fable of the bat, who in a war between the quadrupeds and the birds, posed as a quadruped or as a bird, according to which side was victorious," said Mr. Berger. "But the bat was found out and shunned by both sides ever after.

"My colleague from Wisconsin, Mr. Frear, reminds me of that fable and of that bat in the speech he made last Thursday.

Says Frear Posed.

"Mr. Frear posed as a great La Follette man last summer, when the more or less socialistic La Follette campaign loomed up big on the political horizon.

"And lo! the day before yesterday Mr. Frear humbly kissed the flag—no, kissed the elephant's tail—and begged for permission to crawl into the hole and pull the hole in after him. Not in so many words, but that was the gist of his performance.

"Any man who claims to be a progressive, who claims to stand for reform, ought to be willing to pay the price. If not—then he is a weakling. Especially in this case, the price these gentlemen are asked to pay is so insignificant as to be almost ridiculous—the loss of position on committees. The Republicans have a right to control their own organizations."

REDISTRICTING FOR HOUSE MAY WAIT UNTIL 1930

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—There will be no reapportionment of representatives by the Sixty-eighth congress, which expires March 4 next, and it is probable that there never will be a reapportionment based on the 1920 census.

An effort to reapportion according to the latest enumeration of population was made in the Sixty-seventh congress. A bill was passed by the house, but failed of passage by the senate. In this congress reapportionment bills have been offered, but they have been pigeonholed as a result of the opposition of states that probably would lose representation under a redistribution and of the apathy of other states on the question.

May Await Next Census.

With two congresses having failed to comply with the constitutional provision that "representatives shall be apportioned among the several states according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each state," leaders in the house doubt that any bill will be passed until after the 1930 census.

The question was definitely disposed of so far as this congress is concerned by the action of the census committee of the house, in which a move for reapportionment was defeated last week by a vote of 6 to 7.

The indisposition to reapportion is the indirect result of the prevailing sentiment in congress against increasing the size of the house. If the present membership of 435 should be retained eight states would gain and eleven would lose one or more representatives.

Means Bigger House.

The bill which failed in the last congress provided for a house of 460 members, that number being adopted because a reapportion on that basis would cause a reapportionment on that basis would cause only two states to lose one member each. To reapportion without costing any state the loss of a member it would be necessary to fix the membership of the house at 483.

But the proposal to reapportion on the basis of a house of 460 members failed, partly because of the consideration that a larger membership than at present would make the body even more unwieldy and partly because of considerations of economy.

Based on 1910.

Under the reapportionment following the 1910 census the membership of the house was fixed at 435, each member representing an average of 211,877 constituents. On the basis of the 1920 census each member would have an average of 242,415 constituents, while the gains and losses of members by the several states under a reapportionment based on the retention of the present size of the house would be:

	Gain.	Loss.		Gain.	Loss.
California	3	..	Nebraska	..	1
Connecticut	1	..	New Jersey	1	..
Indiana	..	1	N. Carolina	1	..
Iowa	..	1	Ohio	2	..
Kansas	..	1	Rhode Island	..	1
Kentucky	..	1	Texas	1	..
Louisiana	..	1	Vermont	..	1
Maine	..	1	Washington	1	..
Michigan	2	..
Mississippi	..	1
Missouri	..	2	Total	12	12

All other states would retain their present representation.

Deprived of Voice.

California, which would gain three members, has been loudly demanding a reapportionment. The Californians complain that, so long as their representation is based on a census fifteen years old, their state, the population of which has increased tremendously in that time, is deprived of an equal voice in the making of the laws. Asserting that taxation without equal representation is tyranny, they raise a cry reminiscent of the rallying slogan of our nation's fight for independence.

In a recent editorial the National Republican advocated a change of the basis of representation from population to registered voters. How such a change would affect the representation of the several states is shown by the following table:

	*A.	†B.		*A.	†B.
Alabama	10	3	Nebraska	6	7
Arizona	1	1	Nevada	1	1
Arkansas	7	3	New Hampshire	2	3
California	11	21	New Jersey	12	20
Colorado	4	3	New Mexico	1	2
Connecticut	5	6	New York	43	49
Delaware	1	1	N. Carolina	10	8
Florida	4	2	N. Dakota	3	3

*A—Present population basis.
†B—On voters basis.

Asks New Basis.

"Voters, not area or population not participating in elections, should be the basis of representation in the house of representatives and in that part of the electoral college based upon seats in the house," says the National Republican.

"The constitution contains a provision for the reduction of representation in the house of representatives and the electoral college of any state which by disfranchisement reduces its electorate. The amendment is mandatory, but it has never been put into effect. To do so, indeed, would be difficult, because of the practical impossibility of reaching an exact determination of the extent to which failure to take part in elections is due to disfranchising laws and practices.

"Substitution of a new constitutional amendment based upon this principle for the fourteenth amendment covering this question would correct a gross injustice in representation and would do much to liberalize election laws and practices; it would do more than any amount of agitation to insure a fuller participation of voters in elections."

The MASON & HAMLIN with the AMPICO marks an epoch in Music's History

THIS EDITORIAL appeared in a recent issue of "The Music Trades"—a leading Music Magazine devoted to the interests of music merchants throughout the world.

An Outstanding Development in Piano Trade History

THE Mason & Hamlin with the Ampico has made its début. It is generally conceded among artists, musicians and music tradesmen that this marks an epoch in the history of the music industries, blending as it does a world famous piano with a reproducing mechanism equally the favorite of musicians and music lovers.

The influence of the Mason & Hamlin with the Ampico undoubtedly will be tremendous in the further development of the appreciation of music. The time-honored Mason & Hamlin has long been celebrated for its remarkably sweet, singing tone. The Ampico is also noted in another field—that of faithfully re-enacting the music of the masters with an accuracy that convinces critics that the reproduction, with all the individuality of each artist and peculiarities of his technic, is performed in a manner that is indistinguishable from his personal performance.

The Mason & Hamlin with the Ampico opens wide the field of the world's best music to thousands of music lovers who, heretofore, could hear distinguished pianists play on this instrument only on the concert stage. Now many of the world's famous artists may be heard in the home—through the medium of the Ampico recording—on the celebrated Mason & Hamlin.—Editor's Note.

THE more moderately priced Haines Bros. Piano equipped with the Ampico is a remarkable value. Made by an old, well-established firm of sterling reputation, it is the ideal instrument for the home. Your silent or player piano will entitle you to an allowance on the purchase of an Ampico. This exchange privilege, and convenient terms of payment make it possible for you to experience without delay the myriad joys of owning your Ampico.

Upright models as low as $795
Grand models as low as $1985

The AMPICO greatest of re-enacting devices, in the Mason & Hamlin, the supreme achievement of the piano builder's art, is displayed and sold in Chicago, Central and Northern Illinois, only by the Cable Piano Co.

SCANDAL EDITOR GETS SIX YEARS AND $6,000 FINE

Smirching Name Meanest Crime, Judge Says.

New York, Jan. 31.—"Few things are meaner than to threaten publicly to blast the lives of private individuals by publishing their social or moral errors," Federal Judge Mack declared today before a crowded courtroom.

He then turned to Stephen G. Clow, publisher of Broadway Brevities and sentenced him to six years and a day in Atlanta penitentiary, plus a $6,000 fine, for conspiracy to use the mails to defraud.

Clow's advertising solicitor, Andrew J. Brown, was sentenced to Atlanta for two years. Nat Kunnes, another solicitor, who completed the trio that was convicted yesterday, was ordered back to jail to await sentence Feb. 11.

Corporation Also Fined.

An additional fine of $11,000 was imposed upon the Broadway Brevities corporation. Clow then was released on $15,000 bail and Brown on $7,500 to await the result of an appeal for a new trial on nine indictments, which charged that representatives of the publication collected thousands of dollars in "hush money" from prominent persons upon threats to expose their private activities.

Maxwell S. Mattuck, government prosecutor, urged the court to commit Clow to prison immediately, saying that he would wreak vengeance in his magazine on those who had testified against him. William J. Fallon, counsel for the defendants, promised Judge Mack that Brevities would discontinue publication.

Mr. Mattuck told the court that at the door of Brevities lay many more offenses than those disclosed during the trial.

"Got Thousands in Hush Money."

"We have definite information," he continued, "that Clow received many thousands of dollars in hush money."

Judge Mack, in sentencing the defendants, said:

"There has never been a shadow of a doubt in my mind as to the verdict of the jury; there has never been any doubt in my mind about this case being unique, because of the difficulty of getting witnesses here to testify—people whose reputations were publicly blasted.

"The crime charged against Clow is meaner, nastier, and more disreputable even than taking money from poor people. I am going to make an example of Clow so that in the future prosecutors will be able to seize on such complaints as led to this trial and stamp out this kind of crime.

Publication and Punishment.

"The object of publicly blasting character by publishing something true about a person does not protect society, nor deliver punishment that might be just for such a crime. I know of a few things more mean than publicly exposing men or women to obtain money.

"I have no mercy for men who make a business of it over a period of years. For men who blast reputations because they cannot get money for keeping silent, I have no mercy."

Clow, who admitted on the stand during the trial that he was an habitual user of hypodermically administered paraldehyde, sat tight lipped throughout Judge Mack's denunciation.

Testimony at the trial developed that Brevities solicited advertising from prominent theatrical business and professional people, in some instances presenting unfavorable comment or hints against the prospective advertiser.

Court Wouldn't Hear Stories.

A ruling of the court prohibited disclosure of the nature of the alleged slurring stories which either had appeared or which it was charged the magazine threatened to expose unless it were given advertising. Mr. Mattuck, however, informed the jury that usually the threatened exposures were directed against some violation of the social law.

Countess Morner (Peggy Joyce) testified the magazine had cast aspersions on her until she paid a sum of money after which it referred to her as "charming sweet Peggy."

Brown injected the names of Otto Kahn, Averell Harriman, Jesse Lasky, and Jacob Ruppert into the trial as among the men who had paid money to Brevities in the course of "legitimate business transactions." In the case of Mr. Kahn it was stated the magazine gave publicity to a speech.

CONSCRIPTION OF CAPITAL IN WAR.

Senator King of Utah the other day said he would introduce measures for the conscription of labor and capital in the next war. A good many people are for the conscription at least of capital. La Follette's for it. It seems to be a means by which the people will get their rights.

How will you conscript capital in war? By taxes? We did that. When surtaxes run up to 80 per cent in the high brackets you have conscription. Likewise when you have such profit taxes as we had in 1919. But that does not prevent the making of profits in a war even if later they are absorbed by taxes. The idea seems to be to prevent the making of profits, as in itself, anti-social and unmoral.

In normal times capital may be in Mr. Ford's automobile works, in a pickle factory, in the making of clothes, in railroads, in steel, coal, flour mills, etc. If these enterprises are successful the men in charge of them know especially well how to run them.

In war you want more than Business As Usual. It must be business at high speed. The soldiers need more and more pickles and more and more pants. More ships, more wheat, more tractors, more shells, more everything. Just when an industrial plant is expected to do more than its previous best let's conscript it. Let's turn it over to the government which never ran such a business before. Let's operate the business of the country by bureaucrats. A conscript soldier is a rookie and he goes to a drill sergeant. A business man is a general—or maybe a colonel—and he is supplanted by a rookie—a government clerk. That's a perversion.

No, you don't mean that by conscription of capital. What do you mean? Possibly that the capitalist, the industrialist, the manufacturer, is to be put on $30 a month and told to run his business without other profit.

Some might be so patriotic that they would wake up at 2 in the morning worrying because they had forgotten an order, a direction, or a scheme which meant going ahead. Some might but they'd be few and it would not be to their dishonor or their discredit. Their intentions might be good, but suddenly the whole incentive of their lives would disappear. They'd sleep better anyway.

In conscription of capital they speak of coercing men's motives in handling big affairs as if it could be done as easily as the disciplining of a recruit. In the one case it is against human nature and in the other it is in line with it.

There is still in English humor a reflex of the post-war social condition. It is most amusing in London Punch and there is more than humor in it, a sardonic commentary on a class to whom the war did not have unpleasant consequences, the profiteer. This figure, as he appears, sometimes has a Hebraic cast of countenance, but whether that or not, he is always obese. His clothing fills the eye. His wife is obese and adornment covers her bulk.

He buys a game preserve and cannot shoot anything except the keeper or the dogs. He is in the ditch at the hunt. He does not know how to speak to his butler and his butler does not want to speak to him. He is a vulgarian with money, breaking in where he does not belong, and the implication is that he was an awful product of British sacrifices.

The real aristocrat who resents his presence knows how to shoot a pheasant, ride a horse, select wine, and not compromise a butler's sense of dignity. He also is for the most part brave and patriotic and he did a lot of courageous blundering in Flanders. But even if he was unable to go to war he was unable, remaining at home, to take any part in the industrial effort which Great Britain had to make to have any chance of winning the war.

The country needed shells and shoes, more and more and more of them. It needed ships and surgical supplies. It needed everything, and the army could not wait for them. It was no answer to the men at the front that they could not have shells because the factories could not produce them. They had to have them. The factories had to produce. Whatever the price, paid here or in Great Britain, the supplies had to be produced.

The profiteer was the man who helped produce them. You may be offended by his motives, but whatever they were they caused him to throw his energy, his shrewdness, and every bit of his life into the greater and greater production upon which the success of the country depended. He was equal to the emergency, a new vitality when the nation needed it, now called a vulgarian. He made money. The state put super taxes on him and took it back again. That did not stop him. The incentive was still in the work. If he succeeded in cheating on his taxes that had another remedy, even as it was another evil, but we know this system of capital in war works.

In war a nation throws all its strength in. Money is strength, but only in the ingenious and successful use of it. It is not strength in the hands of incompetents. They cannot even keep it.

No nation without a great industrial system could hope to win in a great war and if the conscription of capital means anything, it means that when the great emergency arises the nation would upset its industrial system of private capital by commandeering it. That would either take it away from the men who have proved they know how to use it or it would take away from them the reason for using it as the country requires it be used.

Conscription of capital is a glib doctrine which has nothing in human experience to give it plausibility. The Russians tried it and starved to death, most of the time in peace. It is a doctrine which prescribes that when the machine is needed most it shall be taken to pieces.

THE PRESIDENT'S CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING PLAN.

Legislation approved by President Coolidge for coöperative marketing of farm products is now before congress. It will fulfill his pledge. It may help the farmers. At any rate, to judge by their general indifference to the matter, it will not do them harm.

The President's agricultural conference, headed by ex-Governor Carey of Wyoming, bases its report favoring coöperative marketing on six recommendations. These include federal recognition of pooling and control of distribution by organizations of producers; exchange of crop and market information; surveys of distribution problems; federal registration of producers and distributors approved by the government; establishment of grades and standards; federal advisement on problems pertaining to the industry.

There is here no evidence of federal usurpation of functions that should be left to the individual but there is federal encouragement of coöperative marketing and, it may be, much assistance. Government help will unquestionably be needed at the beginning. After that the farmers should take care of themselves. With the project now split between Aaron Sapiro and his followers and the American Farm bureau the question as to what the government should do to help effectively is at best difficult.

Coöperative marketing is generally recognized as the hope of general farming in America. Its only drawback, seemingly, is that farmers don't cooperate. It is a slow growth and what might come soon with great success if human nature and mother nature were more compatible, will come no doubt only after long struggles and half failures.

The farmer is a capitalist, but usually a small one, and the understanding that a small number of large owners of other property find around a conference table is not so easy for a large number of small owners in a convention hall. For the farmer has been bitten much and often and he remains suspicious of new ventures. "If your way is better," he says, "why isn't it that way now?" He throws the burden of proof on the coöperative method and says, "Prove it first." But they cannot prove it without his coöperation.

Coöperative marketing nevertheless will come. The waste of extreme individualization of exchange must cease as resources get lower and farmers realize that unorganized selling of farm products to highly organized buyers cannot get them far. The gradual displacement of the middleman to other fields; the acquisition of storage facilities by the farmers; more accurate and rapid information service and concentrated handling of the business of marketing; more uniformity in planting and in acreage; these are some of the things that will bring the farmer out of a bad hole. Railroad rates are accessory to his wealth, but coöperation is the first necessity.

If Mr. Coolidge's proposed legislation will help the farmers in those things, if it does no more than advertise their need, it will be worth while.

BANANAS ARE BETTER THAN EGYPT.

Costa Rica (United Fruit Company) has pulled out of the league of nations. The little banana republic on the Caribbean has paid its $18,000 back dues, resigned like a gentleman, and gone home from the European club for good. Costa Rica can now grow bananas in peace, watch the great white fleet nosing around its harbor, and let Mesopotamia take care of itself. Bananas are better than Egypt, is evidently Costa Rica's newest motto.

Costa Rica, say those fortunate travelers who have visited her palm fringed shores and lived in her lovely capital, is a land of beautiful women and strong men. It is a generous land of fruit and scenery where nature is good tempered and life is sweet; and as long as the world eats bananas Costa Rica will want no more.

The women of Costa Rica will be no less beautiful nor the men less strong for its withdrawal from the league. The tropic palms and sunsets will not change. The banana crop will not decline. Costa Rica does not need Egypt; and Egypt can do without the Costa Ricans. Costa Rica is well out of European chicanery.

NO MOUSE FROM THIS MOUNTAIN.

Somebody slipped a resolution through the senate last year changing Mount Rainier to Mount Tacoma and now the great northwest is torn by strife and dissension. Embittered documents crowd the editors' mails, some for Rainier and some for Tacoma, and public bodies "resolute" with heat and much fury. There are Kiwanis, Rotary, Native Sons, American Legions, Women's clubs, D. A. R., S. A. R., pioneers and historical societies all listed in the battle. And the chambers of commerce of Spokane, Olympia, Walla Walla, Seattle, Pasco, Aberdeen, Toppenish, Port Townsend, Prosser, Bellingham, Kennewick, Ellensburg, Elma and Lewiston have lined up vocally and valiantly for Mount Rainier.

This is an old fight that small boys for a generation from Seattle and Tacoma have exchanged black eyes and bloody noses for, and the sudden nationalization of the controversy is something not unexpected. It is a tale of two cities and their rivalries, Tacoma sticking desperately for Tacoma; Seattle confident for Rainier. That Rainier is the older name as used by white men, listed in the charts and atlases and defended by the U. S. geographic board, would seem reason enough for keeping the name Rainier. But passion is not reasonable, and Tacoma's passion for a Mount Tacoma is great and enduring.

For itself the mountain is a noble work rising from salt water close to fifteen thousand feet into the fog smokes and sunshine of the sea. There are shining glaciers on its sides and lakes and lilies on its upper lawns. The snows from ten to fifteen thousand feet above the sea rescue the sunsets as they sink into the western ocean and hold them late into the evening. There is a snow filled crater at the top and steam merges there eternally with spume and frost and the brittle blue of heaven. The Indians say it is the mountain that was God.

There are few hills in this world more beautiful. It burdens the great northwest with its message. It has become, like Fujiyama, an eternal presence, almost holy. The rancher sees it from among the trees of his plum orchard. The banker turns to it on his way down to work. It is a silence, like the word of a great god in their souls, and their controversies about its name take on the ferocity of religious strife. That is not all bad. There are worse things to fight for than the name of such a mountain.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

When it was near zero outside a house fly was buzzing against the glass inside in the sunlight. Several days later a spider was on the wall. Outside, where a hundred various birds feed, some of them summer birds sticking out the winter, moles have holes under a plank, and they come out, chiefly at night, to clean up sunflower seeds that the seed eaters have left over from their foraging.

By 10 o'clock in the morning a dozen squirrels have come out of their nests. That's their usual hour, but on a thawing morning some of them may be out by 7. By 3 o'clock they are through with the suet, seeds, nuts, and crumbs and are back in the nest—a short day but a full one. In the moonlight rabbits come into the thickets, nibbling at the sprouts. A little owl can be heard screeching, and sometimes a large one hooting.

Even in January there are many breaks in the suspended animation. Much life has neither fled nor dug itself in for the winter. January had wild geese overhead. Now February and the approach to moving sap.

WHEN CUPID WORKS ONLY FOR HYMEN.

Miss Gloria Swanson, who recently was Mrs. Herbert Somborn, is now the Marquise de la Falaise, having married the other day in Paris the young Marquis James Henri de la Falaise et de la Coudray. Of this event Miss Swanson is reported as saying: "People said the French marriage laws would make it hard for me to marry again. Pish and tush and a couple more tushes. Where there's a will there's a way. So that's that, as they say in the titles. Oh, and speaking of titles, don't you think I have a nice one now? I like to roll that word on my tongue, 'Marchioness.' Wonder how Hollywood will like that. Well, let them try it on their pianos."

Miss Swanson's estimate of her achievement is conservative. It is a wow. Her art in the movies is what the directors call the consummate sex appeal: a Venus Anadyomene who arose with her dolphins in Chicago, in Mohawk street, near Center street, just west of Lincoln park. Her father was a Swanson. Her mother was a Klanowski. Gloria went into the movies in the old Essanay days in Argyle street. A director glimpsed in her the qualities which were to make her famous and later, fully revealed, were to lead her to the altar with the proudest title in Europe, shared thankfully with her by the ardent young marquis.

He, although young, noble, dashing, and courageous, was not a spring chicken in the sophisticated field of Paris. In other instances he had been irresistible, although he had not married. A ladies' man but not a domestic man—not a marrying man. He had been a gallant soldier in the war, and with his personal attractions and his title he had been a favorite with prominent ladies who could recognize class.

It was not until he had met Gloria that his thoughts drifted toward matrimony, and not then until he had seen her many times. They had been much together in Paris, Compiegne, Malmaison, and Fontainebleau, where Gloria was making a picture.

His devotion was apparent, but the observers were not prepared to learn that it was about to lead him into a condition of life which many young Parisians of fashion consider too cramping. Miss Swanson was not prepared to have it lead him anywhere else, and in her presence the marquis gradually came around to a new view of domesticity.

It is probably the greatest triumph of the cinema. There have been many instances in which a prudent and virtuous actress has been rewarded by the domestic attentions of nobility. We believe it was Bernard Shaw who said that it was the salvation of British aristocracy that every two or three generations some of its young males would be lured up the alley to the stage door and afterward marry pink cheeked chorus girls, restoring sturdy qualities to the thinning blood of the nobility. That may be why Great Britain is great. But successful as these adventures of ladies who knew when to be virtuous and of nobles who knew when to be reasonable have been, Miss Swanson undoubtedly scores the greatest triumph of the buskin, as you would expect her to do.

As she suggests, Hollywood would do well to play this on the piano.

Editorials of the Day

MR. KELLOGG OF THE WEST.

[Laramie, Wyo., Republican-Boomerang.]

The comment anent the approaching retirement of Secretary Hughes, irrespective of the part of the country from which it came or the political shade of the paper, has been very flattering in its estimations of the work of that gentleman and his rank among his distinguished predecessors; and in the same manner the reception of Mr. Kellogg's appointment has been received with general friendliness and approbation. THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, in expressing its views, gives them a characteristically TRIBUNE touch. THE TRIBUNE is continually arguing for the American point of view, which, it contends with much vigor, is not to be found generally along the Atlantic seaboard. The inhabitants of that section, it holds, because of their more intimate association with Europeans and their lack of touch with so much of their own country, are inclined to get what THE TRIBUNE designates as a "colonial" viewpoint, somewhat the same attitude that the Canadians take towards the mother country. Of course such an opinion may make New Yorkers smile, but there is something in it just the same. How many New Yorkers there are, for instance, whose western limit is Buffalo and whose southern terminal is Palm Beach. Of the domain of the great lakes, and of Texas and Oklahoma, to say nothing of the Rocky mountain region and the Pacific coast, they are in blissful ignorance. Occasionally a few of them wander out here to some of our "dude ranches" or are tempted by the wonders of the Yellowstone, and then, perhaps, a few colonial scales drop from off their eyes, but the average Wyomingite, engaging one of these Anglo-emigrés in conversation, somehow or other feels as if he were talking to a visitor from Mars or other foreign shore. He finds that the difference which exists between his view of many elemental things and that of the Manhattanite is not one of degree but one of kind; that on some subjects which he thought were essentially American they have opinions which to him are anything but American. It isn't necessary to cite specific illustrations, as we all know too well what some of these differences are. The next time that you come in contact with one of these "dudes" broach any one of a dozen live, pressing subjects and see if this isn't so.

REMARKS FOR IMMEDIATE CONSUMPTION.

"We'll never forget the things you said in that speech tonight," said the handshaker; "not as long as we live."

"I'm sorry to hear that," commented Senator Sorghum; "you know a man in my line of endeavor does have to change his mind sometimes."—Washington Star.

SKI JUMPING.

SKI jumping by the masters of the art is a highly specialized sport. The slide begins on a platform standing at a perilous height above the top of a high hill. The jumpers slide down a runway leading from the starting platform to a jumping place on the side of the hill. The jumpers are supposed to get a high momentum from the slide down the slideway and then to jump between 100 and 200 feet forward and down, to light on their feet and to slide gracefully a specified distance.

As it appears to an onlooker, the problem is principally one of maintaining equilibrium. The propulsion for the jump is furnished mainly by the momentum of the slide. Any great increase in the distance jumped will come about principally by new methods of lessening air resistance rather than by greater development of leg muscles.

The competition itself, from the health standpoint, and for the competitors, is not of great moment. For the jumpers themselves the great gain to health comes from the years' long, persistent practice, out of which superior ability comes. This, of course, is true of all other sports.

Baseball would be of trifling health importance were it not for the fact that the rewards of the game lure thousands of boys on to vacant lots for amateur play. This story relates principally to the spectator.

When a recent ski jumping contest was held at Cary, forty-five miles from Chicago, it was estimated that 40,000 people attended. Anything that can draw 40,000 people out of their stuffy, overheated homes, and cause them to spend a winter day in the sunshine and open air is worth while from the health standpoint. These 40,000 people were tramping through snow up and down hill for several hours. The sun was shining brightly. The air was dry, cold, and snappy. There was no inclosure anywhere. It was impossible for anybody to huddle around a stove and breathe hot, foul air. There were no stoves and it was either breathe pure air or not breathe at all.

Let us say that 20,000 went to the meeting place on trains. They had to take their chances with the germs of the crowd at the station and on the train, but once they were disgorged at the journey's end in the country the germs of the crowd stood no chance at all.

Of course, the jumping was thrilling. Jumping from a height is modified falling. There is a thrill in seeing a man fall from the top of a killing height and land at the bottom of a hill with all the skin on his nose. There is a thrill in seeing this done gracefully and in the highest art. There is a thrill in seeing the masters compete in the doing of a thing. Thrills are good for folks.

But the big good came to Bill and Maria and the kids who spent the day in the sunshine in the snowclad hills.

TOO MUCH STARCH.

Dietitian writes: "A. J.," whose letter about acids and starches appeared recently, has laid his relief from his various troubles (on eliminating from his diet all acid and starch combinations) to the wrong thing. His relief was much more probably due to the let up on constant overdoses of starches and sweets (carbohydrates) than to any effect due to the combination.

Too few doctors could tell "A. J." that the acids in fruits, after going through the processes of digestion and assimilation, produce an alkaline, not an acid reaction, and are our best safeguards against the acid reaction produced by carbohydrates.

The great American fault in eating is the constant overuse of starchy and sweet foods, resulting in a clogging of the system with the by-products of their assimilation (acids among others) which produce all the symptoms of which "A. J." complained.

"A. J." merely overworked his liver, and when he stopped doing that nature came to his aid and his liver started hitting on all four again.

HAS CONTINUOUS FEVER.

S. B. A. writes:

1. Is there anything that can be done that will break a continuous fever of a tuberculosis person?

2. Is the sign of fever under such conditions fatal?

REPLY.

1. Yes. Let him go to bed in a well ventilated room and remain there absolutely quiet until the fever disappears and fails to return on slight exertion. For a while he should not move his head or hands or feed himself.

2. No. Many febrile consumptives recover.

LENDS MONEY TO NEIGHBOR.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A neighbor's wife borrowed $50 from me and gave a demand note for it. The husband takes no interest in paying back the money, and she has no money of her own.

1. Can I place a lien against her furniture? 2. If so, how should I go about it? 3. If they should move for nonpayment of rent would my lien have priority over the landlord's if it is filed first?

O. S. J.

1. Of course, you are entitled to proceed against the wife's separate property. You are also entitled to proceed against the husband's assets if the debt was for a family expense.

2. To enforce your legal rights you should employ an attorney.

3. The only way that occurs to us in which you would secure a lien would be to levy, following a judgment. The lien of such levy would precede any subsequent proceedings taken by the landlord.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

THE TENANT AND HIS DOG.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—One of our tenants recently wrote to you asking if they had the right to keep an Airedale in their apartment. Your answer was yes. Now, they have never asked our permission to have a dog in the flat. But they have it, and it is ruining the woodwork, pawing and scratching on doors and window sills. They also allow him to run in the yard, and he does considerable damage there to the shrubs and trees. Haven't we any rights as landlord? We would like to have them get rid of the animal.

T. K.

We are confident that we did not give an unqualified answer such as you attribute to us. It is the general rule that a tenant can keep an inoffensive dog if the lease does not expressly prohibit, but the tenant is not entitled to keep a dog which inflicts unusual damage upon the premises.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

MAKERS OF MOONSHINE.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—To whom should one report a person who makes moonshine? What sum of money is paid for reporting such a person? Will one's name be divulged to the offender if the report is made?

B. C.

The offender should be reported to the state's attorney and the prohibition enforcement officer, Transportation building, 608 South Dearborn street, Chicago. No money is paid for such a report. One's name is withheld if requested.

60 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 1, 1865.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The constitutional amendment forever prohibiting slavery in the United States which was rejected by the house at the last session was adopted by that body by a vote of 119 to 56. The galleries and lobbies were packed and the announcement of the result of the vote brought on a whirlwind of applause unprecedented in congressional annals.

BALTIMORE, Md.—It is reported the rebel peace commissioners are on their way to Washington and will arrive at Annapolis. An Annapolis dispatch says that Col. Taylor has arrived there and reports that on Sunday Alexander H. Stevens, R. M. T. Hunter and two other commissioners reached the union lines and asked permission to enter at Fort Hill but were refused pending orders from Gen. Grant who was then absent.

CHICAGO.—Among weddings reported were those of Henry H. Kleinman and Miss Roble A. Hallock; Romanis S. Dingess and Miss Sarah A. Reese, and Franklin Whitaker of Janesville, Wis., and Miss Fannie A. Bryant.

CHICAGO.—John B. Gough lectured at Smith & Nixon's hall on "Eloquence and Oratory."

CHICAGO.—A numerously attended meeting of citizens of the west division was held in the Washington Skating building to take up the proposed removal of the State capital from Springfield to Chicago. A committee of ten was appointed to go to Springfield to urge the passage of the act to make the change. The Galesburg Free Press in an editorial gives numerous reasons why Chicago should be made the capital.

CHICAGO.—Field, Palmer & Leiter, 110-116 Lake street, offer their entire stock at greatly reduced prices to make room for spring goods.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 1, 1900.

FRANKFORT. — Senator William Goebel, who lies at the point of death from an assassin's bullet, was propped up on pillows and sworn in as governor of Kentucky by Chief Justice Hazelrigg of the Court of Appeals. J. C. W. Beckham was sworn in as lieutenant governor. The regularly inaugurated governor, W. S. Taylor, declared a state of insurrection and adjourned the legislature to meet in London, Feb. 6. This is in the mountain district and the Goebel Democrats will not go there. Troops prevented the legislature meeting in the capitol in defiance of Gov. Taylor.

WASHINGTON.—Senator Pettigrew was denounced as a traitor in a senate debate by Senators Sewall of New Jersey and Hawley of Connecticut because of Pettigrew's persistent attempts to aid Aguinaldo and hamper the American army in the Philippines. Senator Sewall declared that the death of Gen. Lawton was as much due to Senator Pettigrew as to a Filipino bullet.

LONDON.—John Sholto Douglas, the Marquis of Queensbury, died at the age of 56. He was noted as the author of the Marquis of Queensberry prize ring rules and that he sent Oscar Wilde to prison.

CHICAGO.—Miss Mabel Ridgeway Hair, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin M. Hair, and William E. Barbour were married at the bride's home, 248 Ashland boulevard.

LONDON.—A report from Cape Town says that Mafeking was relieved by the British under Plumer a week ago. Lourenzo Marquez reports that the Boers plan to dam Klip river and flood Ladysmith.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 1, 1915.

CHICAGO. — Jane Addams was hooted down in Hull House by anarchists and agitators who packed the meeting of the ostensibly unemployed. Lucy Parsons stood at the door and urged the audience to break away and parade through the loop despite a police order that such a parade could not be held without a permit. The radicals took her advice and paraded, singing "The Marseillaise" in many tongues. After several clashes with police were averted mounted police fell in at the head of the column and escorted it through the loop.

LONDON.—The British merchant ships Tokomaru and Icari were sunk by German torpedoes in the English channel off Havre.

ROME.—The war office ordered the reservists called out to join the colors on Feb. 20. Troops with fixed bayonets were called out to establish order at a meeting held for the purpose of forwarding a movement in favor of Italy remaining neutral in the war.

CHICAGO.—Charles H. Rounds, a realty broker, was found in a stupor in the street and taken to a hospital. In his pockets were letters giving orders concerning the disposition of his body and estate. It was believed he had taken poison but none was found and he was released. He then disappeared and relatives fear he has ended his life.

KUANTY YUNG TELLS ABOUT "TONGS."

Chicago, Jan. 25.—To many Americans, "tong" war is a great mystery. Once a while "tong" war breaks out in Chinatown; pistol shots are heard; some "Chinamen" were killed; and the local policemen run wild to catch the murderers. The cause perplexes everybody in this country.

"Tong" means really, in the Chinese sense, an "association." The members are mostly Chinese laborers. The original purpose of that organization was good. It protects the Chinese laborers from harsh treatment by their employers, furnishes tickets for those who are poor and wish to return home, and gives loans to those who are sick and out of employment.

On account of the numerous "tongs" formed in recent years, conflicts occasionally arises. In order to encourage members to be loyal to their respective "tongs," it has been agreed that a disloyal member, after having been expelled by an association should not be accepted by another. The last war staged in Chicago was a conflict of this sort.

The Chinese Y. M. C. A. has recently proposed a plan to unify all these "tongs" into a compact union to save club expenses and to eliminate conflicts. If the plan can be successfully worked out, Chinatown will have no more war and "tong" will no further be a puzzle to the American people.

KUANTY YUNG.

"AND SPENT IT LIKE DRUNKEN SAILORS."

Chicago, Jan. 22.—I think it is an outrage to even idly contemplate giving the teachers another increase. They just received one a short time ago and about 30 per cent more than they deserved. The reason given by Superintendent McAndrew—increased cost of living—can apply to all of us, yet you don't see any one even mildly concerned over the welfare of the poor stenographers, mail men, clerks, etc. The teachers are spending the last increase they got like drunken sailors—fur coats, expensive gowns, etc. Most of us would be glad to get a salary big enough to live in a decent apartment instead of spending it for luxuries.

Personally I wouldn't care a darn if it didn't come out of my pocket, but it does. It means higher taxes, higher rents, higher everything. The people of Chicago individually and collectively ought to voice their protest at the highway robbery of the people's funds.

Margaret Haley wants the taxes increased to pay for the above mentioned increase in salary. Easy enough for her to say. The teachers don't have to pay a federal tax and they don't pay any personal tax—not if they can slide out of it. I know one who don't, and she has quite a tidy little sum invested in furniture and a radio.

I thought in Superintendent McAndrew we had at last found a man who could break the strangle hold of Margaret Haley and her political cohorts on the public school funds, but found I was mistaken.

Wake up, Chicago, before it's too late!

FOR AN EDITORIAL ON PRAYER BY THE AUTHOR OF "PHARISEES."

Chicago, Jan. 24.—The article on prayer by Mr. George McGinnis is a most worthy and timely one.

I do not write this article because I only believe in prayer, but I know that prayer is the greatest aid to mankind. There is no argument that can hold up under it.

Personally it has been a wonderful help to me; it has also given me great comfort, and also have seen the results it has brought to others.

What the world needs today is prayer. I am not a religious crank by any means but I do recognize the fact we all need the blessing of our Maker.

But it is not enough to pray with one's lips, that is, to mutter a prayer when one's thoughts are goodness knows where, but to pray and plead from the depths of the soul and with God in our thoughts we will derive the benefit we so desire.

An editorial on prayer written as ably as the one on Pharisees would, I believe, do much good.

PERHAPS THE CHINESE DIDN'T SAY THEIR PRAYERS.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—Who will believe this nonsense that praying saves crops or terminates pestilence? Who will accept the conclusion that an unseen power will allow a famine to take its terrible toll of lives in China but will stop the rush of grasshoppers in Missouri because of a few mumbled words of prayer?

Are not the people of China entitled to life and happiness as the people of Missouri to their crops of grain?

ALDEN S. BAKER.

"WE BRITISH CAN PAY OUR DEBTS."

Evansville, Ind., Jan. 21.—As a Britisher, I want to say that your correspondent, Miss Alice Pearson, is entirely wrong—we British can afford to pay our war debts and mean to do so whether our debtors pay us or not. We don't want any sort of charity. The Britisher can afford to spend $300,000,000 every year on booze, has the greatest navy in the world, and is now about to spend $50,000,000 on building a naval base at Singapore. We can well afford those and many other more or less needless extravagances, so we will pay our war debts and continue to be "the empire on which the sun never sets. "God save the king."

GEORGE CABLE, WRITER, DIES IN FLORIDA AT 81

Noted for His Stories of Louisiana Life.

St. Petersburg, Fla., Jan. 31.—George W. Cable, well known southern author and man of letters, died here this morning at his winter home, where he had been living quietly. His bride of a year was with him at his death.

GEORGE W. CABLE

Mr. Cable was in his eighty-first year, having been born in New Orleans, Oct. 12, 1844. He served in the Mississippi cavalry of the Confederate army and was at one time a reporter on the New Orleans Picayune. In 1887 he founded the Home Culture club, now Northampton (Mass.) Peoples institue, designed for the education and esthetic culture of wage earning people. Thereafter he made his home in Northampton.

Honored by Universities.

He was educated in the public schools of New Orleans and received the honorary degree of A. M. from Yale in 1883 and the degree of Litt. D. from Washington and Lee, Yale, and Bowdoin. He was a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters.

Mr. Cable was the last of the old school of writers that flourished following the close of the civil war. He was the acknowledged leader of the literary movement which influenced southern writers to turn to the portrayal of local scenes, characters, and historical episodes with accuracy instead of imaginative romanticism.

Some of His Books.

Among his best known books are "Old Creole Days," "The Grandissimes," "Madame Delphine," "The Creoles of Louisiana," "Dr. Sevier," "The Silent South," "Bonaventure," "Strange True Stories of Louisiana," "The Negro Question," "John March, Southerner," "Strongehearts," "The Cavalier," "Bylow Hill," "Kincaid's Battery," "Posson Jone and Pere Raphael," "Gideon's Band."

RUSSIA ORDERS BIG QUANTITY OF YARN IN ENGLAND

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The soviet legation placed orders yesterday with the Astley Mills company, Ltd., Lancashire, for 400,000 pounds of yarn and cotton waste required by Russian weaving mills. The announcement has revived discussion regarding the possibility of developing Russian trade on a large scale.

The delegates are said to have authority to place further large orders. The security method of payment is a topic of discussion. The Astley company is selling through shippers, who guarantee payment in three installments.

A leading Manchester firm also has accepted orders on the same conditions as the above for 800,000 pounds of yarn.

The news has stimulated trade, which believes better times are coming. The increase in textile exports, which comprise a quarter of the British trade, is viewed as of tremendous importance.

AMERICA LEADS WORLD IN NEWS PRINT OUTPUT

Montreal, Jan. 31.—News print paper production in North America in 1924 totaled 2,900,000 tons, a record for the continent, said R. S. Kellogg at the annual meeting of the News Print Service bureau here today.

United States mills made 1,471,000 tons of news print in 1924, a decrease of 14,000 tons from 1923, and of 40,000 tons from the high mark of 1920. Canadian news print production amounted to 1,353,000 tons, an increase of 37,000 tons from 1923 and 54 per cent more than in 1920.

The one modern news print mill in Mexico made approximately 11,000 tons, and a small mill in Newfoundland contributed 65,000 tons to the continental total, which exceeded 60 per cent of the world production of this commodity.

The hand of death which has touched so many of the actors in the far flung drama of the veterans' bureau scandals may save Col. Charles R. Forbes from trial at Baltimore on an indictment returned there last April charging him with conspiring to defraud the government in connection with the sale of $3,188,250 worth of hospital supplies to the Thomson & Kelly company of Boston for $598,149.

This trial had been set for this month, but in view of the death of Brig. Gen. Charles E. Sawyer, White House physician, who was to have been the chief witness, and in consideration of the conviction of Col. Forbes in Chicago on another charge, it is possible this case may never be heard.

In any event it is reported the government will seek a new indictment in Baltimore if a decision is reached to prosecute that charge further.

The indictment states that a conspiracy was entered into to sell to this company great quantities of supplies represented as unserviceable and used at a fraction of their value. It is stated that Forbes, O'Leary, and Thomson falsely represented that the price agreed upon was the best that could be obtained.

DAUGHERTY PUT O. K. ON VERDICT IN MEANS CASE

Columbus, O., Jan. 31.—The conviction of Gaston B. Means in New York, and Charles R. Forbes in Chicago, should be a beneficial lesson to a great many people, including those who think they have a "pull" with officials in the public service, said former Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty here today in commenting upon the verdicts rendered in the Means and Forbes cases.

The former attorney general said that inasmuch as he directed both of these prosecutions, he thought it improper for him to make any extensive comment.

"The public should beware of the man who pretends great purity and a peculiar pull," Mr. Daugherty said. "If the lesson is observed, people in the future will read with greater discrimination, believe less of what they hear and do some thinking for themselves.

"The government at Washington is sound and impregnable to wind and storm and falsehood."

BREAD RISES IN PRICE AS RESULT OF HIGH WHEAT

Small Bakeries Only Hit by New Level.

When the rising wheat market catapulted the price of the grain up to and past the $2 mark it also boosted the price of flour and, in some cases, the price of bread.

Wheat above $2 a bushel, and flour at $10.60 to $10.90 a barrel, have resulted in an increase of a cent a loaf at a majority of 'round the corner bakeries, it was learned yesterday in a canvass of the city.

So far, at least, the bigger baking companies have not felt the jump in flour prices. They have large stocks, bought at the old price or contracted for in advance. But the neighborhood baker, buying only in small lots, has felt the pinch.

Hope for Drop in Flour.

Both the Schulze and the Ward Baking companies stated they had not advanced the price of their product, were well supplied with flour for some time to come, and were in hopes the wheat market would fall off in the near future and bring flour down.

The Boysen Baking company, 1001 West Chicago avenue, and the Venetian bakery, 6602 Sheridan road, also said they had not yet been forced to put up the price of bread. But they will have to if the present cost of flour keeps up, they declared.

May Raise 2 Cents.

From four bakeries in different sections of the city came the same story, typical of a dozen others included in the canvass.

The Edgewater Beach bakery, 1107 Berwyn avenue, declared its 10 cent loaf would have to go to eleven or 12 cents. High flour prices, it was said, just made an added burden, superimposed on the chronic one of high wages for bakers.

Paul W. Lembke, 2625 West 42d street, said he had had to increase his prices 1 cent on pound loaves and 2 cents on the pound and a half, making his prices 9 and 14 cents. Others reported similar raises.

MAY WHEAT OVER $2

With the world-wide publicity given the advance in wheat and the unloading of millions of bushels to take profits in the Chicago and all other markets, May wheat in Chicago yesterday closed 1 cent to 1⅞ cents lower at $2.02⅜ a bushel for May, $1.70 for July, and $1.56¾ for September.

Remarks of James A. Patten regarding $2 wheat had a bearish effect on all grains, especially at the opening, and led to a lot of selling. The general trading element at the Board of Trade was against an advance all day, but traders said at the close that, all things considered, the markets had given a good account of themselves.

Differ on U. S. Surplus.

Statisticians differ materially on the amount of wheat that the United States has for export and to carry over, there being a variation in the estimates of 50,000,000 to 75,000,000 bushels or more, all depending upon the position of traders on the market.

That high prices are necessary for agricultural rehabilitation throughout the world is the theme of a statement given out by Julius H. Barnes, former United States wheat director and one of the largest exporters and closest students of economic conditions the world over. Mr. Barnes says:

"Two dollar wheat in Chicago has aroused a great deal of public interest. As usual in any discussion of the extraordinary price advance, the press and public accept the spectacular incidents such as the reports of individual gains rather than the story of the great rising tide of agricultural rehabilitation throughout the world."

U. S. EYES PIT

Washington, Jan. 31. — [United Press.] — The government is closely watching the Chicago wheat market for evidence of illegal manipulation of prices, but thus far finds the boom has been within the law.

As for the rise of bread prices, it is likely that an appreciable increase will be followed by federal investigation. For the most part, according to information here, flour now entering bread was bought at low prices. Furthermore, while wheat and flour prices slumped after the war and bread failed to follow, bakers contended the flour cost was the smallest element and that labor charges held bread up.

On this basis a boost in bread prices would be challenged in congress with demand for a immediate probe by the federal trade commission.

Conditions which have driven the price of wheat for May delivery to more than $2 a bushel are believed by department of agriculture officials to be:

1. A world-wide shortage of wheat due to crop failures last fall in various countries.
2. A natural corner of the wheat market due to heavy British purchases in the Chicago pit.

GERMANY NEEDS MONARCHY, SAYS FORMER KAISER

[Copyright: 1925: By the New York Times.]

BERLIN, Jan. 31.—Former Kaiser Wilhelm believes only a restoration of the monarchy will save Germany and, what is more, he does not hesitate to say so in writing over his own signature. He expressed his views in a dedication in his own handwriting on the fly leaf of his memoirs, a copy of which he sent to Herman Bernstein, an American writer.

Wilhelm first declares that the agreement at Bjoerkoe between himself and Nicholas II. was thwarted by Sazonoff, Isvotsky, and other Russian statesmen, whereby the "war for which they yearned, and which cost me and the czar our thrones," was brought about. Wilhelm then writes:

"The terrible consequences of the attack on Germany by Russia, and what followed, teach that the future welfare of both lands depends, as it did a hundred years ago, on a restoration of both monarchies."

Irish Police Raid House, Get 2 Tons of Explosives

DUBLIN, Jan. 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—The police today raided a house in the residential district of Clontarf, near Dublin, and seized a ton of explosives, many revolvers and hand grenades, 5,350 rounds of revolver ammunition, and a large quantity of bomb-making materials. Two arrests were made.

WANTED
An Advertising Account

An advertising agency of enviable national reputation, whose staff is composed entirely of working executives without any solicitors whatever, wants one or two more advertising accounts.

Each member has had years of actual sales and advertising experience, and their service in these lines is so complete and productive that it has no competitors.

This statement can be proven by reputable manufacturing concerns right here in Chicago. Are you the business man who has the account and wants proof that its advertising and sales can be handled profitably? An interview will allow us both to see if an association will be mutually advantageous.

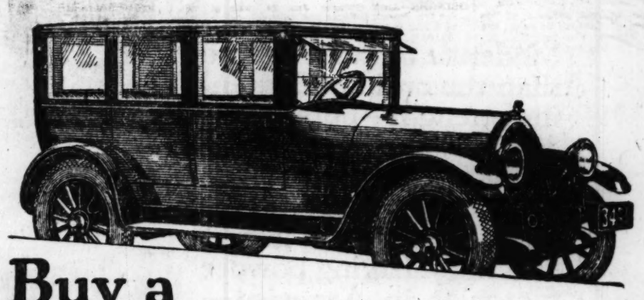
Stop Wasting Your Motoring Dollar



Buy a
FRANKLIN
Series 10-C~49% more power

The Lowest-Priced Car per mile in the World

If the real cost of motoring were settled by the difference between open and closed car prices, a lot of appealing talk going on would be sound.

And figuring quite simple.

But costs don't work that way

It's what you pay to begin, what you pay to operate and what you get back when you sell, that make up motoring costs.

And on that basis Franklin leads the world in low price per mile.

In other words, it's the car, and not the price, that settles costs and satisfaction.

You can get a car that is practically gone at the end of three or four years—no resale value.

Or one still good, but too costly to operate for anyone who would like to buy it second-hand—no resale value.

Or a Franklin, the ten-year quality car, still good, economical to run, a large market waiting—high resale value.

Make Your Choice After Asking These Questions

Why Franklin's 49% power increase doesn't affect its economy—

Why it can provide this acceleration—

from 5 to 25 m. p. h. in 9 seconds
from 10 to 40 m. p. h. in 15 4/5 seconds
from 30 to 50 m. p. h. in 16 1/5 seconds
with 100% reserve power at 40 m. p. h.

Why Franklin owners can do things with their cars that would be rank abuse to any other car—

Why driving the Franklin is less tiring—

Why the Franklin holds owner records for distance runs all over the country—

Why it skids less than any other car—

Why its braking system is the simplest, surest and most effective of all—

Why it never has any cooling troubles—hot or cold weather—

Why it is the only car that can travel all day, throttle wide open, low or high gear, without trouble or loss of power—

Why it can climb the worst hill, and leap away at the top without a sign of the usual engine fatigue—

Why 62% of last year's shipments were taken by those who were already Franklin owners—

Why it is easier on tires than any other car and therefore easier on the passengers—

Why it is quiet over the road, and stays quiet—seldom needs attention or repairs—

Why it is the easiest car to take care of—

Why 75% of all the Franklins made in 22 years are still in use—

Why so many of its principles of construction are, and can be, different—

Why they give better results at a lower operating cost—

Why it is a powerful car, and yet makes it possible for you to stop wasting your motoring dollar.

It is Just as Easy to Have the Best

Simply turn in your present car as part payment on this powerful, economical, dependable, long-lived Franklin. Balance monthly.

Greater satisfaction every day you own it—and the lowest cost per mile!

VIEWED LINCOLN 37 YEARS AFTER HE WAS BURIED

Former State Treasurer Tells of Reinterment.

Galesburg, Ill., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—M. O. Williamson, 85 years old, former state treasurer of Illinois, today broke a silence of twenty-three years and told how he, with fifteen others, opened the casket of Abraham Lincoln on Sept. 20, 1902, gazed at the body of the great emancipator and then closed and sealed the casket, which was bedded in solid concrete, never again to be exposed to mortal eyes.

Williamson was a member of the board of trustees of the Lincoln monument, and as the time drew near for the placing of the body of Lincoln under the monument the board decided, with the consent of Robert Lincoln, the son, to open the casket before it was sealed forever.

Robert Lincoln Consents.

Robert Lincoln, who now lives at Washington, agreed to the proposal to make certain that the body was that of his father and set at rest rumors that ghouls had carried away the ashes.

But the son swore all members of the board to secrecy. He did not want any publicity about the matter.

"There has been enough publicity," he said.

He declined to be present.

"We had to certify that the body was actually in the casket," Mr. Williamson said today. "So on the night in question we secretly assembled at the Springfield cemetery, within the new monument, and the sarcophagus was carried into the room. Workmen opened the casket with chisels. It was a red cedar box lined with copper, which had been sealed with solder.

Looked on Lincoln's Face.

"When the copper covering the bust was bent back we reverently bent forward.

"There was Lincoln, looking just like his last pictures, seemingly asleep. His face was darker than yours or mine now. But that was to be expected. Otherwise there was scarcely a change. His features stood out as if they had been engraved in my memory from pictures of him.

"It seemed as though we might have spoken to him and awakened him.

"He wore a black bow tie, which was slightly mildewed. One lapel of his dark coat also was slightly mildewed. But those were the only signs of decomposition we could observe.

"Then the casket was again sealed.

Placed in Steel Cage.

"Robert Lincoln had offered to furnish us a steel cage, composed of metal bars, in which to place the casket before it was set in a solid block on concrete and placed under the monument. His father-in-law, George M. Pullman, had been buried in a casket placed within steel bars to prevent any possible tampering. Robert thought this would be a good plan in regard to his father.

"So he furnished the cage, and it was used to contain the casket. Outside came the block of concrete, eight feet square. The entire mass was placed ten feet below the base of the Springfield monument, and I have no fear that the casket will ever be seen again."

CONTEMPT TRIAL TOMORROW FOR SAAL, MURPHY

The male half of Chicago's two most sensational divorce cases of last year will meet tomorrow in Superior Judge Joseph Sabath's court. Both are charged with contempt of court for failure to comply with court decrees. Both face imprisonment.

The two are Henry G. Saal, millionaire phonograph and radio manufacturer, and James H. "Rolls-Royce" Murphy, wealthy grain dealer.

Attorneys representing the former wives allege Saal never paid her $2,500 attorney's fees, and that Murphy never sold his Rolls-Royce, as ordered.

OPERATIONS GIVE SIGHT TO ELEVEN BLIND CHILDREN

Denver, Colo., Jan. 31.—Eleven of thirteen children, inmates of the state home for the deaf and blind at Colorado Springs, who underwent optical operations here two weeks ago, were led from perpetual darkness into light today when surgeons lifted from their eyes bandages that have covered them since the delicate surgery was performed.

With the exception of two children, sister and brother, those operated on have recovered their sight. The two, however, physicians said, are doomed to blindness. Their blindness was congenital, doctors declared, and they do not possess normal eyeballs or optic nerves.

COOLIDGE USES WAR CAMP SITES FOR NEW FORESTS

New York, Jan. 31.—Representative John D. Clarke, author of the Clarke-McNary Reforestation bill, said last night at the National Republican club that within the last few days President Coolidge by executive order has taken from the military reservations nearly 200,000 acres and established national forests in the place of parade and barrack grounds used during the world war.

The last big reservation to be turned over for reforestation was the 79,000 acre site at Fort Benning, Ga. Another tract of about 40,000 acres was Fort McClellan, Alabama, and another of about equal size was Camp Jackson, South Carolina.

"These large areas, instead of going to waste, will now come under the scientific control of the government's forestry experts and will have protection from fire, prevention of grazing, the cutting and selling of matured timber, and the promoting of the growth of trees," Mr. Clarke said.

REFUSE SENATE P. O. BILL, HOUSE BODY COUNSELS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—By unanimous vote the house ways and means committee today recommended that the house send back to the senate the bill increasing postal salaries and postal rates.

In a resolution the committee approved a report submitted by a subcommittee in which it was held that the bill is a revenue measure because of the increase in postal rates and that the senate has infringed on the provision of the constitution which requires that revenue legislation originate in the house.

Favorable action by the house on the resolution will mean that there is little chance of passage of postal legislation at this session.

ILLINOISAN REPORTS BALTIMORE'S OYSTER PACKING PLANTS O. K.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 31.—Baltimore oyster packing plants, inspected today by P. H. Cooney, chief quarantine officer of Illinois, were informally approved by him in a statement tonight to Dr. S. S. Winner, Illinois state epidemiologist. The two health officers are conducting an investigation of the oyster industry in Maryland following an outbreak of typhoid fever in Chicago which led to an embargo on the bivalve.

An early meeting of the National Association of Oyster Dealers' committee to consider details of the oyster control plan proposed by Illinois will be held in Springfield, Ill., it was indicated.

ARRESTED FOR PROMOTING FAKE PARTNER SCHEME

Frank L. Van Dusen, 63 years old, 1521 North La Salle street, was charged with defrauding fifteen Chicagoans yesterday. He is accused of inserting advertisements in newspapers for business partners with some capital to invest. Among the alleged victims are John Foreman, 3429 North Ridgeway avenue, who lost $600; Leo Bachanski, 4900 West 31st street, $600, and John A. Edgell, 5555 Blackstone avenue, $300.

Edgell told the police he mortgaged his furniture to obtain the capital which Van Dusen said would be required for a share in the mail order business he operated. In two weeks the firm took in just $5, he said.

Van Dusen served a term at Leavenworth for using the mails to defraud, the police say. When arrested he refused to talk.

Fifty-two Chicago business executives will deliver free lectures on every important phase of business Tuesday and Thursday of this week at the Y. M. C. A. school of commerce, 19 South La Salle street. These lectures will form the opening exercises of the spring semester.

Two sets of lectures will be given each evening, the first at 6 o'clock and the second at 7:55 o'clock.

Topics will include advertising, sales management, business letter writing, production management, accounting, and real estate. Aid to young men in selecting vocations is one of the objects of the course, according to H. F. Hancox, director of the school.

Auto Assn. Fights Against Proposed Tax on Gas

Opposition to the proposed gasoline tax was almost unanimous yesterday at the annual meeting of the Illinois State Automobile association. The fight on the pending bill was placed in the hands of the association's board of governors. Gov. Small, it was stated, had told a member of the association that he is only slightly in favor of the bill. Theodore J. Schmitz, president of the Elgin Motor club, was reelected president of the association. Samuel Kraus of Chicago is first vice president and Henry Paulman of Chicago is treasurer.

SURRENDER OF RAISULI UNITES MOROCCO REBELS

Expect Move to Increase Spain's Difficulties.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MADRID, Jan. 31.—The surrender of Raisuli, the famous chieftain and religious ruler of Morocco, to the conquering forces of Abdel Krim, the powerful Riffian potentate—which seems confirmed by dispatches reaching Madrid from both Tetuan and Fez—is certain to have far reaching consequences in the future of Morocco and the Spanish policy in their zone.

RAISULI.

Instead of facing segregated bands of revolting natives, bound together only by resistance against Spain, it is expected that a union of Raisuli and Abdel Krim under one leadership will create a solid Riffian resistance, with the exception of the Ajama tribes, a warlike race, who will resist to the end the Spaniards and Riffians alike.

Raisuli a Prisoner.

Raisuli, it is believed certain, is a practical prisoner in his holy city of Tasrout, where his sons and nephew, Ali Ben, also are subdued under guards of Abdel Krim.

With Raisuli's fall dies a tradition which was a strong influence over the Riffian tribes, for in addition to wielding a powerful temporal sway he was also Allah's chosen representative, and his submission is giving Abdel Krim incalculable support. Instead of having Raisuli as an untrustworthy, treacherous ally, Spain now faces to the east a growing unity of the Riffian forces, encouraged by real and imagined successes against Spain as well as conquests of other tribes.

Following the Spanish retreat Abdel Krim, who has the ambition of becoming sultan of Spanish Morocco, turned toward the only remaining native power—Raisuli — whose illness and continued rumors of his death aroused hopes of his surrender.

March on Stronghold.

Profiting by the Spanish withdrawal, Abdel Krim gathered all his available forces to march upon Raisuli's capital, which was occupied after bloody fighting in the region of Beni Aros, where Abdel Krim's forces gained control of the heights dominating the Tasrout plains.

The future policy of Spain depends much on the final outcome of the native conflict. Some reports brand the entire affair as a ruse covering an alliance between Abdel Krim and Raisuli, but opinion in Madrid is inclined to believe Raisuli's submission is real, and, if true, it marks the disappearance of a great historic figure in Moroccan history, as well as the opening of a new situation of great importance.

LACK OF FUNDS FACES JUVENILE WORKERS IN 1925

At the close of a successful year the Juvenile Protective association finds itself confronted with a serious financial condition, according to reports read yesterday at the annual meeting at the City club.

The death of many of the older and most generous contributors to the society's treasury is cited as the main reason for the dwindling funds. Another is the enlarging of the scope of work and the handling of an increased number of cases. Unless financial assistance is forthcoming from some quarter, it is probable that the work of the society will be seriously hampered this year.

One of the most significant accomplishments in 1924 is the change effected in public dance halls, where approximately 125,000 young people seek recreation each week. A most satisfactory and encouraging spirit on the part of the managers of ballrooms is reported; attractive music, surroundings, and entertainment having replaced the discouraging conditions formerly prevalent.

Wayne Hummer of La Salle, Ill., has been elected general chairman of the board of governors of the second annual Illinois Products exposition to be held Oct. 8 to 17 in Chicago, it was announced yesterday.

WAYNE HUMMER.

He is president of the Illinois Bankers' association and was active as a downstate worker in the creation of last year's successful exposition at the American Exposition palace.

George Woodruff of the National Bank of the Republic, general chairman last year, was elected chairman of the 1925 finance committee; George B. Foster of the Commonwealth Edison company was made vice chairman; Lawrence H. Whiting of the Boulevard Bridge bank was made treasurer of the exposition.

WOMEN BUSY ON PLANS FOR THEIR WORLD FAIR HERE

Chicago Will Be Its Permanent Home.

New York, Jan. 31. — [Special.] — New York women discussed with Mrs. Medill McCormick of Chicago at a luncheon in the Ritz-Carlton today the part they will play in the women's world's fair in Chicago, April 18 to 25. It was decided that they will direct the arts and professions exhibits.

MRS. MEDILL McCORMICK.

"No, we're not glorifying the American girl," Mrs. McCormick explained. "The value of the exhibition will be educational. Women don't know how to form their business contacts. We want to show them—particularly those of the younger generation—the fields that are open to them.

"What we want to show is not so much a quantity of women's work, but the achievement of women in American life. The exhibition will be annual. It will always stay in Chicago."

President Coolidge was so enthusiastic over the plan when Mrs. McCormick called on him last week, she said, that he called her back when she rose to go and stretched a ten minute interview to forty minutes.

After next year it is planned to extend the display to show the work of women in other countries.

"We don't know all that the women in our own country are doing," Mrs. McCormick said. "We want to know that, and afterwards we want to know about women in other countries. Lady Astor wanted to have an exhibition in England like this one, but we told her the idea was patented and she will have to come over here."

Mrs. McCormick is general executive of the fair.

FULL Exchange PRIVILEGE in SIX Months

We Add 40¢ to Your Dollar

That's virtually what we do. Underpriced at $1,350.00, the Lyon & Healy Apartment Grand is now only $995.00. It is only one of the values—highest quality for lowest price—that are unequaled today. Thousands of homes testify to the goodness of Lyon & Healy Pianos. Our position in Chicago is such that we cannot make extravagant claims. Now that we do make statements such as the preceding ones we do it with the feeling that readers will recognize the desirability of our offering. Sixty years of selling pianos give us a background of serving which contains no event as inviting or genuine as this one. To come here is really to be able to judge, comparatively, piano values. We have the largest and most varied display in the city. Instruments of all types at a wide range of prices offer many helpful suggestions to the inexperienced buyer. No obligation is implied by your call.

Deliveries made at once. You need pay down only a nominal sum to cover our cartage costs. Freight charges are prepaid within a radius of 100 miles of Chicago.

On pianos selected during this month you may obtain special term arrangements in which to pay. Generous allowance on old pianos taken in part exchange.

Every Piano New and Modern-Fully Guaranteed

Our 1925 manufacturing policy — concentrating on fewer models — makes this great sale possible. Values are truly without equal. Since 1864 we have sold pianos in Chicago and never before (do we remember) did circumstances bring about such piano bargains on such a great scale in the height of the season. Over 400 brand-new, latest models crowd our sales floors and factory. They must be moved and will be as soon as women are acquainted with our offerings.

You can buy without hesitancy. These are not obsolete models. Twenty years from today you would take the greatest pride in a beautiful piano bought in this sale and congratulate yourself on your foresight and shrewdness. Now you can give your family the lasting joy of one of these beautiful pianos. The price is no more than you usually pay for a used piano. Yet you obtain an instrument exquisite in tone and design and notable for durable construction.

Our Home to Yours

Because we are manufacturers, these prices are possible. Being in such a position—with a stock of instruments on hand and an urgent demand for floor space and factory personnel to handle a new program of production—there was only one thing to do. By publishing these prices we feel we will increase the number of our friends and ultimately recover any reduced volume of business through this sale.

Over 400 Pianos to Choose From

The display is in three groups. Each is admirable for artistic designing, beautiful tone and genuine worth. There is a piano here for the modest purse without sacrifice in musical quality. 30c daily, less than the cost of going to the movies, will bring you a beautiful piano.

Pianos that fire the enthusiasm!

Lyon & Healy Apartment Grand

One is reminded by it of a rare bit of statuary, so graceful is this piano. Designed for the requirements of the modern apartment, it occupies no more space than an upright. Yet it possesses all the beauty and charm for which the grand piano has been noted. The cases are finely conceived and free of features which changes and fashions in home furnishings render obsolete. Years hence will find the Apartment Grand lending distinctive elegance to the room which contains it. The tone is appealing in its sweetness and sustaining power. There is ample volume to it. The action is very responsive. Certain features, notably the Junior Unfolding Pedals, mark the Apartment Grand as the piano design for the modern home. There is a choice of several styles in mahogany and walnut.

Washburn Player Pianos

With the man and woman who love music but are unskilled in it, this piano finds favor. They can play their favorite selections, putting into them their own interpretations.

The expression control, only one of many features of the Washburn Player, makes this possible. Then, too, it is a joy to play this instrument. Pedalling is light, quick and responsive. You may play for hours without tiring. Full 88-note player. The tone is full-bodied, rich and clear. The case design is beautiful and the construction is of lasting goodness. Throughout the world the Washburn is noted for unusual durability. Choice of mahogany, oak or walnut.

Reproducing Grand

This beautiful instrument replays the performances of scores of the greatest pianists. It brings to your home their masterful playing, executed with technical perfection and filled with poetic feeling. Each individual touch is reproduced. This superb piano presents the very personality of the pianist for your enjoyment. It plays itself, rewinds the roll and stops itself. It also brings you the best in popular and dance music played in fascinating manner. All you need do is to insert the music roll and push the starting lever. Let us play it for you. Come in—no obligation thus incurred. Period designs (Apartment Grand) in mahogany and walnut.

ONE MORE SLAIN IN HERRIN WAR; ASK ARMY RULE

Lobby of Leading Hotel Is Tragedy Scene.

gram to Adjt. Gen. Carlos E. Black at Springfield:

"Deeper trouble now on at Herrin. Myself and Chief of Police Walker at Herrin fully believe that martial law in the city of Herrin is the only solution of the trouble. Quick action is necessary, and only martial law will avail anything."

Sheriff Galligan took Harry Walker and the patrolman under his protection in his bomb proof jail and Chief Walker returned to Herrin. Galligan has repeatedly called on the state for troops in time of trouble. This is the first time he has asked for martial law, which supersedes the authority of all local officers.

Wants 100 Soldiers.

"There are 500 armed klansmen in Herrin. The police and my forces are powerless," Galligan said later. "I want 100 soldiers sent here to disarm every klansman in Herrin. Then, maybe, between the police and my men we can take care of them."

Galligan is strongly anti-klan. For this reason it has been said by his enemies in Herrin that his action today was unjustified and his request was merely in reprisal for the murder of his chief deputy, Ora Thomas.

In reply to this Galligan points to a proclamation he issued this morning before the Herrin chief had seen him in which he pleaded for the assistance of all law abiding citizens, friends and enemies alike, in a campaign of "lawful" law enforcement, promising to be governed entirely by facts and not to be influenced by former prejudices.

Denies He Will Resign.

In the statement the sheriff said he will not resign his office and announces he will not fill the deputyship made vacant by the death of Ora Thomas.

"It is not my desire to antagonize any one," the statement said, "or by word or deed aggravate an overheated situation.

"It is my earnest hope that the citizens of Williamson county will assist me in carrying out the law through due process. I am the duly elected sheriff of Williamson county and positively will not resign my office.

"Some people have insisted in usurping the powers of my office and raids have been made by persons who had no lawful authority to make arrests.

Capable to Govern.

"We have an opportunity to show the world that Williamson county is capable of self-government, also to see that all laws are enforced without preference. I regret to state that some citizens seem to think that the prohibition law is the only law to be enforced, and some have violated other laws in their zeal to enforce the prohibition law."

The sheriff then defends his record as a peace officer and adds:

"Let us have more brains and fewer bullets."

The klan situation in Herrin presents many new aspects. Chief Walker and his police force, formerly stanch klansmen, left the organization last August following a battle in Smith's garage in which seven were killed, and are now aligned with the antis. No reason has ever been given for their action, the chief's own explanation being a cryptic "I was tired of the klan and its acts."

The abruptness of their change of attitude is remarkable. At the time of the August battle, Walker and his force were openly with the klan, arrayed against Galligan and his county officials. Patrolman Lisenby was regarded as a lieutenant of Young. But in last Saturday's battle, klansmen say, Lisenby fired the shot which, by several minutes preceded the main battle and which, klansmen say, was a decoy to get Young into the European hotel where he and Thomas with two others were killed.

And with the death of Young last Saturday his mantle fell on Smith, identified with the hooded order since its inception here and owner of the garage where the battle was fought in August.

Not Another Young.

But Smith possesses nothing of the popular conception of a gun fighter. He has none of the egotistic bravado of Young, none of his love for melodrama.

He is blue eyed, mild mannered, and except when aroused has a cheery word for every one.

The verdict of the jury that investigated the shooting Saturday placed blame only on the dead. It decided that Young and Thomas had killed each other.

The decision leaves the killing of Edward Forbes and Homer Warren, klansmen, the other victims, unexplained. It was declared; however, that the wounds indicated Forbes had been killed by shots fired from above his head. The klan faction insisted the shots came from ambush in an upper floor of the European hotel.

Glenn Young's youthful widow contributed her bit today at the final session of the inquest.

Says Ora Threatened Young.

Mrs. Young's story was similar to that of Mrs. Thomas, who related her final meeting in life with her husband. As Thomas had been threatened with death on the day of the shooting by Young, so also Young had felt the sting of the deputy's hatred, Mrs. Youngs' testimony revealed.

"'I met Thomas today and he made a grab for his gun,'" Mrs. Young said her husband told her.

"'I warned him,'" Young said, according to the widow, "'but he merely glared at me and walked away.'"

GROUND IS BROKEN FOR GREAT MEDICAL CENTER IN NEW YORK

New York, Jan. 31.—Ground was broken today for a $10,000,000 fourteen story building which is to form the nucleus for the New York Medical Center, which eventually will cover a twenty-two acre site in the vicinity of Broadway and 168th street, Manhattan.

The first shovelful of earth was turned by Edward S. Harkness, whose mother, Mrs. Stephen V. Harkness, donated the medical center site to Columbia university and the Presbyterian hospital, under whose joint auspices the institution will be conducted.

Other buildings to be added to the center will be a psychiatric institute and hospital, maternity, children's eye, ear, nose, and throat, urologic and neurologic hospitals, dental college, nurses, social and public health workers' schools.

ASKS CONGRESS TO SIFT CHICAGO WATER PROBLEM

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—A resolution calling for an investigation of the sanitary district by congress was introduced in the house late this afternono by Representative Leonidas C. Dyer [Rep., Mo.], ranking Republican member of the judiciary committee. The resolution, which was referred to the committee on rules, asks that the inquiry be conducted by the judiciary committee.

REPRESENTATIVE L. C. DYER.

The introduction of the resolution at this time is significant in that it follows by a day the meeting held here by the Great Lakes Navigation conference, an organization of attorneys and other officials from the seven lake states which are fighting a withdrawal of more than 1,000 cubic feet of water per second from Lake Michigan at Chicago.

Action Not Requested.

Dyer insists, however, that no requests have been made for such a resolution, and that he took the action on his own initiative after reading some of the testimony in regard to water diversion before the rivers and harbors committee.

The resolution, coming from a representative from St. Louis, evoked surprise, inasmuch as the president of the Mississippi Valley association, which helped fight the sanitary district's case in the Supreme court, is a resident of that city. Mr. Dyer said he had read the recent Supreme court decision, and was interested in the matter solely from the standpoint of possibilities of "a typhoid epidemic in St. Louis and other Mississippi river towns."

Might Cause Typhoid.

It was suggested that there would be greater danger of typhoid epidemics in St. Louis if the water diversion at Chicago were reduced.

"That may be so," he said, "and if that is the case I want that developed too."

There is little likelihood that the resolution will meet with favorable action at the hands of the rules committee, which is sidetracking everything controversial at this late stage in the session.

DIES OF BLOOD POISONING.

QUALITY OF U. S. PRODUCTS WINS COLOMBIA TRADE

Yankee Salesmen Getting the Business.

BY JOSEPH PIERSON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BALBOA, Panama Canal Zone, Jan. 5.—[By Mail.]—The constant stream of commercial travelers coming here tell of an unusually profitable year in Colombia, with money plentiful in the country as the result of a heavy coffee crop which brought good prices. But best of all these travelers tell of the triumph of the new American selling methods which are winning a large proportion of Colombia's business from German and English competitors.

Since the war American firms have been sending salesmen, born in Spain, to Colombia, as well as other Central and American countries. These men, naturalized Americans, have been well trained in American methods.

They comport themselves with all the jaunty alertness and energy of the American, but they have the great advantage over their rivals of understanding thoroughly the Spanish psychology. Consequently they are getting the business.

Buy U. S. Locomotives.

While German salesmen are intrepid and brave any distance, delay or hardship in the interior to get business they have a handicap in not having the quality products of the Americans. An instance of this may be cited in the case of two railway locomotives rusting away in shops in Buenaventura because of poor materials used in their construction. Baldwin engines are now being used chiefly on the Colombian railways.

And it is the same with other products; German manufacturers do not seem able to set the same standard they did before the war.

Colombia has sufficient natural resources to support itself without aid from the rest of the world, and only a small part of these resources are being developed. Colombians now seem hesitant to grant concessions to foreigners.

No System on Railroads.

One of the principal handicaps to the country is the poor railway systems. The railways begin and end nowhere, and in Cartagena and Buenaventura it is even said that they run up and down easily avoided hills in order to cross properties of politicians. It is hoped that within a few years a railway will connect Buenaventura, a Pacific port, with the lines about Bogota, the capital. It now takes from five to ten days by mule to reach the Bogota lines from the small Buenaventura system.

Inadequate transportation is adding greatly to the cost of coffee production. Most of the coffee grown in the Bogota section, considered among the best in the world, is boated down the Magdalena river to Barranquilla. From the Medellin section, another rich area, the produce is sent via a cable aerial railway to the Magdalena, but as the railway approaches Medellin year by year more of the product is being sent out of the country from Buenaventura.

Although German commerce is losing out, German immigrants in Colombia are successful and they are playing a large part in the development of the country.

HOUSE TO TAKE UP PRESIDENT'S FARM AID PLAN

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Hearings on the administration farm legislation recommended by the President's agricultural conference will commence Monday before the house committee on agriculture.

Members of the committee met today to plan a program in connection with the matter. It was decided to invite members of the President's conference to appear before the committee, after which others interested in the subject will be heard.

Republican members of the committee indicated a purpose to make every effort to obtain coöperative marketing legislation as proposed by the administration at this session. Democrats on the committee showed a hostile attitude.

The recommendation of the President's conference came up for discussion incidentally on the floor of the house during the day. Representative Jones [Dem., Tex.] criticized the report, declaring that it dealt in generalities and failed to provide an effective program for meeting the needs of agriculture.

Representative Tincher [Rep., Kas.], a member of the committee on agriculture, defended the President's conference and predicted that the enactment of legislation recommended would be brought about at this session.

William Thomas Taken as Bomber of Tire Shop

William Thomas, 3042 Flournoy street, was arrested yesterday charged with placing the bomb which partly wrecked the storage battery shop of L. E. Gribbens, 53 East 29th street, Thursday morning. Thomas, it is said, is an organizer for an association of tire dealers.

Aunt Gets Custody of June Nufer

GET YOUR CITY AUTO TAG BEFORE FEB. 7, WARNING

One hundred and ninety-five license inspectors, with the coöperation of the police department, will start Feb. 7 to round up all automobile drivers delinquent in paying their 1925 city vehicle license fee. The announcement of the drive was made yesterday by William Connors, superintendent of licenses.

"I believe we have given auto owners ample time to secure their 1925 licenses," Connors declared. "In spite of this there are thousands of cars being driven about the streets with neither city nor state licenses for this year. Drivers of all autos without the new city license will be haled into court."

Gets Prison Term for Death of 3 by Auto

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 31. — John Strothenck, 47, today was sentenced in Criminal court to two to twenty-one years' imprisonment for manslaughter. He was found guilty by a jury Thursday of causing the death of Mrs. Chester Haase and her two small children in an auto accident last fall.

Home Decided

The custody of June Nufer, 6 year old orphan, was awarded yesterday to her aunt, Mrs. Margaret Harvacan, after a three cornered legal battle before County Judge John D. Biggs. The other two contestants were the child's grandmother, Mrs. Mary Thomet, 1102 West Monroe street, and her grand-uncle, Joseph Hilmos, 3438 North Kilbourne avenue.

In making his decision Judge Biggs said: "Mrs. Thomet undoubtedly would do all in her power to make the little girl happy. But I doubt that it would be good for her to be brought up in a boarding house.

"Mr. Hilmos can give her a better home, as far as wealth is concerned. But wealth does not mean everything.

"So I think it would be best that she live in the home of her aunt. It may be a modest home, but June is perfectly happy there and the family has learned to love her."

BRITAIN'S HOPES FOR REDUCTION IN TAXES FADE

Experts Tell Churchill It Can't Be Done.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Although absolute stagnation apparently features the British governmental affairs, feverish activities which will become apparent when parliament meets next month are going on behind the scenes. The Baldwin government is now trying to settle its policy on two important questions, the foreign and domestic policies, and its decisions cannot be long delayed.

The domestic problem is that of the budget, which must be introduced in March. Winston Churchill is determined to mark his occupancy of the chancellorship of the exchequer with a bold reduction in taxation, but he is up against the treasury experts, who tell him it cannot be done. He started with the idea of cutting a shilling per pound off income taxes, and he is now pleading with the experts for sixpence.

Expenses Must Be Met.

They tell him sternly that expenses must be met, and that it would be fatal to cut taxes for four or five years, by which time they hope trade will be booming and it will also be possible to reduce the debt interest charged by refunding.

Mr. Churchill is urging that the reduction in taxation will so stimulate trade that the net return will be as large as ever. The cabinet must finally decide, and at this moment it is divided about equally between the cautious view of the experts and the daring political view of Mr. Churchill and his supporters.

The foreign problem is really two facts in one and are, debts and security. The French are pressing for some settlement of interallied debts which will let them out in a large part, if not all, and for a settlement of the security question. The British do not want to settle the debt question now, because they believe that France will have less excuse to plead for cancellation in a year or so, and the British politicians also are not in a hurry to settle the security question.

Asquith Reelected.

An inquest on the Liberal party was finished today and a jury consisting of delegates of all the local associations all over the country has decided that it is not dead after all.

The work done at the inquest was the reelection of Herbert H. Asquith as leader of the party, thus postponing for a time former Prime Minister Lloyd George's ambition to lead the little band of Liberal members of parliament in the house of commons.

SCHOOLS PLEDGE HELP IN DRIVE AGAINST SMOKE

Engineers Ordered to Aid City Committee.

Four hundred engineer-custodians of the Chicago public schools met yesterday in the McKinley High school and pledged their operation in eliminating the smoke evil.

The engineers' action came in the form of a resolution introduced by James E. Dohney, secretary of the International Union of Steam and Operating engineers, after the meeting had listened to all phases of the smoke abatement campaign from city officials and John Howatt, chief engineer of the board of education. The meeting was called by John E. Byrnes, business manager of the board.

Mr. Howatt told the engineers they would have to go into the boiler rooms and instruct the firemen that unless smoke was discontinued they would be suspended at schools were violations were observed.

Only 7 Per Cent Violators.

"The purpose of this meeting," he said, "is to impress upon you the necessity of getting behind the movement to clear atmospheric conditions and to have you take a personal interest in smoke violations in your schools."

Mr. Howatt explained that while only 7 per cent of the system's 300 buildings had been violators, smoke from school buildings was a greater nuisance than other violators, as the schools in most cases are located in residential districts.

Frank A. Chambers, chief smoke inspector for the city, told the meeting that in the opinion of a group of prominent physicians the smoke evil was one of the worst detriments to the health of the people.

Plead for Civic Pride.

Howard A. Evans of the city smoke abatement committee appointed by Mayor Dever asked the engineers to take civic pride in keeping the atmosphere clear.

By their resolution the engineers assumed the responsibility of the health of 400,000 pupils and teachers in the schools and declared that everything providing for their health and comfort reflects credit and appreciation upon the engineers' organization.

DIES FROM INFECTION IN HAND.

John Lenacker, 46 years old, 3554 South Hayne avenue, a switchman for the Rock Island railroad, died yesterday from an infection he received in a hand while at work several weeks ago.

ASK MINNESOTA BAR FOR REDS IN HIGH SCHOOLS

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—Communistic activities in the high schools of Minnesota are attacked in the biennial report of the state board of visitors, filed late today with Gov. Theodore Christianson.

The report assails the organization of branches of "the Young Workers' league," and the state legislature is asked to enact a law prohibiting activities of all organizations within the state which "through organized effort spread instructions aiming to incite the overthrow of existing American governments."

AL SMITH TO SPEAK MAY 16 AT DINNER HERE

Gov. Al Smith of New York yesterday sent word to Maj. William Adkins, president of the New York State society of Chicago, that he would attend the annual dinner of that organization to be held May 16.

A memorial tablet for William B. Ogden, first mayor of Chicago and born in New York, will be set in the Newberry library as part of the day's program.

A scholarship contest is now being held in the Art institute for the best design for the tablet.

RUSSELL SCOTT TO LEARN OF HIS FATE TOMORROW

Russell T. Scott, the dapper holdup man, sentenced to hang for shooting to death 19 year old Joseph Maurer, drug clerk, will know his fate tomorrow. If the appeal for a new trial is denied the date of execution will probably be set as Feb. 20.

Judge Thomas J. Lynch yesterday refused to continue the case for another week on application of Attorney Leslie Whalen and the aged father of the confessed slayer. He declared there has already been too much delay.

All through the hearing Scott was sulky and refused to look at the judge. The bailiff ordered him to face the court, but Scott told him to mind his own business.

Many rumors have been heard that when the date of the hanging is pronounced Robert Scott, a brother, who has never been apprehended, would appear in court and take the blame of the murder on his own shoulders.

Roumania Orders Yankee Preacher to Leave Country

BUCHAREST, Roumania, Jan. 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Roumanian authorities have ordered the Rev. Daniel Hurley, an American citizen, to leave the country within fifteen days. No charges are preferred against him. Mr. Hurley was sent here from the United States about a year ago by the Southern Baptist mission board as a teacher in the seminary organized in Bucharest by the American board. It is thought possible the orthodox church may have objected to his teachings as likely to create religious differences and threaten the dominance of the orthodox faith.

Here's the Striking New Nash Sedan That's Capturing the Country

Wherever it's shown and wherever it's driven, this new Advanced Six Sedan is creating a sensation.

It is a car of such exceptional beauty and quality that the low price Nash has placed upon it leaves it without a rival in value.

The Nash-perfected valve-in-head six motor produces a great volume of flexible and vibrationless power.

The Nash-designed 4-wheel brakes—safest, simplest and most practical in the industry—bring the car to a stop from highest speed almost instantly with superb ease and smoothness. There's no swaying—no swerving—for they are fully equalized on all four wheels.

The special Nash easy-steering mechanism for exclusive use with Nash brakes and full balloon tires gives the car a new and delightful freedom from driving effort.

Doors are extra broad and the body craftsmanship of notable excellence. Come in and see it, note all its features and drive it today.

This sale is an event of the utmost importance in the furniture world.

Leading manufacturers throughout the country have contributed to it their surplus stocks and exhibition lines. For months our buyers have combed the market and placed orders for furniture to be made in quantities and marketed at a close margin at this time.

They also have gone over our own stock very carefully and have made radical reductions on many patterns and have put special sale discounts on a large part of the new things.

This concentration of effort on the sale results in savings too important to be ignored by anyone to whom economy is a consideration.

ONE EVANSTON WEDDING TURNS OUT TO BE TWO

Guests who had expected to attend only one wedding yesterday at the home of Mrs. E. J. Cronkheit, 1745 Hinman avenue, Evanston, were surprised to discover there were two brides.

Both of them were Mrs. Cronkheit's granddaughters, the children of the late Arthur W. Underwood, at one time a leader of the Chicago bar. The engagements of both girls had been announced. The wedding announced for yesterday was that of Miss Eunice S. Underwood to John G. Palache, a writer and artist of New York, who is making a study of the life and writings of Theophile Gautier.

The unexpected wedding was that of Miss Josephine Underwood to Davis Merwin of Bloomington, Ill. The double ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Arthur Rogers of St. Mark's Episcopal church, Evanston.

TRAIN KILLS UNIDENTIFIED WOMAN.

An unidentified woman was instantly killed last night by an Illinois Central suburban train at 76th street and Exchange avenue. According to the police report, the woman was between 35 and 40 years of age, was well dressed, and had bobbed hair.

These Are the Men Who Serve You

Honest ambition deserves sympathy, but when it leads a man to attempt a task for which he has not qualified himself by study and experience, he does not deserve encouragement.

An honest man is not only willing to train himself, but expects to do so before asking to be accepted as a skilled lawyer, carpenter, doctor, bricklayer, plumber, etc.

Yet, many people accept the offer of an undertaker's service without knowing how little experience he has had in his profession. Often, when it is too late, they discover that he is a bungler. He may, indeed, have been established for several years without having had enough professional work to do to teach him the things that a funeral director must know to be capable and efficient.

Caskets as Low as $25

It is a matter of pride with the Skeeles-Biddle organization that each funeral entrusted to us, no matter how modest, is personally directed by one of the three members of our firm—either Mr. George W. Skeeles, Mr. John W. Biddle or Mr. F. Oliver Rockefeller.

Not only have we proved that burial caskets can be furnished for one-half the prices charged elsewhere, but we have perfected a quality of service that sets a new standard, while our equipment and facilities are second to none in the United States.

The atmosphere of refinement and dignity that characterizes our two beautiful memorial chapels contrasts sharply with the crude equipment of an ordinary neighborhood funeral chapel. Not one penny is ever charged to any client for the use of them, nor do we permit them to be used for any other purpose than that for which they were especially designed.

Skeeles-Biddle limousines are all of one kind—the largest, roomiest, most richly upholstered and costly cars used by any undertaker in Chicago. Yet, they cost no more than the ramshackle automobiles supplied by many other funeral directors.

A telephone call will bring a member of our firm to any part of the city instantly.

FRENCH EMBASSY FURNITURE GOES WITH JUSSERAND

Daeschner Hasn't a Stick; Takes an Apartment.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Emile Daeschner, new French ambassador, is unable to take up his residence at the French embassy in 16th street because most of the furniture was taken away by his predecessor, Jules Jusserand, who sailed this week for France after twenty-two years' service in Washington.

EMILE DAESCHNER [Kadel & Herbert Photo.]

The greater part of the furniture was the personal property of M. Jusserand. Arriving here with his wife and two daughters, M. Daeschner took an apartment near the embassy building.

Debated in French Chamber.

His situation, according to a press dispatch from Paris, was the occasion for a debate in the French chamber of deputies today and brought from Premier Herriot a statement that the new ambassador would receive fine French furniture of antique style to furnish the embassy. But it will take some time to reach Washington.

The French government has a large supply of residential furniture in stock and it is from this that the embassy in Washington will be supplied. Premier Herriot told a questioner in the chamber of deputies that before building a new embassy in Washington it would first be necessary to refit the present embassy.

Like Fate of U. S. Envoys.

Before the beginning of the world war in 1914, the French government purchased a site for an embassy building in Washington. The war, however, prevented appropriation of any money for construction.

The situation affecting the new French ambassador has attracted attention here by reason of its analogy to the conditions confronting American embassies and legations in foreign countries. J. P. Morgan some years ago gave to the United States a large residence in London for use as an embassy, but congress has failed to appropriate money for furnishing it and American ambassadors are obliged to rent furnished houses for residences.

PLAYS WITH GUN; IS DEAD.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Frederick Grams, 14, accidentally killed himself Friday night while examining a shotgun. The boy's head was blown off. He lived with his guardian Ernest Langer.

WIDOW OF YANK, BENT ON KILLING EINSTEIN, HELD

Placed in Asylum by Berlin Police.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Jan. 31.—Accused of illegal entry into Germany for the purpose of assassinating Prof. Albert Einstein, Germany's greatest scientist, Mrs. Marie Dickson, formerly of New York, who on Dec. 13 was arrested in Paris for an alleged plot to kill the bolshevik ambassador, Leonid Krassin, was arrested here today and placed in the psycopathic ward of the insane asylum.

Mrs. Dickson, who is 40, was born Marie Eugeniva, of Russian extraction. She is the widow of a New Yorker well known in Paris as a writer of fiction and as a newspaper worker.

Maid Gets Police.

The arrest came through Mrs. Einstein's quick wit. The savant's wife, alarmed by the strange talk of Mrs. Dickson, suddenly connected the woman's talk with a series of threatening letters which the professor has been receiving for six months. Mrs. Einstein said she and the professor engaged Mrs. Dickson in conversation while a maid was sent for the police.

Mrs. Dickson has an hallucination, it is said, that Einstein is the czar's greatest espionage agent, Azeff, in disguise. Azeff has been dead for many years, but Mrs. Dickson has a grudge against all Russians and she believed that Azeff was alive and was calling himself Einstein.

"The woman arrived from Paris yesterday," said Mrs. Einstein tonight. "She came direct to our apartment, gained admittance, but my servant demanded her business. She insisted on a personal interview with my husband regarding his theory of relativity. I was surprised by the wild looks and ragged condition of the visitor, and I thought of the series of death threats that my husband has been receiving.

Gets Many Threats.

"Hardly a week passes without my husband getting a death threat from the Fascisti, or anti-Semites, or plain cranks, but we pay no attention to them."

In Paris Mrs. Dickson was arrested by special French detectives outside the Russian embassy while carrying a revolver, and she said she wanted to kill Krassin. The German police will test her sanity and then will probably deport her to America.

30 Boys Seized Attending Evanston Show on 1 Ticket

In defiance of the laws of Evanston thirty small boys used one ticket to enter the new Evanston theater yesterday and witness the show from the balcony. The boy who bought the ticket opened a fire exit and the others entered by way of a fire escape. Charles Harvey, the assistant manager, called the police, and Sergt. George Peska captured all thirty. They were released after a lecture.

CHIEF OF POLICE FIGHTS STATE TO HELP LINCOLN

Witness and Prosecutor Clash at Trial.

BY MORROW KRUM.

Geneva, Ill., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Bitter debate developed between State's Attorney Charles L. Abbott and Chief Frank Michels of Aurora today when Michels was the first witness for the defense of Warren J. Lincoln, accused of the murder of his wife and her brother, Byron Shoup.

The clash came on cross-examination of Michaels before Judge William J. Fulton. The witness on direct examination had said the defendant is insane and was insane when he killed his wife and brother and put their heads in the cement block.

Personal Clash Arises.

"Why do you say Lincoln is insane?" Abbott asked.

"Because I have a conscience," Michels answered. "That's why I am here saying he's crazy."

"You have a strong feeling against the prosecution in this case, haven't you?" Abbott asked.

"No—only against you," the witness said.

"Did you call Capt. Wirz of the police department a —— —— louse this morning?" Abbott queried.

"Yes, I said I wanted him to tell the truth, and he hasn't," was the reply.

Wirz had testified for the state.

"Well, you and I never had any trouble, have we?" Abbott asked.

"Yes, plenty of it," Michels snapped. "Say, I have been testifying in murder cases for thirty years, and this is the first time I have ever been on the defense. I am there now because I believe the defendant is insane and because I have a conscience."

Michels had told of Lincoln's many confessions.

Call Each Other Soft Headed.

"Did it ever occur to you, chief, that Lincoln thought you had a soft spot in your head?" Abbott asked.

"No, but there's a large soft spot in your head," the witness said.

"And Lincoln is crazy?" Abbott asked.

"He is," Michels insisted.

During this argument Lincoln frowned and squirmed about in his chair. His best friend, according to his own statement, was there on the witness stand calling him a crazy man and he didn't like it.

"I told Frank Michels I'd make him famous," Lincoln has said. "I told him I'd give him evidence of death, and I did. I told him alone where the heads were. I made him famous."

In his four hours on the witness stand, Chief Michels, the first witness for the defense, related the whole mysterious and sensational Lincoln case. Michels told of the fake kidnaping Lincoln staged two years ago, of Lincoln's arrest a year ago, and of the many and varied confessions the horticulturist has made.

Always Called Him Crazy.

"I knew he was insane from the start," the chief said.

During the session two alienists, Drs. Raymond Dowell and Ralph J. Hinton, appeared in the courtroom and were busy during the session taking notes. Both will testify for the state against Lincoln some time next week.

It is the first indication that the state is getting ready for the alienists the defense will put on the stand.

Many times during the session the state's witnesses have given testimony to indicate that Assistant State's Attornel J. Bruce Ammell and Capt. Otto Wirz of the Aurora police department were the ones who obtained the confessions from Lincoln.

Attorney Gunsul, for the defense, in questioning Chief Michels about the confessions, asked if either Wirz or Ammell were present when Lincoln talked.

"No," Michels said. "When Lincoln talked he talked to me."

Court adjourned late this afternoon until Monday morning. At that time the cross-examination of Chief Michels will be resumed.

FRED L. BREWER, WHO SET TRAIN SPEED RECORD, IS PENSIONED

FRED L. BREWER.

Fred L. Brewer, an engineer of the Rock Island railroad, who, in 1899 set the record for the run from Chicago to Rock Island, which has never been equaled, has been pensioned after nearly fifty years' service.

Mr. Brewer lives at 204 Burr Oak avenue, Blue Island. Since he established his record of 219 minutes for the 181 miles, including seven stops, he has been assigned the task of breaking in new passenger locomotives on that division.

When the railroad, in October, 1922, celebrated its seventy-fifth birthday, he was given the honor of piloting the train which reënacted the first run from Chicago to Joliet. His partner in the cab at that time was Charles Hayden of New York, chairman of the board of the road, who was given a special union card for that occasion.

DEMOCRAT COUP CUTS OFF FUNDS OF TARIFF BODY

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Democrats swept the Republican majority off its feet in the house this afternoon when by a whirlwind drive they struck from the independent offices bill the provision allowing $712,000 for support of the tariff commission. This, in effect, destroyed the tariff commission, but the advantage may be short lived, for the action was taken in committee of the whole and unless the Democrats can swing radical Republicans to their side when the vote on the bill actually comes in the house the commission will be restored by the majority.

As a rule La Follette men are opposed to the tariff commission and besides they are smarting under disciplinary speeches by Republican leaders. But today, although some of the insurgents voted with the Democrats in eliminating the provision, one of their number, Representative Browne [Rep., Wis.], sided with the regular Republicans.

It was a Republican move which started the melée. In the provision relating to the tariff commission there has been a proviso that commissioners could not sit in a case in which they or their families had financial interest. This afternoon Representative Chindblom [Rep., Ill.] moved successfully to strike this clause from the bill on the ground that it was legislation on an appropriation bill.

Representative Garner [Dem., Tex.] followed Mr. Chindblom by moving to strike out the entire section relating to the tariff commission and accomplished his purpose by a vote of 63 to 56.

AIR COMMERCE NEARING IN U. S., OFFICIAL FINDS

Wakening Public Interest Seen as Good Omen.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—While foreign countries heretofore have gone ahead of the United States in civil aviation, indications now point to greater progress in this country, according to P. E. D. Nagle, communication expert of the department of commerce.

"The closing months of 1924 saw a remarkable increase in the interest taken in aeronautics in the United States," says Mr. Nagle in a report today.

"A number of proposals for federal legislation, designed to develop American air services and to regulate them in the interest of the government and the general public have received consideration in congress and inquiries and comments from the public show a growing appreciation of the importance of this new means of transportation and communication.

Obstacles in America.

"Foreign countries, however, have progressed further than we in the adoption of definite national policies on aviation, especially in its commercial aspects. Most European governments have embarked on a program of financial aid to companies organized under their own laws and, in cases where no domestic company offered the service, to companies of foreign origin."

Mr. Nagle enumerates factors which, he says, have retarded the growth of American civil aviation.

"First, American operating costs are higher than those of any other large country," Mr. Nagle says. "Second, the United States has no government agency authorized to aid development of civil air navigation, nor to replace it. Third, no financial aid is given to the industry or any operating company by the government. Furthermore, there has been in the past a lack of interest on the part of the American public.

Reports Growing Interest.

"There are indications of a great change in the last few months, however, which has given an impetus to plans for developing American civil aeronautics that are bound to produce results.

"The extent of our own country, its physical characteristics, and its intimate contact with Canada, Mexico, and the West Indies, are such as to make air service highly desirable.

"The success of the transcontinental air mail operated by the postoffice and the general approval which has greeted its appearance indicate that the commercial aviation problem demands immediate solution, particularly since there exist none of the political, financial, and legal obstacles that have created difficulties for foreign countries."

Five Vestrymen Elected by Grace Episcopal Church

At the annual parish meeting of Grace Episcopal church, presided over by the pastor, the Rev. W. O. Waters, the following vestrymen were elected for the coming year: Dr. E. B. Norcross, E. L. Ryerson, Charles L. Schweppe, M. L. Curtis, and Frank Hibbard. David Evans and Gardiner Lathrop were elected wardens. Activity of parish members in supplying books to the patients in St. Luke's hospital has resulted in the purchase of a wheeled cart for the purpose.

IRON WORKERS' DEMAND FOR PAY BOOST REFUSED

Contractors Firm; Strike Not Likely.

Officials of the Structural Iron Workers' union were given a setback last night in this year's wage increase campaign when representatives of the Chicago Iron league flatly rejected the demands of the union for a wage boost of from $1.25 to $1.50 an hour.

The meeting between the union leaders and employers was held in the offices of the Building Construction Employers' association. All phases of the wage problem were discussed.

Arthur Evensen and Joseph Corr, business agents of the iron workers' organization, led the union delegation. Oscar W. Rosenthal represented the employers' side. Earlier in the day the iron workers held a mass meeting and decided a boost from the $1.25 to $1.50 an hour would be only fair. They pointed out this rate is now effective for plasterers, electricians, painters, and bricklayers, and that the iron workers, because of the hazardous occupation, should be entitled to a similar one.

No Strike in Sight.

The union leaders were then instructed to meet the employers and stand pat on the $1.50 an hour rate.

While negotiations ended abruptly, it doesn't mean a strike of ironworkers will be called immediately, if at all. The union's contract does not expire until June 1, but each year the wage rate is fixed before the first of February to give contractors ample time to bid on work a year in advance.

Still Chance for Settlement.

There is still a possibility of both sides agreeing before the expiration of the present contract. It was said this will depend largely on the amount of large construction work under progress in early May.

It was intimated a few days ago the contractors were willing to sign a wage pact at $1.37½ an hour. But this proposition fell upon deaf ears at the ironworkers' massmeeting. A few days ago the ornamental ironworkers, marble workers, and carpenters signed agreements at the $11 a day scale. It was also said the hoisters negotiated an agreement at the same rate.

3,000 Attend Huge Ball of American Legion Posts

One of the largest American Legion functions ever held in Chicago took place last night at the Congress hotel when the Theodore Roosevelt and Square posts entertained 3,000 guests at the annual ball. The feature of the evening was the "snake dance" led by County Treasurer P. J. Carr and the Forty and Eight club. Among the patrons and patronesses were Vice President Elect and Mrs. Charles G Dawes and Senator Elect and Mrs Charles S. Deneen.

Each North American portion of Roast Turkey is ample for 2 people —yet the price is only 75 or 85c

(depending on your preference for light or dark meat)

Although our price of 75 and 85 cents is far less than you must pay for a portion of roast turkey in other restaurants and hotels, we purposely make each portion so large that usually it is ample for two people.

This means that two people dining together here can each have a fine portion of Roast Turkey—with stuffing, giblet gravy and cranberry sauce—for less than 50 cents each. We don't believe it is possible to buy roast turkey at such a low price in any other dining-place. And we know that no matter how much more you pay you can't get anything finer.

And all food portions at the North American are big—usually enough to serve two people generously.

Doesn't this indicate that we are intent on giving you the greatest possible amount of quality food for the lowest prices, rather than on charging as much as we could get, based on the food prices in other first-class restaurants and hotels? And doesn't it prove that it pays to "serve yourself" here?

Among our other quality items at low prices are:

Halibut and Peas: —The portion is usually enough for two people 40c

Pork Tenderloin: 45c

Fried Premium Chicken: with bacon and cream gravy or giblet sauce. Dark meat 55c
White meat 65c

And for Breakfast:—

Honey Waffles: With 3 strips of bacon or Mickelberry's Old Farm sausage, butter and pure maple sap or honey 25c

Bacon and Eggs: 2 fresh eggs, fried in butter and 4 strips of bacon 30c

(To order from 7 a. m. to Midnight)

This is one restaurant where children are always welcome!

DRYS TO SEEK STATE BUREAU OF PROHIBITION

Proposed Bill Puts Small in a Dilemma.

BY FRANK BUTZOW.

Peculiar complications will bob up in the legislature when the Anti-Saloon league attempts to put through its bill to create the office of state prohibition commissioner.

In 1921 Gov. Small worked hand in hand with the league in an effort to pass the bill, which finally was defeated after a spectacular fight in the senate where ex-Senator John A. Wheeler, one of the governor's stalwarts, led the battle for Small and the league.

The governor four years ago had two well defined reasons for wanting the job created. It meant more patronage for him and it took the authority for issuing liquor permits and enforcing the state dry law away from Attorney General Brundage and gave those powers to the prohibition commissioner appointed by the governor.

Carlstrom Is Hit.

The patronage feature is left, but the new attorney general, Oscar E. Carlstrom, who would be hit this time, was nominated and elected as Small's running mate.

Legislators and onlookers are waiting to see how the governor performs when the bill comes back this time. It is being drafted by Frank B. Ebert, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, and will be introduced in a week or two.

Dry leaders have been told that the governor feels friendly to the idea of placing prohibition enforcement in Illinois under a state commissioner. The commissioner would preside over a new department of government at a salary of $6,000 a year.

Patronage to Governor.

The entire patronage of the office would fall to the governor, as he would have control over the commissioner, who would appoint the deputies, group chiefs, and field agents. The bill anticipates two deputy commissioners at $4,000, five group chiefs at $10 per diem, and twenty-five field agents at $6 a day for days on duty. All police powers of search and seizure, arrest, and the authority for liquor withdrawal permits are lodged in the commissioner.

Attorney General Carlstrom's attitude, it is believed, will have considerable to do with the governor's action. In addition to this the wets in the legislature have their knives whetted for anything that looks or sounds like more prohibition. These wets include Speaker Robert Scholes, whose election was dictated by the governor.

Some of the wets, including a group of Democrats, are in Springfield this time with repeal or modification of prohibition foremost in their minds, and regardless of combinations to go along with Small on other matters will never vote for a dry bill.

TRAIN K. OF C. MEMBERS TO DO BOY SCOUT WORK

Ninety-five Knights of Columbus representing councils in all parts of the city are concluding a preliminary course of training at Fort Sheridan to fit themselves for Boy Scout activities.

Organizing the Boy Scout troops in the various Catholic parishes of the city is part of the program planned for this year. A campaign for $160,000 will be carried on in the Chicago area beginning Feb. 11. T. V. McKian is chairman of the committee having the matter in hand for the knights.

FATHER COACHED HIS DAUGHTER TO STEAL; BOTH ARE ARRESTED

Angus Allen, who claims he is a stepson of Col. John Roberts, vice president of the Miller and Hart Packing company, was arrested again yesterday charged with thefts from a department store.

His arrest followed that of his 11 year old daughter Virginia. The police charged that a picture frame, on which the child was attempting to get a refund of $23 at a loop department store, had been stolen. The child was recognized by detectives, but insisted her name was Virginia King and that she had never heard of Allen.

After locking up the child, detectives returned to the vicinity of the store. They soon located Allen in a nearby cigar store. He is said to have admitted the charge against him and to have told the police he had coached the child to meet him with the money she was to obtain at the entrance of the Chicago Athletic association.

Allen gave his address as 1543 East 57th street. He and his wife were arrested last October in an apartment at 4603 Grand boulevard, charged with drug addiction and shoplifting. They were released by Judge Alfar M. Eberhart.

RULES STEVENS' ARREST LEGAL; PLACED IN JAIL

Walter Stevens, the gunman, was locked up in the Lake county jail at Waukegan yesterday after United States Commissioner James R. Glass had decided that his arrest on a federal warrant Friday was legal.

Stevens was arrested as he left the Joliet penitentiary after serving fifteen months. State Representative Lee O'Neil Brown, who appeared before the commissioner in Stevens' behalf, contended the arrest was illegal because Stevens, though out of the penitentiary, was still a ward of the state parole board.

Mr. Glass set next Monday as the date for a hearing on the removal of Stevens to Florida where he is wanted on a federal charge of violating the prohibition laws and on a state charge of murder.

When his attorney pleaded that it would distress the gunman to remain in the Cook county jail after he had become used to the comforts of life in the new penitentiary at Stateville, Mr. Glass ordered him locked up in the Waukegan jail.

BUCKET SHOP OPERATOR GIVEN TERM IN JOLIET

Bucket shop operation drew a prison sentence for the first time in the history of the state yesterday when Oddie and Mark A. Friedman, brothers, who operated a brokerage firm under the name of Freeman & Co., were sentenced to Joliet penitentiary for from one to ten years by Judge George Fred Rush. The charge was embezzlement.

Assistant State's Attorney Lewis N. Blumenthal, prosecuting the case, declared the Friedman brothers took $3,550 from the Accurate Device Manufacturing company to invest for it. The company is said to have been paid by Carl F. Mueller, secretary of the firm and formerly auditor of the Chicago Elks club.

SEARCH FOR DOROTHY JOHNSON.

Police yesterday were asked to search for Dorothy Johnson, 16 years old, 1565 East 63d street, who disappeared from her home Jan. 28.

CHRISTIANIZE U.S. AS AID TO WIN OTHERS IS URGED

Missionaries Point Way to Spread Religion.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—"The question of war, the treatment of other races and economic imperialism are not simply concerns of governments, but of the mission workers of the world," said Dr. R. E. Diffenderfer of New York, formerly of Chicago, in an address today at the foreign missions conference in the Washington municipal auditorium.

"We missionaries do not want to carry Christianity to non-Christian nations and then have our government neutralize our efforts by acting in an un-Christian way. America will influence other nations in favor of Christianity by what the government does more than by anything we may say.

Teaching of Foreign Students.

"Another concern of the church is the kind of teaching foreign students receive in our colleges in America. The time is past when a professor ought to be allowed to minimize religion as though it were a spent force. Unless professors are Christian in teaching and in practice students from China, Japan and India will return to their native countries with antagonism to Christianity, all the more influential because the false teachings have been acquired in a land supposedly Christian."

Dr. Harris E. Kirk of Baltimore, Md., declared it was a false premise to assume that Christianity and civilization are the same. "To assume," he said, "that even the civilization in the United States is identical with Christianity is to block the way to the understanding of the gospel.

Oriental Dislike for Christians.

"We must be prepared to confess that the oriental dislike for our civilization is well founded, that superficially it appears to him as ugly, hurried, without philosophical direction or moral control, and has too much of the flavor of this world.

"The east, with but few exceptions, is opposed to war. Gandhi is not only opposed to war, but to the use of machinery, for he looks on them both as controlled by the idea of force. In the western civilization we push levers and pull strings, but there is no creative education in the process, hence our discontent. In the east the eye, hand and mind work in the creative joys of manufacture.

"The idea has gone out that Christianity is a western religion. Northing is more misleading. Christianity is a world religion and fitted to all mankind."

The seizing of foreign lands by so-called Christian nations in order to enlarge their borders was denounced by Dr. James Endicott, Toronto.

SCARLET FEVER CURE FOUND TO CHECK DISEASE

By the use of Dochez serum, Dr. Francis G. Blanke of New Haven, Conn., has obtained remarkable results in the treatment of scarlet fever, even with severe and complicated cases, the American Medical association announced yesterday.

According to a statement issued by the association, thirty-four uncomplicated cases treated on or before the third day became afebrile and showed no symptoms of scarlet fever. Ten patients without complications treated after the fourth day seemed to recover within eighteen to thirty-six hours. Nine patients with complications treated before the third day were all convalescent within eighteen to forty-eight hours.

While the death rate among children is from 6 to 8 per cent, and as high as 18 per cent in complicated cases, of the twenty-eight cases observed by Dr. Blanke only one death resulted.

Opal—a new blend in Roofing colors · just the roof for a stucco home

Opal—a roof with the coloring of brown October leaves silhouetted against a deep blue sky.

Here is a note that's new in roofing beauty. To almost any home it would add attractiveness.

And if that house of yours is a trim-lined stucco of creamy tan, it is the roof.

It's a roof that sets comfortably on such a house. Light enough in tone so as not to make it look top-heavy; yet so distinct in coloring that it isn't lost against a background of sky and trees. Interesting in its endless variety of softly blending patterns, the opal roof is never obtrusive.

This unusual roof is formed of shingles on each of which are blended slate flakes of jade green and Richardson's rare weathered brown. The opal effect is secured by applying them just as they come from the bundle.

Other rich blends of color

This, however, is but one example of the beauty secured in Richardson Multicrome Roofs. There are other new colorings; likewise suited to different types of homes.

The tapestry tan roof for example; predominately weathered brown in tone, and patterned like a rare tapestry in soft tile red and jade green mixtures. It is unusually rich looking on a brick house of almost any color. And for a white Colonial home nothing could be more attractive than the onyx roof; where opal and bronze mosaic shingles (similarly formed with weathered brown and tile red slate flakes) add interesting touches of color to a jade green background.

Before you build, before you re-roof; by all means see these new roof colorings. One of them can give your home just the distinction and charm you have always wanted.

It is all-important, of course, that the coloring of the roof be in harmony with the rest of the house. Only then can the house-top contribute its full share of beauty to your home.

50% thicker than the ordinary roof

The Multicrome Roof is built of Richardson Super-Giant Shingles—extra large, extra heavy. Its 50% greater thickness adds both beauty of texture and years of endurance. Its base is sturdy, long-fibre Richardson Felt. Its waterproofing is Viskalt—99.8% pure bitumen, especially vacuum-processed. Its surface is slate in close, overlapping flakes—further protection against weather and fire hazards.

The Richardson Multicrome Roof represents the maximum roof value at a moderate price. It is economical to lay and equally good for new or over-the-old-roof jobs.

DEMPSEY LOSES TO RED TAPE IN FIGHT TO MARRY

FRIENDS SAY HE AND ESTELLE TO WED TOMORROW

Jack Reported to Have Bought $5,000 Ring.

SAN DIEGO IS PLACE

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 31.—Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor will be wed in San Diego Monday if reports from friends of the pair are correct. Dempsey is said to have gone to a jeweler friend today and made arrangements to purchase a $5,000 ring.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor both dropped out of sight in Los Angeles this afternoon, and tonight their friends were awaiting news of an elopement.

Early in the afternoon Dempsey appeared in the County Hall of Records and asked to be directed to the marriage license bureau. The bureau had closed shortly before.

The world's most deeply in love champion turned and walked out, but before reaching the street confided to a friend that he was rubbed raw by the publicity attendant on his engagement and oncoming ring retirement and had decided "I'll get married this afternoon and settle this thing right now."

"Has Miss Taylor agreed?"

"No, but I will arrange it with her." Dempsey then disappeared.

Estelle Giggles That Off.

Miss Taylor was reached at her home, where a voice quivering with some mirth emerged from a setting of beauty clay and remarked, "Isn't that funny? I know nothing about that. Jack phoned me from downtown a little while ago and said he had gone to sign the pay roll at his new gymnasium."

Time out for a couple of attractive giggles.

"I certainly am not ready or expecting to get married at this minute; with nothing but my eyes free from this beauty clay. It's all news to me."

By this time fleets of taxis with newspaper reporters were buzzing to various places about town frequented by the champion and phone buzzers were leaping up and down from frantic efforts to locate the champion.

Jack Kearns, his manager, and Teddy Hayes, Dempsey's secretary, awaited an appointment with the champion at the Barbara hotel.

At Miss Taylor's home forty-five minutes later the Swedish maid informed THE TRIBUNE reporter "Mr. Dempsey has bane here and gone downtown with Miss Taylor. They did not say where they go. If he marry anybody, maybe he marry me."

Dempsey Ignores Everybody.

About 5 p. m. the champion bounced out of his nickel plated roadster at the Barbara hotel, strode past the barber shop and lounging room where Kearns and Hayes still were waiting for him, and took an elevator to his room.

A figure detached itself from the rear of the ascending car.

"Mr. Dempsey, I am a reporter——" the figure said.

"Wait a minute!"—from Jack to the elevator boy. "Run this car downstairs again."

At the first floor Jack helped open the door and gently assisted the reporter outside. "See you again, buddy," he said. The elevator shot up. Miss Taylor's fiancé walked back down the rear stairway, while Kearns and Hayes, by this time notified of Dempsey's presence, rushed toward the elevator and phoned his room. Outside the door the nickel plated Dempsey roadster waited for a while, then was dismissed. At Miss Taylor's home the phone was disconnected tonight.

"Arange a Bout"—Dempsey.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 31.—[By the Associated Press.] — Jack Dempsey's reply to Tommy Gibbons' claim of last night to the world's heavyweight boxing championship was this statement made late today:

"I have told Jack Kearns to arrange a title bout."

He did not specify the bout should be with Gibbons.

Dempsey, visibly amused by Gibbons' statement that he claimed the championship because the champion was not doing any fighting, declared he would defend his title either before or after he married Estelle Taylor, film actress, to whom he is engaged.

"I have not stepped out," Dempsey said, "and Gibbons has no license to claim the title until I have officially stated I have retired.

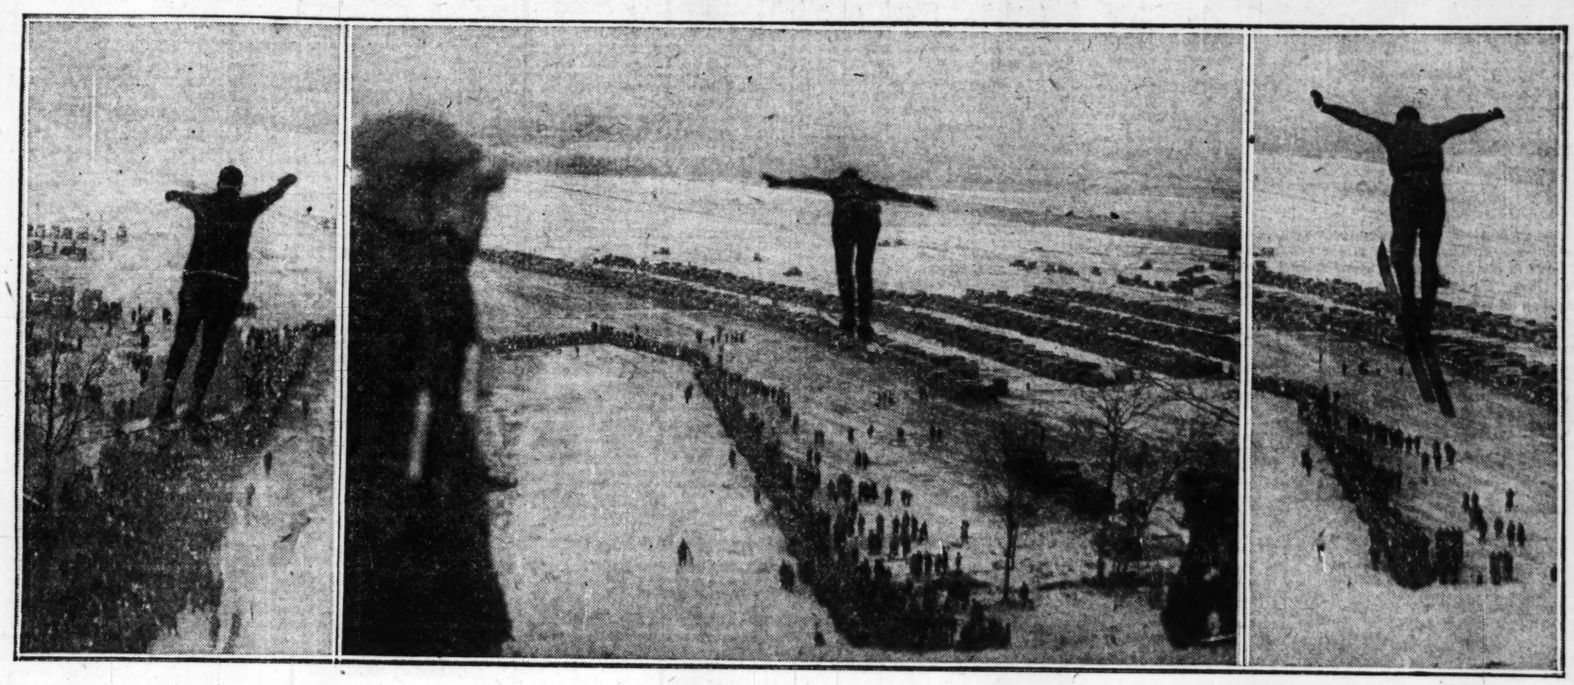
"I am content to let Gibbons have another chance at my title, but it is up to Kearns."

RISK FIRMS PAY OLYMPIC DEFICIT

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 31.—Thirteen insurance companies which combined to guarantee the Olympic games committee the amount sufficient to cover expenses today paid over the sum of 1,228,901 francs and 66 centimes (about $61,400), which was the amount of the deficit.

TOUCHING THE SKY AT PALOS PARK



Like birds fluttering through the ozone, Norge Ski club flyers are shown in midair after leaping off the Palos Park forest preserve slide yesterday in the forest preserve ski tournament. Olaf Skogen, who placed second, is at the left. Al Bakken, whose jump of 128 feet broke the record for the slide and winner of the meet, is in the center and Einar Jensen at the right. The thaw yesterday did not prevent the forest preserve commissioners from having the slide in almost perfect condition.

Ray Record in Hunter Mile; Myers Breaks Vault Mark

Boston, Mass., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Joie Ray smashed the Hunter mile record of 4:18 tonight at the Boston A. A. games, when he won in 4:15 1-5, but Paavo Nurmi, Finland's super runner, suffering from a cold, was unable to make a new mark in the special two mile event.

E. E. [Laddie] Myers of Chicago vaulted to a new world's indoor board floor pole vault record, when he cleared the bar at 12 feet 10⅝ inches. His own previous world's record mark in 1922 was 12 feet 8¼ inches.

With 8,000 wildly cheering spectators massed around the track, Nurmi ran a splendid race, but failed to smash the two mile indoor mark which Joie Ray made only a year ago. It was a truly great performance Nurmi turned in, his time being 9:16 1-5.

Nurmi Lacks Drive.

To be sure, this was nearly eight seconds slower than Joie Ray's two mile mark of 9:08 2-5, but tonight Nurmi was running on a quickly improvised twelve lap track, whereas the Illinois flyer's mark was made on an eight lap track. Tonight Nurmi was suffering from a severe cold, but he ran rather than disappoint the patrons of the Boston Athletic club's indoor classic.

The Finn did not appear to have quite the drive or the speed which has characterized his previous running. There was not one spot in the race where Nurmi failed to come up to what was expected of him. It was just a matter of a general decrease in his average speed. He was not distressed, and he won his scratch race from Ilmar Prim of the Finnish American A. C. and Gunnar Nilson of the same club with ease.

Dodge Cops Race.

Ray's performance in the Hunter mile was one of the features of the meet. J. J. Connolly was second and Hahn, Boston A. A., third.

Ray Dodge, Illinois A. C., won the 660 yards run in 1:24 2-5, giving him his first leg on the A. Paul Keith Memorial cup.

The 3,000 meter walk, a handicap race, with Ugo Frigerio, Italian walker, and Willie Plant, Morningside A. C., entered, found Plant the winner. The New Yorker broke his old indoor record of 12:54 for a better one of 12:52 4-5. Frigerio, who has not become familiar with indoor walking, this being his third start, was at scratch with Plant, but the latter assumed the lead never to be overtaken. L. S. Wilson, Boston A. A., was second, followed by Frigerio, who finished third.

Blouin Rolls 300 Game in Splitting Series with Scribner

Jimmy Blouin won the first block, while Joe Scribner of Detroit captured the evening series in their bowling match for the world's title at Bensinger's Randolph street alleys yesterday.

In winning the afternoon block, Blouin grabbed off a 300 game, and also added a 266 game to his string, to triumph, 2,379 to 2,012.

Blouin Grows Stronger.

As the contest progressed in the afternoon, Blouin seemed to gain strength while, on the other hand, Scribner started off with a rush and then slackened, booking 222 and 223 games, followed by a 243 mark. Following this he kept slightly above the 200 mark.

In the evening things were different, for Scribner got a good turn and took to the high runs, winning by a score of 2,354 to 2,273, winning by 81 pins.

Scribner Picks Up at Night.

Blouin got away to high runs of 273, 255 and 247, but he hit some low spots, while Scribner caught his stride and rolled up long runs of 257, 248, 251, 256 and 230. Scribner was in front throughout the match.

After yesterday's games, Blouin was leading the Detroiter by a total of 742 pins.

Blocks will be rolled this afternoon at 3 and the final block will be contested at 8:30 this evening.

SPRING CAN'T BE FAR AWAY; BABE RUTH GOES SOUTH

New York, Jan. 31.—[Special.]—In his own modest little way, George Herman (Babe) Ruth will inaugurate the spring baseball training season tomorrow afternoon when he swings his portly form aboard a train bound for Hot Springs, Ark. Accompanied by one newspaper man, the Babe will cut loose from the icebound fastnesses of New York and set sail for the land where golf, hiking, auction bridge, and hot baths are the principal amusements.

The first box score is still a matter of four or five weeks away and the first robin is even more distant, but spring cannot be very far off when the "Babe" starts southward. As a harbinger of springtime Ruth is almost in a class by himself. In two weeks more another squad of Yanks will leave for Hot Springs. In another three weeks the Giants' pitchers and catchers will start for the south.

LIEB TO STAY AT NOTRE DAME ANOTHER YEAR

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—It was announced at Notre Dame university tonight that Tom Lieb, assistant coach of the Notre Dame football team and coach of the Notre Dame hockey squad, would return to Notre Dame for another year, thus dispelling rumors that he was to take up coaching at some other school. It was also stated that Elmer Layden would assist Rockne in coaching the Notre Dame back field candidates next fall.

Chicagoan Wins Mile Race in Kenosha Skate Derby

Kenosha, Wis., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Warren House, 2626 Kimball avenue, Chicago, won the men's professional one mile race in the optimist second annual ice Derby this afternoon.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

"BIG JIM" O'LEARY.

THE passing of "Big Jim" O'Leary, the man who would bet on anything, recalls his wager of $1,000 with Pat O'Malley upon the latter's challenge that he could go from Chicago to Ireland inside of a week. It was at a ball of the First Ward Democratic club held at the Coliseum in 1908 that the wager was made, reminisces Helper John Kelley.

Parenthetically, it may be stated, this was the last function given by the Kenna-Coughlin cohorts, O'Leary and O'Malley occupied adjoining boxes. Cases of champagne were much in evidence.

"You'd be a long time in Ireland, Pat," said O'Leary, raising his glass to O'Malley, "before you'd drink any of this stuff."

"O, I don't know," was O'Malley's comeback. "I often drank champagne in Ireland. I'll bet you a thousand that I can be in my father's home inside of a week with a bottle of grape juice in front of me."

"You're on," was O'Leary's reply.

It was 2:30 in the morning and the soiree was just getting good. O'Malley broke away from the merriment. He was whisked to the La Salle street station, catching the fast mail for the east. He arrived in New York just in time to board the Lusitania, sailing for Liverpool and touching at Queenstown. He cabled a friend to meet him with a high powered automobile.

The run from Queenstown to Ballyagran, County Limerick, was covered in two hours. It was after midnight when O'Malley and his friend went tearing along Irish roads, awakening people with the continuous sound of the Klaxon. O'Malley won with an hour to spare and sent a cable to "Big Jim" saying "You lose."

On O'Malley's return to Chicago O'Leary paid the bet with a smile.

Interest in Wager.

Public interest in the O'Leary-O'Malley bet was keen. THE TRIBUNE carried a display head on the subject every day. The Associated Press had a story of O'Malley's arrival in Queenstown. Hughie Keough (HEK) wrote in The Wake:

Pat O'Malley has wagered one thousand mers that he can reach Ireland from Chicago inside of a week. This will beat the record of his maiden voyage across the Atlantic by four weeks and a clean bed.

On the day of his return O'Malley sent HEK a box of cigars with this note: "Dear Hughie: That was no kid about the clean bed. Smoke up."

Alf Bakken, Norge Star, Takes First in Palos Park Ski Meet

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

With leaps of 120 and 128 feet, Alf Bakken of the Norge Ski club yesterday won the first annual ski tournament conducted by the newly organized Forest Preserve Ski club at Palos park. The Norge flyer ran up a total of 280 points to take first place in the class A events, while Alf Matieesen also of the Norge organization, won like honors in class B with 267 points.

More than fifty skiers—including riders from Grand Beach, Mich., St. Paul and Coleraine, Minn., and Rockford, Ill.—competed for the prizes offered by the county forest preserve commission, but Bakken easily was the outstanding performer. His last try, his jump of 128 feet, broke the old record for the hill and surpassed the leaps of Lars Haugen, St. Paul, national champion.

Spills Spoil Other Jumps.

In making the record breaking leap, Bakken left the slide perfectly and kept his balance well. Just before making the 128 foot jump he watched Haugen, Barney Rielly of Coleraine, and Alf Jansen of the Norge club spill in attempting to outdo their first jumps. All three succeeded in bettering their previous leaps, but each went skidding and sliding down the hill the second time.

The Norge club, which was represented by more than half the number of contestants, had fourteen members among the first ten in A and B classes, getting the first three places in class A and the first six in class B.

Miss Larsen Wins Women's Event.

In the women's events Miss Emma Larsen of the Norge club was awarded the first place trophy. She outclassed three other local feminine jumpers, Miss Loraine Matsen, Mrs. Marie Petersen, and Mrs. G. Miller, who placed in the order named. The cross country races for men, women, and boys was deferred owing to the large entry.

Despite yesterday's thaw, the slide was in good condition and plenty snow was packed around the hill. Between four and five thousand spectators watched the events.

Alyea in Lineup, but Maroons Fall Before Ohio, 24 to 23

With their lineup strengthened by the return of Harold [Babe] Alyea, University of Chicago's Maroons gave Ohio State a battle last night at Bartlett gym, but finished on the short end of a 24 to 23 score. It was Chicago's fourth straight conference beating.

The appearance of the Maroon center, who hurdled a scholastic obstacle last week, bolstered the Norgren quintet to such an extent the Buckeyes were in arrears during most of the game. In the last minute the visitors overcame the Maroons' slim lead and held the advantage until the whistle blew a few seconds later.

Chicago's guarding was tighter and its offense functioned better than any time this season, but despite the improved showing the locals were unable to stop the flashy Johnny Miner.

With Alyea making three baskets, Abbott and Barnes two apiece, and Barta and Weiss each tossing one, the Maroons had the advantage in the number of baskets scored, but lost out on free throws. At half time the Maroons held their conquerors to a 12 to 12 score. Lineup:

Iowa City, Ia., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Indiana tamped Iowa firmly into the second division here tonight with a 30 to 28 victory. Laude of Iowa led in the scoring with ten free throws and a total of twelve points.

The Hawks played an erratic game and vied with the invaders in making the contest the roughest seen here in some time. Lineup:

LEAGUE HEADS TRADE CLUBS TO CUT MILEAGE

Springfield, Mo., Jan. 31.—J. Warren Seabough, president of the Western association, tonight announced that a deal had been arranged with Dale F. Gear, president of the Southwestern league, whereby the association's franchise rights at Topeka and Hutchinson, Kas., would be traded to the Southwestern league for the Southwestern's franchise rights at Independence, Kas. Topeka and Hutchinson have been anxious to join the Southwestern league because of the mileage saved during the playing season, and the Western association has been trying to purchase the Independence franchise because of geographical location.

FRANCIS ALLEN TAKES CROWN IN DOMINION MEET

Other Chicago Skaters Are Victors.

TORONTO, Jan. 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—Francis Allen of Chicago won the Canadian speed skating championship here this afternoon, taking the majority of points in the senior events of the two day dominion meet. The victory was not decided until the final race, the three mile, in which Allen took second place for his victory.

As in many events, Chicago skaters ran one, two, three in the deciding grind, the three mile race being won by Eddie Murphy, Chicago, with Allen second and Steinmetz third.

Charles Gorman of St. John, N. B., international and United States champion, did not place in the feature race, but was near the top in the point count for the meet and championship.

Allen clinched the title with his fine showing in the distance events. He romped away with the three-quarter mile final, leading two other Chicagoans, Eddie Murphy and William Steinmetz.

Women's Record Broken.

Leila Brooks won the Canadian women's championship with ease and in doing so shattered four world's records. She won all the titles in her marvelous exhibition. In the senior mile she broke the record held by Gladys Robinson of 4:00 3-5, making the distance in 3:38 1-5. The former mark was made in 1921 at Lake Placid, N. Y.

Her second world mark was made at 220 yards when she covered the journey in :22 4-5. Rose Johnston made the old time for the 220 yards event at Lake Placid. Miss Brooks' other marks were :44 2-5 for 440 yards and 1:38 1-5 for 880 yards. Gladys Robinson held the former records.

Willie Logan of St. John won the junior boys' championship. Summaries of the finals follow:

440 yards—Won by Charles Gorman, St. John; O'Neil Farrell, Chicago, second; Francis Allen, Chicago, third. Time, :37 1-5.

¾ mile—Won by Francis Allen, Chicago; Eddie Murphy, Chicago, second; W. Steinmetz, Chicago, third. Time, 2:07.

3 miles—Won by Eddie Murphy, Chicago; Francis Allen, Chicago, second; W. Steinmetz, Chicago, third. Time, 8:58 4-5.

Senior women's open, 220 yards—Won by Leila Brooks, Toronto; Peggy McIntosh, Toronto, second; Isabel McCullough, Toronto, third. Time, :22 4-5 [new world's record].

INTERNATIONAL FAVORITE.

Allen's victory in the Canadian championships makes him a strong favorite for honors in the international championships to be held at Saranac Lake, N. Y., next week. He is representing the Austin Columbia A. A. of Chicago and in a year's time has sprung from a class C skater into the leading expert of the United States and Canada.

In 1924 he won THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE Silver Skates Derby from a fast field, and during the skating season in and around Chicago has defeated the leading class A skaters of the section, including the Chicagoans who trailed him in the point column today.

This year's champion has endurance and speed. He is a faultless judge of pace and seldom permits the other skaters to pocket him. He has strong stroke and can sprint with any of the present day speedsters. In defeating the best skaters in the United States and Canada in the Canadian championships Allen should not only rule favorite for the international title but the diamond medal as well.

VATICAN DENIES POPE SPOKE TO JOHNNY DUNDEE

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 31.—Advices from Rome state the Vatican has issued an official communique denying Johnny Dundee had an interview or special audience with the pope. The statement says the boxer might have been among the daily groups of people granted an audience with the pope, but it denies the pope spoke to Dundee, and especially denies Dundee's statement the pope told him he was interested in the sport of boxing.

GLIDES TO CANADIAN TITLE

Francis Allen, premier ice speed king of the Austin-Columbia A. A. of Chicago, distanced a field of the fastest skaters in this country and Canada in the finals for the speed skating crown of Canada at Toronto yesterday. He has been a consistent winner of local meets this winter and now is a favorite for the international championship to be decided at Saranac Lake, N. Y., next week.

OPAL A. A. SKATE DERBY TODAY AT DOUGLAS PARK

With an entry of close to 500, the annual ice skating Derby of the Opal A. A. will be held over a six lap course on the Douglas park lagoon today. The first event will start promptly at 1 o'clock and contestants must report for their numbers before this hour.

Absence of some of the better known skaters who are in the east for the international championships at Saranac Lake, N. Y., this week, has resulted in a larger entry. All the experts now realize they have a chance because Francis Allen, Roy McWhirter, William Steinmetz, Oneil Farrell, Eddie Murphy, and Henry Nelson are in the east. These skaters are Chicago's hopes in the internationals, which always bring together the best skaters in the country.

A complete list of events composes today's program. There will be the usual number of races for the class skaters and events for boys and girls of various ages. In addition there will be a half mile race for members of the west parks police force.

As an added attraction a closed meet, open only to employés of the Continental and Commercial bank, of which George Sonnenleiter is physical director, will be held. This program will open at noon.

Judge Walter P. Steffen will be referee, Eddie Mahlke will be clerk of the course, while other officials are men well known in skating circles.

ALLEN WANTS VALLEY SPORTS COMMISSIONER

Lawrence, Kas., Jan. 31.—Dr. F. C. Allen, director of athletics of the University of Kansas, today declared in favor of the creation of a Missouri Valley conference commissioner of athletics.

"The Missouri Valley conference has developed in such a way that it is at present one of the leading intercollegiate athletic groups of America," said Dr. Allen. "But it has reached a point where further progress only can be made, in my opinion, under some such system as establishment of a high commissioner of big caliber who could promote a better understanding and feeling for intercollegiate athletics, and at the same time insure high standards and good relationships between the conference members."

DARK HORSES WIN CITY ICE SKATE TRIALS

Sudden thaws offered a big handicap to the holding of the semi-finals in the Chicago city-wide skating championship meet yesterday, finals in which will be held Saturday afternoon at the Garfield park lagoon. Only eight of the sixteen park districts which were scheduled to hold the last preliminaries in the ice events were able to complete their programs. Those meets which were held, afforded some thrilling and spectacular matches and a number of team upsets were recorded.

One of the more notable upsets was in the Ravenswood district tourney when Waters playground totaled 80 points, Welles trailing with 70. Two victories in the relay events and sterling performances by some of Coach Walter Sonnenleiter's girl skaters were largely accountable for the defeat of the favorites.

Le Moyne Beats Out Andubon.

Audubon was counted stronger than Le Moyne, but failed by 4 to equal the 59 points scored by the victors in the Lake View district. The 2 point victory of Kohn over Palmer, and the defeat of Byrne field by Raster were other high lights of the day's city-wide racing program.

The districts which were unable to hold their meets yesterday will stage the semi-final events as quickly as the ice becomes hard, the Lower North Shore, Logan-Irving, Central, and Oakland districts having decided upon Tuesday afternoon. Central, Midwest, Hyde Park, and Drover have not yet named the date, but will select the first day the ice is good.

Soft Ice Handicaps Skaters.

The skaters in yesterday's meets were sadly handicapped in practically every case by the soft ice. In some instances, the skaters went the distances with their blades buried in water, falls being frequent because of the holes in the ice. Despite these difficulties, competition was keen, and many brilliant performances were staged, such as those of Fred Brill, Welles' park's senior miler, and Eddie Troester, Audubon's brilliant expert. Because the courses were not laid out according to regulations, but with regard only to the condition of the ice in most cases, no times were recorded.

Finals in this city-wide meet sponsored by the Chicago Playground council, representing the various park boards, the board of education and the city bureau of parks, playground, and beaches, will be held Saturday afternoon at Garfield park. It is expected skaters who were unable to compete yesterday will have competed in district meets by then, when approximately 600 youthful experts will vie for team and individual trophies.

CAGE MEETING MONDAY.

The National Catholic Basketball league will hold its regular meeting tomorrow evening at 7:30 at the Windsor-Clifton hotel, Monroe and Wabash.

EVERYWHERE you go everybody is figuring out a Cross Word Puzzle. Nobody is working or even exercising. America will lose the next War but win the next Puzzle Contest. It's the greatest craze that has hit this country since Prohibition. People say to me, "Why Will, you don't understand; it is an Education, it learns you more ways to say one word." If you know one way to say a word what do you need to know any more for? Nobody is going to give you anything for nothing, I don't care how many ways you ask for it. Our nation has never been short on words. We might lack ideas sometime but never words. This puzzle has done one thing, it has learned us which is Horizontal and which is Vertical. But a Cross Word Puzzle is not new. Railroad Time Tables have been out for years. Smoke 'Bull' Durham while working one, that is, if you want to, if you don't why smoke wherever you want to.

CLUB CHARGES "GANG RULE" IN TENNIS RANKING

Charging "gang rule" had revised the ranking of tennis players sent out under the name of the United States Lawn Tennis association, the Western Lawn Tennis association at its annual meeting at the Hamilton club last night called for a reranking, on the ground the list sent out was unofficial. It was not official, they state, because it was made by a subcommittee of the ranking committee, who had been ordered to report back at the annual meeting of the national association to be held in New York, Feb. 7.

The action was taken, largely as a protest to the ranking given George Lott Jr. and Marion Leighton, Chicagoans, who were not given adequate consideration by the eastern racquet officials, the local association considers.

National Body to Get Protest.

The resolutions will be presented to the national body's meeting by J. C. Stewart, yesterday reelected president of the Western association.

The members of the subcommittee, all easterners, are R. Norris Williams, Julia Weyrick, and Nathaniel Niles. Williams was beaten by Lott in the national tourney, so although he was a Davis Cup player, as were other ranking racquet wielders, his name was not listed because of "insufficient data." Watson Washburn, whose record was much the same as Williams', was ranked.

The resolutions were presented by Leo Lunn, dean of Chicago tennis. They were unanimously adopted. Other provisions contained in the statement were: That a player rated nationally, above others in his district, should not be given a lower district rating.

Section Ranking at Variance.

This provision was included because Mrs. Ruth Riese, Saginaw, Mich., was given a higher rating in the women's western honors, than Marion Leighton, winner of most midwestern tourneys. Another alleged incompetent ranking was that which put Lucien Williams, Chicago, in front of Kirk Reid, Cincinnati, in the western list, and behind him in the national list.

Approval was given amateur player-writer ruling, which was drawn up by the committee composed of Tilden and those on the other side of the controversy, but left their delegates uninstructed as to how to vote at the meeting, should emergency arise.

If the resolution adopted by the Western association carries through the national body, it is likely the position originally given Lott, No. 9, will be restored.

After the meeting, the annual banquet was held. Later motion pictures showing national champions in action were shown.

The following officers were elected for the year:

President, J. C. Stewart, Chicago; first vice president, Harry S. Walsh, Chicago; second vice president, E. J. Wuensch, Indianapolis; third vice president, Fred D. Burns, Cincinnati; secretary, Harry S. Knox, Chicago; treasurer, Walter T. Hayes, Chicago. Members at large—Henry C. Wick Jr., Cleveland; Lieut. R. A. Leighton, Culver; M. S. Miller, Glenco; L. D. Leavitt, Chicago.

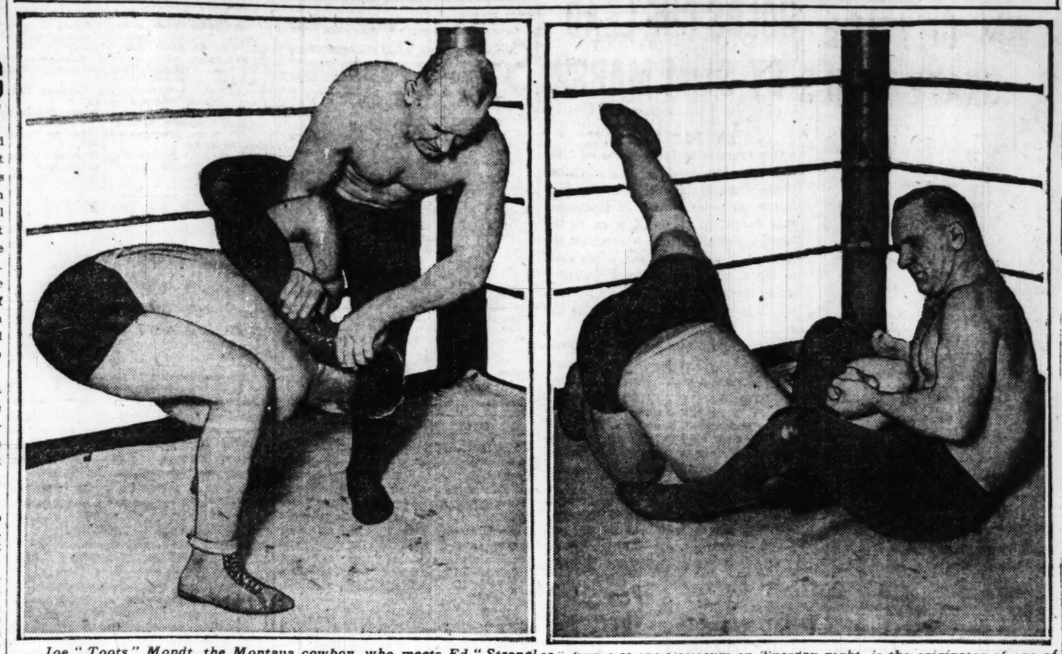
MORE DANGEROUS THAN DEADLY HEADLOCK



Joe "Toots" Mondt, the Montana cowboy, who meets Ed "Strangler" Lewis at the Coliseum on Tuesday night, is the originator of one of the most dangerous locks known to the wrestling game. Mondt calls it the Japanese jackknife, and it is a combination of several holds. The westerner secures the grip from standing or sitting position. If the lock is secured when both are on their feet, Mondt pulls his opponent forward in a downward position. He then brings one leg over the head and secures a short arm scissors. Having secured the grip, Mondt forces his opponent to the mat with his weight and applies the leverage in such a manner that his opponent's shoulders are forced to the mat. Aside from this hold, Mondt knows other grips and is just as fast and clever as Lewis, who undoubtedly will use his headlock on every occasion.

MUNN TO SHOW HOLD WHICH BEAT LEWIS

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Featured by the appearance of Wayne Munn, who will show the holds with which he threw Lewis out of the ring to win the world's heavyweight title, Ed "Strangler" Lewis, who still claims the world's championship, and Joe "Toots" Mondt, the western cowboy, will meet in the windup of the wrestling show at the Coliseum on Tuesday night. Lewis and Mondt will start to wrestle at 10 o'clock regardless of results of other contests.

Munn will give his exhibition before the main event and will show the inside crotch and neck hold with which he picked Lewis from the mat and hurled him into the audience.

Mondt Clever Grappler.

Lewis is still recognized as the heavyweight champion by Chicago promoters and Ed is starting another campaign which he hopes will result in a return match with Munn. In meeting Mondt, the Strangler has selected one of the toughest opponents in the heavyweight division. Joe has all the tricks of John Pesek and is just as fast. He is strong and a clever defensive wrestler.

The cowboy will depend upon a standing Japanese jack knife hold, and while Lewis knows many other holds than the headlock, he will undoubtedly use his celebrated grip most of the time. In his training at the Mullen gymnasium Ed has spent considerable time on the dummy head. He has held the lock as long as fifteen minutes on the wooden apparatus, which has a strong spring in the middle. Lewis has won other bouts by use of the toe hold and knows how to apply the crotch and half nelson.

Will Be Finish Match.

Lewis and Mondt will go to a finish best two in three falls. They will come to standing positions when they go into the ropes and if either goes out of the ring he will be given ten seconds in which to return. If either deliberately tosses the other out of the roped enclosure he will lose not only the fall but the match as well. Both will wind up their training tomorrow. Mondt will work at the Arcade and Lewis at Mullen's.

The bout which is creating most comment will bring together Mike Romano, the Italian heavyweight champion, and Haasen Giles. All holds will be permissible in this encounter, and it should be a great contest. Giles has never been put flat on his back, and rather than have this happen has deliberately lost bouts on fouls. Romano claims he will flatten his opponent if he has to chase him all over the Coliseum.

The show will start at 8:15 o'clock, doors at the Coliseum will open at 7 o'clock.

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted by the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. Today's question originated in the sports department and $5 is awarded The Tribune ice fund.

The Question.

Should the New York state boxing commission have the power to proclaim the winners of its elimination tournaments world's champions and should they be so recognized in other states?

Where Asked.

City hall.

The Answers.

Thomas J. Bowler, 5048 Addison street, alderman—From the past performance of the New York boxing commission my claim is that the champions of the elimination tournaments should not be recognized in other states. I think the people of other states should have as much voice in the matter as the New York commission.

T. J. Courtney, 7832 Loomis street, secretary—If the New York commission is sincere in giving the sports followers world's champion boxers, its efforts should not be confined to New York state only. Personally, I think the New York commission has assumed entirely too much power in dictating to boxers and in attempting to hold tournaments for world titles.

Fred L. Boissy, 1130 Winona avenue, senior head clerk—Yes, by all means. From what I know about the New York state boxing commission it is made up of men of integrity who know the ring game from A to Z. Chicago should have a similar commission and boxing should be legalized in the state of Illinois. I am a boxing fan and would like to see the sport resurrected and recognized in this as in other states.

Timothy A. Hogan, 3338 Throop street street, alderman—I think that the boxing commission in New York should have the right to declare a boxer champion so far as its own state and boxing matches in New York are concerned. I do not think that its boxers proclaimed world's champions should be recognized in other states.

Charles H. Gell, 1521 Birchwood avenue, chief clerk—Boxing centers more or less in New York and as the game is legalized there it seems the most logical place for the decision of championships. The relinquishment of crowns necessitates some sort of tournament to decide a new champion and the New York boxing commission is taking a good way to settle the matter. I do think some of their rulings are too hard on the boys.

DES PLAINES FIVE WINS CAGE TITLE

Maine township high school of Des Plaines last night captured the first annual Arlington Heights prep basketball tourney by nipping the home school, 17 to 13, in the final game. The champions had to go two extra periods before putting over the victory. Argo took third place, beating Wauconda, 22 to 13.

FIELDS TOO WET FOR SOCCER CUP MATCHES

Two belated matches in the National Soccer cup competition slated for today have been called off. Referees Crompton and Gemmill inspected the Pullman and Bricklayers' parks and found them waterlogged, so the Sparta-Pullman and Bricklayer-Olympia games were postponed for the third time.

The Sparta field at 27th and Kostner avenue is in good shape, but Pullman would not transfer the game there, so Sparta has arranged to play the Thistles today at 3 o'clock. The Scotchmen will present a new outside right in Ritchie, formerly of Omaha. Dave Brown, the Long Beach golf professional, will play for Sparta. He is a former English league player.

The Swedish Americans of the Major league will play Ulster United at 74th street and Aberdeen avenue, in the second round of the National Amateur cup competition.

Eight of the leading clubs in the city have been invited to compete in the indoor soccer tournament to be held Feb. 13 at the Broadway armory under the auspices of the Swedish Americans. Carl Johnson is managing the event.

PURPLE OFFERS SPAULDING SPORT DIRECTOR'S POST

William H. Spalding, head fotball coach at the University of Minnesota, has been offered and may accept the position of director of athletics at Northwestern university, it was reported last night. Spaulding is wanted as the successor of Dana M. Evans, these reports said.

The Minnesota coach, who is considering the acceptance of a renewal of a two year contract to remain at Minnesota, has promised his decision next week.

Spaulding also has been offered the position as head football coach at the university of Southern California.

Spaulding Noncommittal.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 31.—W. H. (Bill) Spaulding, head football coach at the University of Minnesota, who was recently given a two year extension of his contract by the board of regents, refused to comment tonight on reports from Chicago that he had been offered the position of athletic director at Northwestern university to succeed the late Dana M. Evans.

"I have nothing whatsoever to say on the matter," Coach Spaulding said.

Woods and Waters — BOB BECKER

THOSE SOUTHERN BASS.

ALTHOUGH northern bass waters are locked up tight in ice and snow, southern lakes are streams which are wide open and at this time of the year welcome fishermen with warm, sunshiny days and plenty of fishing. Every winter sees more and more bass anglers getting acquainted with the large mouth of Florida and other parts of the south and these bait shooters or fly-casters can take their pick of either stream or lake fishing. The south has both, just like north country.

It has been said that many middle western fishermen are misinformed about bass fishing in the south, which is a great sport at this time of the year. This is quite possible, as we recall that one enthusiatsic fisherman who goes fishing every year in the north woods, but who has never done any southern fishing, asked us if the water moccasins weren't a menace on the Florida lake where we fished, and also if the water wasn't so slimy that the bass were unfit to eat. The answer to both of these questions is emphatically no. The water of the lake where we fished in Florida last winter was so clear and sweet that whenever possible we drank it in preference to the well water at the house.

When we started fishing this Florida lake it was agreed that no bass under seven and one-half pounds would be kept, as we were after something pretty good size. The first seven and one-half pounder was taken to the house and baked so that the flavor of southern bass could be tested. The baking given that nice bass sure was a work of art and the same could be said of the stuffing that was used. Talk about good eats that seven and one-half pounder was it with a capital I and as far as we could tell it was as good if not better than any large mouth black bass caught in a northern lake.

NO DECISION IN WISCONSIN GRID COACH SITUATION

Madison, Wis., Jan. 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—The football coach situation at the University of Wisconsin was discussed between Jack Ryan, present coach, and George Little, the new athletic director, during Little's recent visit in Madison and was "left an open matter" pending the director's return next week, Ben S. H. Goodnight, member of the athletic council, said today.

Dean Goodnight said he had not heard reports that Ryan would be asked to resign within the next few days and that it was contemplated to give the coaching job to Little.

Little is expected to return to Madison from Ann Arbor, Mich., for another visit next Friday. Dean Goodnight would not say whether the coaching position would be decided between Little and Ryan, but he indicated that a recommendation by Little was awaited.

SCHAEFER TOPS BILLIARDISTS IN HOPPE'S RANKING

New York, Jan. 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—"Young Jake" Schaefer of San Francisco is the greatest match player ever faced by Willie Hoppe, world's balkline billiard champion. This is the outstanding conclusion drawn from ranking lists of his opponents compiled by Hoppe in which the cue wizard places Schaefer at the top of the "first ten" of all time as well as the list of modern stars.

Next to Schaefer in his modern "first ten," Hoppe puts Welker Cochran, sensational young Los Angeles player, and Roger Conti of France, who recently shattered several world's records in capturing the European championship.

Ives Second in "All Time."

In his "first ten" for all time, however, Hoppe ranks Frank Ives second and "Old Jake" Schaefer, brilliant father of a brilliant son, third.

An interesting comparison with Hoppe's all time list is afforded by a similar selection based on the consensus of opinion of ten leading billiard experts. Hoppe naturally heads this array but it is interesting to note that, although in slightly different order, the remaining nine names all are on Hoppe's list. These experts rate Young Jake Schaefer next to Hoppe.

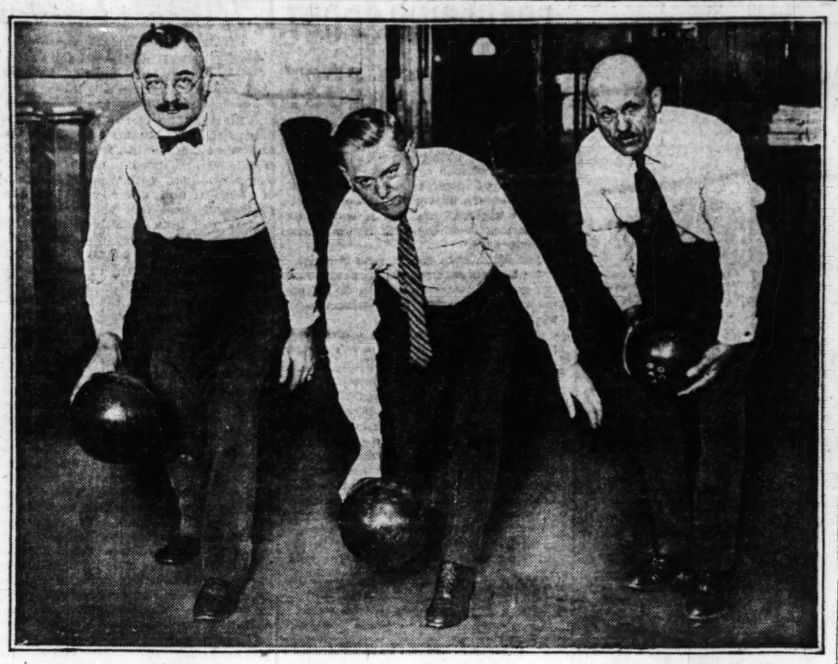
ROLL IN EVERY TOURNEY



WILLIAM MROSEK. PETER HOWLEY. GEORGE BANGART.

TRIO HASN'T MISSED A. B. C. TITLE TOURNEY

George Bangart, Peter Howley, and Bill Mrosek hold the honor of having competed in every tournament of the American Bowling Congress. Starting with the original tournament held here in 1901, the three Chicago musketeers have taken part in twenty-four competitions and there is only a difference of 1 point in their averages.

Bangart, who did not play in the singles of the first tournament, has a total of 38,971 pins and an average of 182 205-213. Mrosek, who has not missed a game, has a total of 39,389 and an average of 182 77-216, while Howley, who did not roll in the team event or doubles in the original tournament, has notched 38,077 for an average of 181 67-210.

None of the trio has been fortunate enough to land a title, but in the tournament at Indianapolis in 1903 Bangart rolled with the Wrigley team which missed first place by seven pins. Wrigley had promised the team $1,000 if it won and excitement ran high.

The late Jimmy Chalmers, the anchor of the quintet, had a single pin spare with his last shot, but he blew it and it became famous as the $1,000 spare.

In the tournament held by the National Bowling association at Buffalo in 1911 Bangart won the all-events prize.

155 CHICAGO BOWLING TEAMS ARE ENTERED IN A. B. C. TOURNEY

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 31.—Chicago, with 155 teams, tops the list of entries outside of Buffalo for the international tournament of the American Bowling congress to be held in this city March 5 to April 6. Detroit is second on the list of invaders with 85 teams.

Rochester, N. Y., has filed 60 entries to date; Cleveland, 55; Erie, Pa., 45; Syracuse and Milwaukee, each 35; Cincinnati, 25; Pittsburgh, 23, and New York City, Indianapolis, Toledo, and Columbus, O., each 20. Among the entries listed are teams from Florida and as far west as Denver, Colo.

Total entries from outside of Buffalo are 950 teams. The Buffalo entries total more than 900 teams. The entry lists close on Feb. 4.

Willis Briggs of Toledo, Noted Bowler, Murdered

Toledo, O., Jan. 31.—[Special]—Willis Briggs, noted bowler, one of the organizers of the new Interstate Bowling league, was murdered here today. His body was found on the Holland Sylvania road near Sylvania. Police believe Briggs was murdered and thrown out of an automobile.

LEADERS HOLD PLACES IN AURORA PIN MEET

Aurora, Ill., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Bowlers from three states, Illinois, Wisconsin, and Indiana, including one former national championship team, the Lincoln Lifes of Fort Wayne, Ind., attacked the wood in the interstate bowling tournament today, but the leaders remain unchanged. Jim Mulcahy of Chicago rolled into fourth place in the singles with 684 and F. Miller and L. Dunn of Chicago landed in fourth place in the doubles with 1,256. Scores:

GUS COPULOS HOLDS CUE LEAD BY SLIM MARGIN

BY JOE DAVIS.

Gus Copulos of Detroit has held his place at the head of the National Three Cushion league, but is only a fractional point ahead of Champion Bob Cannefax. From now on to the finish the strain will be harder, but the critics believe Copulos will finish close to the top. Gus last week scored a thirty inning game against Thurnblad, which is the second best game of the year.

John Layton has sold his St. Louis room and will represent the Minneapolis Recreation room, which has taken the franchise.

Last week the Paramount Recreation company of Buffalo surrendered its franchise, and Clarence Jackson is temporarily out of the race. He hopes to locate in Pittsburgh.

Greenwood Meets Hall.

William Greenwood of Pittsburgh will be here tomorrow and Tuesday for four games with Allen Hall, and Harry Wakefield of Cleveland will be here for four games with Kieckhefer Wednesday and Thursday. Following is the standing:

Greenleaf Resumes Play.

Champion Ralph Greenleaf, who was compelled to postpone four of his games here with Edwin Rudolph in the National Pocket league, also postponed his series in Minneapolis, but expects to resume tomorrow at Kansas City against Ben Allen.

Frank Taborski, former world's champion, climbed to second place by taking 10 of 12 games from Natalie and Allen. He is three and a half games behind Greenleaf. The standing:

	W.	L.	H.R.	B.G.
Greenleaf, Phila.	38	18	73	6

Schedule for this week: Feb. 2, 3, 4—Greenleaf and Allen at Kansas City; Natalie and St. Jean at Minneapolis; Concannon and Woods at Syracuse. Feb. 5, 6, 7—Seaback and Woods at Syracuse; Natalie and Rudolph at Chicago.

A. G. Swanlund of Chicago won first place in the semifinals of the state amateur three cushion billiard tournament at the Radio room. Swanlund won five games and lost one. The three next highest were: William Jesperson and L. C. Hine from Chicago and Ben H. Klein from Peoria, each winning four games and losing two. These four players will enter the state finals, where they will contest with the present champion, George Sheffler of Champaign, for the title and the I. B. A. diamond medal and state trophy.

Welker Cochran has left Hollywood, and, stopping at San Francisco, he played finely against Marc Catton, getting a run of 250 and scoring 500 points in eleven innings. Cochran then went to St. Louis for games with Charley Peterson, and he will be in Chicago shortly for his final practice games. Welker, who finished in a tie with Hoppe last year, is expected to land near the top again.

Jake Schaefer is tuning up at the Brunswick rooms and making big averages in his local exhibitions. Erich Hagenlacher of Germany and Edouard Horemans are still on the road giving exhibitions, and Suzuki, the Japanese player, is expected here shortly.

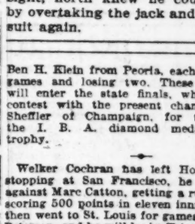
Champion Willie Hoppe, who still is nursing his injured arm, will remain in New York for his three cushion match with Bob Cannefax, the date of which has been changed to Feb. 19.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST
by A. R. METCALF

SNAPPY PLAY WINS RUBBERS.

SNAPPY play at the beginning of a deal wins more rubbers than any other item in bridge. Below are a couple of examples with somewhat similar features:

THE HANDS.



Score, 0—0. Rubber game. South dealt and bid one club, west two spades, north three clubs, east three spades, south four clubs, west four spades, and the bidding closed. North had the initial lead.

THE PLAY.

Tricks.	N.	E.	S.	W.
1	JC	5C	KC	7C
2	H2	H4	HK	H5
3	HA	H8	HJ	H10
4	H3	H9	2S	HQ

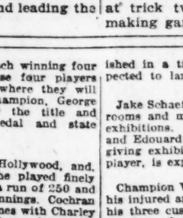
The declarer easily secured the remaining tricks, but failed to make his contract.

The feature of this deal was the play of south at tricks 1 and 2. South realized that there was considerable danger that west might trump the second round of clubs and secure six spades and four diamond tricks before again losing the lead. Overtaking the club meant that a club might finally be established in dummy, but that contingency was far away, while the loss of the game through spades and diamonds was imminent.

South figured that the bidding of north must indicate the ace of hearts in that hand and that one club, two hearts, and a ruff would save the game and defeat the declarer's contract. West, who realized the situation, made a beautiful play in refusing to cover the jack of hearts at trick 3, although holding a fourchette. But as the king was the only heart not in sight, north knew he could not lose by overtaking the jack and leading the suit again.

The next deal has features of another order.

THE HANDS.



Score, 0—0. North dealt and bid one heart. East passed. South bid three hearts; west, three spades; north, four hearts; east, four spades and the bidding closed. North had the initial lead.

THE PLAY.

Tricks.	N.	E.	S.	W.
1	HK	H3	HA	H7
2	JC	5C	4C	2C
3	3C	6C	AC	7C
4	2S	9C	QC	KC

The declarer secured the remaining tricks but failed to make his contract.

In this deal South, of course, knew that declarer could not hold more than one heart. North must hold either the king of diamonds or king of clubs, but the only chance for saving the game lay in the club suit.

At trick three South could mark the trey of clubs as the only one remaining in his partner's hand and trick four defeated the declarer.

The declarer, however, at trick two had a proposition of another order. Clubs was the only suit that South could lead and while the declarer could not actually place the missing clubs he could tell that the four was either the lowest or highest in the South hand. If it were the highest the game was gone, because North and South would instantly make two clubs and ruff a club, but if South were leading the bottom of his club holding, the ace of clubs must be in the South hand, as North would have led a singleton ace in the first place; therefore West should have played the king of clubs at trick two as the only chance of making game.

ONE BIRD MARGIN WINS TRAP SHOOT FOR ONWENTSIA

AUGIE TAKES TWO VICTORIES IN CUE SERIES

Augie Kieckhefer took two games from William Greenwood of Pittsburgh yesterday in national three cushion billiard league contests at Kieckhefer's Recreation room. In a thrilling finish Augie nosed out Greenwood, 50 to 49, in the afternoon game. He had an easier time in the evening, winning by a 50 to 24 count. Kieckhefer breezed along to a 38 to 22 lead in 42 innings in the afternoon match and then slumped. Greenwood caught him at 40. Augie made a brace of doubles and Greenwood tied the score at 49. Kieckhefer's four games with Wakefield of Cleveland this week have been advanced from Thursday to Wednesday.

14 TEAMS START SIX DAY GRIND ON NEXT SUNDAY

Fourteen strong teams will start in the Chicago six day bicycle grind at the Coliseum one week from tonight. The collection of riders is made up of seventeen American cyclists and eleven foreign stars, comprising one of the strongest and most evenly balanced fields that has competed in a local grind in some time. Paddy Harmon picked out the American riders he wanted for the race, while he had Clarence Carman, former motor paced champion of America, who is in Europe, line up the foreign talent for him. Bicycle fans seem unanimous in their opinion that Harmon has gathered a fine field of stars.

Twelve of the fourteen teams that will compete already have been announced. They are: Harry Horan and Bobby Walthour, Willie Fenn and Richard Schneider, Gaetano Belloni and Alois Degraeves, Maurice Brocco and Marcel Buysse, Harry Kaiser and Willie Keller, Maurice De Wolfe and Charley Deruyter, Eddie Madden and Reggie McNamara, Harry Stockelynch and Alphonse Goosens, Ernest "Hy" Kockler and Carl Stockholm, Mickey Walsh and Tommy Fitzsimmons, Bill Hanley and Freddie Taylor, Ali Nefatti and Maurits Declerck.

New Foreign Riders.

All the foreign riders have competed in Chicago before with the exception of Deruyter, the giant Belgian, and the young Italian riders, Ferrario and Rizzetto. The American boys who will make their first appearance in Chicago and also their debut as six-day riders will be Richard Schneider, the all-around amateur champion of America; William Fenn Jr., amateur champion of 1923, and Gus Merkle, a promising youth.

The best foreign combination in the field appears to be Maurice Brocco, the sensational little Italian rider, and Marcel Buysse, the rugged Belgian. Brocco and Buysse won the New York six day race last March and Brocco thinks he and Buysse will repeat out there. Brocco and Buysse are not so great when it comes to sprinting for points, but when the jamming starts they are in their glory.

Chicago Boy Entered.

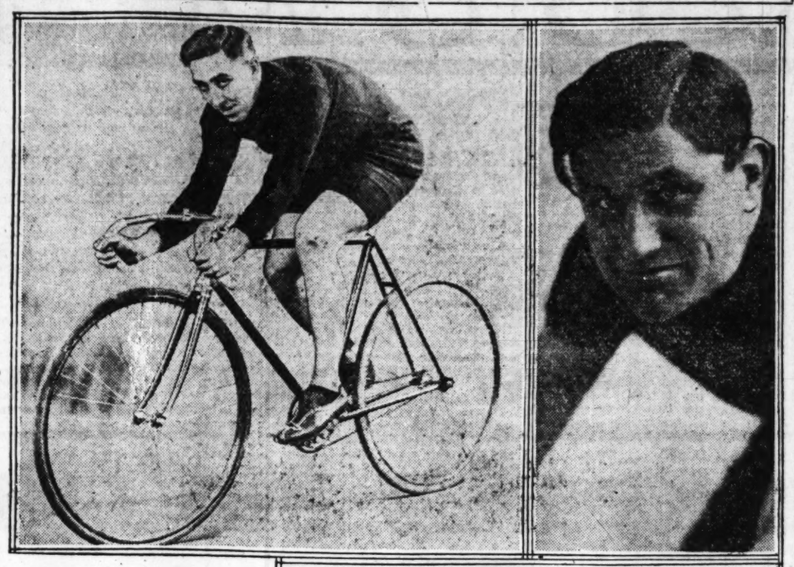
Carl Stockholm and "Hy" Kockler, who finished fourth in the recent New York race, both have been training for the last month for this race and the Chicago boys are expected to be up there battling for first money on the final night.

Tickets for the race will go on sale at the Coliseum tomorrow and also at Al Bloom's, 127 North Dearborn street. A big card of professional and amateur sprints races will be run next Saturday night to give the riders and fans a chance to warm up for the long grind to come. The races will start at 8 o'clock.

SARMIENTO GETS BOUT.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 31.—Pete Sarmiento, Filipino bantamweight, will head a Lynch, former bantamweight champion, or Lynch, former maniamweight champion, or Joey Sangor of Milwaukee.

START LONG GRIND NEXT SUNDAY



ERNEST "HY" KOCKLER,

These are three of the stars who will start in the six day bike race at the Coliseum next Sunday night. "Hy" Kockler is a Chicago rider and will have many friends around the oval. Brocco is an Italian rider of wide renown who is expected to be a factor in the race all the way. Deruyter is a Belgian who also is a star performer in six day grinds.

LOCAL GOLF

GOLFERS are interested in the outcome of the annual meeting of the Chicago Daily Fee Course association at the Hamilton club Tuesday at 6:30. The officers already have announced that an increase in the daily fee is imperative, and the amount will be decided at the meeting. Most of the clubs spent much money last fall in improving their courses and feel they cannot afford to operate at last year's prices. The present officers are: President, Dr. F. J. Buss; vice president, Ambrose Krier, Big Oaks; treasurer, C. E. Allshouse, Greenview; secretary, Jim Shea, Harlem.

The Chicago Beach, Tavern, Normal Park, and Jackson Park Recreation rooms have formed a South Side league, which will start Feb. 9. Capt. Carter, Kenneth Risert, Walter Crowdus, and Eldridge Robinson of the Tavern defeated Joie Finn, Bill Fitzgerald, Lee Creagan, and Charles Vallancourt of the Jackson Park room, 7 and 5, in a challenge match at the Tavern.

Paul Engberg had low score of 39, in the qualifying round of the Illinois Juniors championship at MacDonald's school.

TIJUANA JOCKEY HURT.

Tijuana, Mexico, Jan. 31.—Apprentice Jockey Whittingham was hurt in a spill during the running of the fourth race here today when his mount, Marvel G., fell. He received a severely strained back and other injuries and was removed to a San Diego hospital.

SAMMY MANDELL OFF TODAY FOR GO WITH TERRIS

Sammy Mandell, Rockford lightweight, leaves today for New York where he will meet Sid Terris in a fifteen round decision bout on Friday night. Manager Eddie Kane will meet his fighter in New York where training quarters have been established at one of the gymnasiums.

The Rockford lightweight, who will engage in the most important fight since he joined the 135 pound class, finished local training yesterday at the Arcade where he boxed six rounds. He appears in superb condition and is confident he will win over Terris and then be in an excellent position to claim the world's lightweight title vacated by the voluntary retirement of Bennie Leonard.

Gibbons in His Corner.

Tom Gibbons, who is also under the management of Kane, will be in Mandell's corner. Tom will do all the advising and Gibbons' presence is expected to give the Rockford boxer a lot of confidence.

Harold Smith, bantamweight pride of the stockyards who meets Charley Goodman in the twelve round semi-windup, will leave for New York on Tuesday accompanied by Trainer Art Winch. Manager Buck Montgomery will leave on Thursday to handle his fighter.

Rantoul Show Tuesday.

An interesting card of bouts has been arranged by Lieut. Arnold Rich athletic officer at Chanute field for Tuesday night. "Shorty" Martone and Jimmy Smith, both of Urbana, will meet in the main event which will be supported by six other contests. Chanute field is located at Rantoul, Ill.

BROWNS REPORT IN TWO SQUADS

St. Louis, Jan. 31.—Training plans of the St. Louis Americans this year call for a schedule similar to that carried out last season, according to Manager George Sisler. The team will report to the training camp in two squads, the first leaving here Feb. 24 and arriving at Tarpon Springs, Fla., Feb. 26. Twenty-two players, consisting mainly of battery men and including Manager Sisler, will comprise this squad. The remainder of the team is to report on March 4.

Metevier, Indian Slabman, Is Released to Columbus

Cleveland, O., Jan. 31.—George Metevier, right hand pitcher, with the Cleveland American league team since 1922, has been released to the Columbus American association team.

Manager Tris Speaker announces that he expects to dispose of Outfielder Gulley and Pitcher Cheeves this month and will take only thirty-three players to the Lakeland training camp.

Cubs to Have Rookie Pair of Slugging Right Handers

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

In the search by Manager Killefer of the Cubs for a right handed slugger to assist the north siders next summer in the pennant fight by knocking the cover off the ball, it is just possible a couple of young huskies now on the squad are being overlooked. At least the dope on two young men who will be taken to the training camp for trial indicates they are made of the kind of stuff that busts up ball games.

Reference is made to Ed J. Kearns and C. L. "Chink" Taylor. Both were with the Beaumont club of the Texas league last year, though the former was with Galveston the first part of the season. Down there in the sun baked regions these two young men did such noteworthy slugging that they attracted the eye of the Cubs' scout, Jack Doyle, and on his recommendation they were obtained. Kearns reported last fall and played in four games while the team was on the last eastern trip, but Taylor will not be seen until practice starts on Catalina island.

Kearns Hit .301.

Kearns is an eastern lad, living in Trenton, N. J. He's a red headed Irishman, weighing 180 pounds and is 5 feet 10½ inches in his socks. He was born on Jan. 1, 1900, which makes him 25 years of age and they say he's built on the plan of Hack Miller, only on not such generous proportions.

In the Texas league last year, he played 148 games. He scored 89 runs and made 167 hits for a total of 246 bases. He poled 39 two baggers, 5 triples and 10 homers. His batting average was .301 and his fielding was nifty and fast at all times. In the four games he played with the Cubs at first base last fall, he made a fine impression as a fielder and hit for an average of .250, but one of his blows was a screecher that won a game.

Taylor is an outfielder and the report is that he knows how to go and get 'em and can wing the ball back as fast as the best of them. He's a native of Texas, living in Burnett. He's lanky and active, being 5 feet, 11 inches high and weighing only 160 pounds. He will be 25 years of age on next Feb. 9 and his record indicates he's the better slugger of the two. He was in 146 games and scored 106 runs. He slammed out 182 base hits for a total of 281 bases, there being 37 doubles, 13 three baggers and a dozen homers in the collection. His average for the year was .324.

Fine Chance to Stick.

Being an outfielder, it looks as if he will have a swell chance to break in with the Cubs because Killefer is anxious to get a hard right handed hitter among his outer circle of men and this lad's record indicates he can pole 'em.

There is little chance for Young Mr. Kearns to crowd Charley Grimm off first base, but there is a possibility he, too, will be given a trial as an outfielder. The Cubs have four fine defensive outfielders in Grigsby, Wels, Heathcote, and Statz. The latter is the only right handed hitter of the bunch and he fell off miserably in his stick work last year. The others hit well, but were somewhat handicapped against southpaw pitching.

With the two youngsters, Kearns and Taylor, both right handed hitters and apparently sluggers, it might be possible to shift outfielders next season and thus get away from the weak attack against left handed pitching. Then of course, the Cubs still have Hack Miller who can go up and bust one in the pinch against either a right hander or a southpaw.

ST. PHILLIPS TO PUT BOXERS IN C. A. A. U. MEETS

Jim Mullen, athletic director of the St. Phillips A. C., yesterday announced he will enter a team of boxers in the central and middle states boxing championships of the A. A. U. Both tourneys will be held this month. Director Mullen is developing a team by staging amateur bouts in the St. Phillips A. C. gymnasium every Monday night. Ten bouts have been listed for tomorrow night and the team may meet Notre Dame in a dual meet the latter part of the month.

Director Mullen also announced that the Central A. A. U. basketball championships will be decided in the St. Phillips A. C. gymnasium.

St. Phillip A. C. Cagers to Play Columbus Big Five

St. Phillips A. C. and the Columbus Big Five, led by Dunne and Funk, former Big Ten cage stars, will clash Tuesday night at the St. Phillips club house, Kedzie avenue and Jackson boulevard. In a curtain raiser, the Chicago Brownies will meet the Waukegan girls.

RECORD CROWD AT MIAMI SEES TWIN HANDICAPS

Miami, Fla., Jan. 31.—A double handicap attraction, the Coral Gables and McAlister Hotel stakes, attracted the largest crowd of the meeting here this afternoon. The Coral Gables went to Bradelbane, who took the lead at once to win by a nose under a vigorous ride by Parke from Coxima, who beat Scotch Broom by two lengths for the place. Missionary captured the McAlister hotel handicap from Corinth after a spirited stretch duel. Ball Gee was a length back in third place.

BROWNS SIGN CHESTER FALK

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 31.—Business Manager Bill Friel of the St. Louis Americans announced tonight that an agreement had been reached between the club and Chester Falk, 19 year old University of Texas pitcher, for whose services the Browns have been negotiating. Falk is a brother of Bib Falk of the Chicago White Sox.

TROTTERS RACE FOR $25,000 AT AURORA JULY 31

BY FRANK S. COOKE.

Friday, July 31, has been set as the date of the first race for $25,000 in which 2:08 trotters will indulge and the scene will be on the new mile track at Aurora. The management of the association which has brought the Grand Circuit to Illinois has made good with its promise by announcing conditions of this feature, which promises to attract to the race course horsemen from all over this country with a sprinkling from Europe.

The ante in this race will be an even $500 which owners are expected to inclose under date of Feb. 24 and the day before the event each will contribute another $500, so that entries are expected only from men who have a lot of faith in their trotters, for they have a habit of going in 2:04 or better in the 2:08 stakes.

Kalamazoo Repeats the Derby.

William P. Engelman and associates, who have kept the game going in Kalamazoo while the rest of Michigan has been bone dry as far as high class racing is concerned, announce the renewal of the H. O. Reno pacing Derby, which gave the Celery city world-wide fame last summer. This $25,000 event which so far outranks anything else ever offered for the previously humble pacers will have a number of new and attractive angles this year.

Like the big trot at Aurora, there are seven moneys, but in the event the Derby is not rattled off in straight heats the eighth horse gets the $500, so it looks like a piece of change for a majority of the starters. Entries close on Feb. 17, and in view of the big entry last year and the unexpected outcome of the race, it is thought that pacers from everywhere will foregather at Kalamazoo.

Will Draw Crowd.

Coming between the $25,000 Geers Memorial trot at Toledo and the star event for the same gait at Aurora, the stake pacers will add novelty to the Kalamazoo week and again force landlords to bring the cots from storage and set them up verywhere but on the sidewalks.

Review of Motor Show Indicates Peak Auto Year

Stabilized Industry Is Ready to Meet U. S. Program.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

AFTER the tumult and shouting of automobile show week with its bewildering mass of new car models, Chicago motorists have settled down to the calm consideration of their 1925 schedules. The show this year afforded the best opportunity in years for study of every product offered by the greatest of transportation industries, while the annual salon in the Drake hotel furnished a graphic comparison between American and European methods of manufacture and design.

Both expositions left Chicago with the conviction that the automobile industry has reached a point of highest stability and that almost any car, purchased from a responsible maker whose finances have been trimmed to meet the new year's economic program, is a sound and lasting investment.

Following are the opinions of industrial leaders, gleaned from public statements made during the week, concerning the industry in general:

E. S. Jordan, president Jordan Motor Car company: "The saturation point will never be reached until every family has an automobile and none ever wear out. Transportation is the essence of civilization, and the motor car has made the United States a compact nation without division. Nineteen hundred and twenty-five will be a wonderful year for the industry."

A. R. Erskine, president Studebaker corporation: "Had the automobile industry not been born, and were we still in the 'horse age,' who will say that our industrial middle west, with its great population and wealth and cities like Detroit, Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, Cleveland, and Pittsburgh, would be anything like what it is? It has converted the great lakes section of our country into one of the greatest industrial districts of the earth."

Alvan Macauley, president Packard Motor Car company: "As we enter our second quarter century I believe we have at last reached a stage which permits us to announce in the markets of the world that the industry charged with the important task of providing mankind with one of its most indispensable transportation facilities has been stabilized. I believe the Packard has reached a point that it can say with confidence that while improvements will continue, they will not be spectacular; that no change will be made of sufficient importance in the 1930 car and the car of the present to warrant any owner doing other than wearing out his car."

C. H. Wills, president Wills-Ste. Claire: "You cannot estimate the economic contributions of the motor car, but its sociological contributions is vastly more unthinkable. Save only the Constitution itself, and the great American spirit this country has nothing so precious to American life and the American destiny, as the motor car. The blot of sectionalism has been cleaned off the map with gasoline."

Walter P. Chrysler, president, Maxwell Motor corporation: "Syncronized traffic control, one way streets, parking regulations, and innumerable traffic rules have all helped to relieve traffic congestion in our great cities, but the time has come when our American municipalities must comprehend that the motor car, truck and bus are the principal means of transportation in America, and that our cities must be adapted accordingly. Such a 206 foot highway as is now being built from Detroit to Pontiac, and such a 200 foot highway as is being built from New York to Jamaica, L. I., is the kind of highways that must come, and motor busses are bound to suppiant surface car lines in most cities."

R. H. Scott, president Reo Motor Car company: "Twenty-five years ago, or even twenty years ago, when Reo was in its first year, building automobiles was considered a 'game.' Now it is a business, and only those companies who soon learned to think of it as a business are now with us. Those of us who have seen all, or a greater part of this wonderful development, have witnessed progress unparalleled anywhere else in the history of industry."

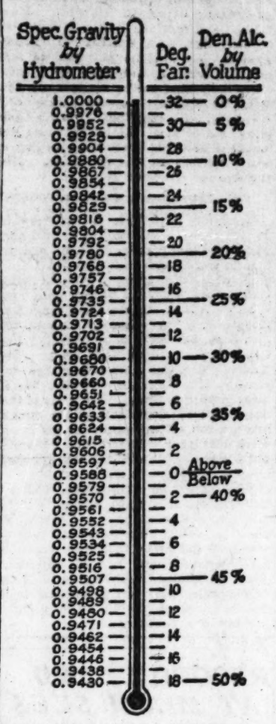
Alfred P. Sloan, president General Motors corporation: "The burden of seasonal stocking of cars is being lifted from the shoulders of distributors and dealers. In the early days the automobile was purely a fair weather commodity. Today the demand for motor cars exists throughout the year. Closed car sales are flattening the peak of spring demand and their popularity has made winter driving comfortable."

George H. Hannum, president Oakland Motor Car company: "The automobile manufacturer has done much to eliminate accidents insofar as the production of a safe vehicle is concerned. He also is ready and willing to spend time and money without stint to do more. He is standing shoulder to shoulder with every agency advocating safety and he has gained a good start in the task by putting his own house in order."

R. H. Rice, president Cadillac Motor Car company: "Citizens in every walk of life are directly affected by Federal motor car taxation, and it is to be hoped that steps will be taken in the next congress for the abolition of this tax, which, imposed as an emergency measure for war purposes, is now continued long after the emergency is passed and the cycle of readjustment well under way."

Roy D. Chapin, chairman highways committee, National Automobile Chamber of Commerce: "The influence of the United States in the building of good roads has become world wide. I believe it may be said that no other country in the world's history ever had so many or so fine roads. Certainly no country ever had so many citizens personally and vitally interested in their use."

WATCH YOUR RADIATOR



Here is the latest table worked out by the mechanical first aid department of the Chicago Motor club as a gauge for the use of anti-freeze solution in automobile cooling systems. Use of a hydrometer will show the volume of alcohol in the radiator. The table indicates the need of a 15 per cent solution at 23 degrees, a 30 per cent solution at 10, and a 40 per cent solution in zero weather.

Safety Work in Coast City Cuts Traffic Deaths

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—Children's deaths from automobile accidents were cut down 21 per cent below expectancy in Los Angeles, according to a detailed report just received from the coroner's office. These are the first comparative figures available since safety work was inaugurated in the public schools by the public safety department of the Automobile Club of Southern California. This was nearly three years ago, but the first authenticated comparative result of this new curriculum in the schools was made possible with the compilation of figures for last year.

These results were accomplished in the face of some 18 per cent in the number of motor vehicles operating and a gain of 36,000 in school enrollment, or approximately 21 per cent. In total fatalities a reduction was made of from twelve per 100,000 school children to a fraction more than nine per 100,000. The decrease in the expected child mortality in the city due to motor vehicles is highly gratifying and it is believed that the result achieved will bring about amplification of this work in all the schools of southern California.

The total fatalities in Los Angeles county a reduction was made of from twenty-five per 100,000 population to twenty-four per 100,000. Of the total of 467 deaths, the largest number is attributed to so-called "jay walking." Other major causes include incompetent handling of cars, speeding, and right of way violation. Of the total fatalities of the year only fifteen were traceable to defective equipment of vehicles, leading to the conclusion that over 95 per cent of the deaths were due to conditions that could be controlled by human agencies.

A new traffic ordinance was placed in effect in Los Angeles, Jan. 24. The principal changes from the old law are designed to protect the pedestrian. While a person on foot is forbidden to cross the streets in the congested districts not at intersections, other privileges are extended him, the chief one being cross walks where the pedestrian has right of way ever vehicular traffic. Of the total deaths last year in Los Angeles county, 224 out of the 467 were due to collisions between motor vehicles and pedestrians.

One Tough Country.

The motorist in Sweden is inspected four times a year and without warning. Cars may be stopped in the middle of the road and the inspector take the wheels off in order to test steering gear and brakes. Lights are also inspected.

The supervision applies to condition and equipment of the car, its operation, personal responsibility of the driver, and regularity in the conduct of business. In addition there is a constant checking of speed, size of loads, wheel pressure, conformity to published schedules of trips, and the general order and neatness of cars.

Every passenger must be provided with a ticket, and even this is subject to inspection in order to avoid counterfeits.

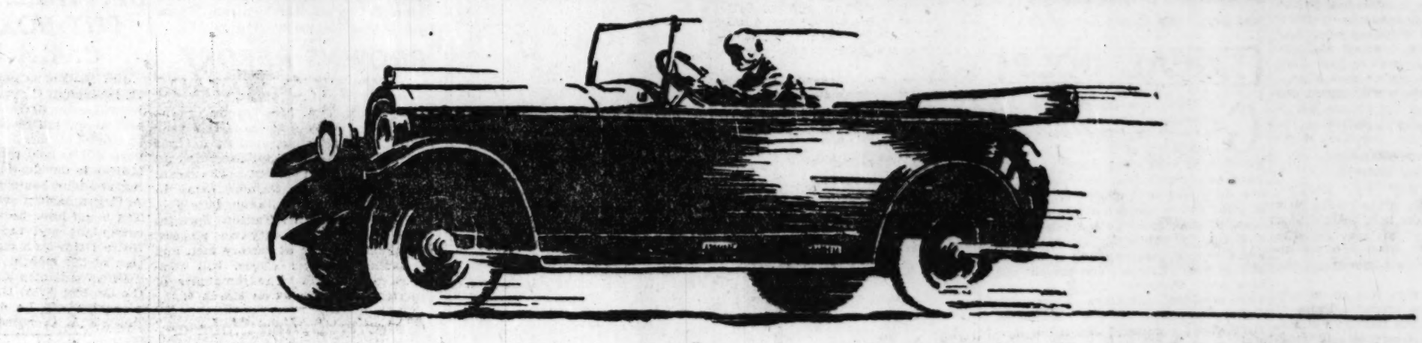
School Boy Patrol to Be Considered at N. E. A. Meeting

FOLLOWING the decision of the American Automobile association to get behind the schoolboy patrol movement, the Chicago Motor club will take another step in making the patrol idea as worked out in Chicago a national movement when it presents the idea to the National Educational association, division of superintendents, at the annual meeting of this organization in Cincinnati the latter part of February.

William McAndrew, superintendent of schools, is interested in the boys' patrol and it was on his advice that the club will take the subject up at the educators' conference.

Cleveland Six Makes 1000 Miles in 745 Minutes

Averaging Over 80 Miles An Hour!



Now there can be no question as to the supremacy of Cleveland Six performance.

Five weeks ago, at Culver City (Cal.), its record of 1,000 miles in 848 minutes electrified America.

On January 27th (also at Culver City) Cleveland Six lowered this record to 1,000 miles in 745 minutes. This astounding performance is 1 hour and 43 minutes faster—an average of over 80 miles an hour.

It is 41 minutes faster than the time recently made by a higher-priced six-cylinder car.

It ranks as one of the outstanding feats in the entire 25 year history of automotive development and progress.

Yet this second run was made with a deeper purpose than the accomplishment of this amazing speed and endurance victory.

It was made to verify, under the most gruelling conditions, the superb design, materials and workmanship that stamp the Cleveland Six as one of the outstanding cars of all time.

You may never drive 1,000 miles in 745 minutes. You may never subject your car to so heartbreaking a test of endurance.

But whatever Cleveland Six model you select will give you the same unexampled engineering and structural qualities that have made this marvelous feat possible.

$7,000,000 Spent During 1924 on Lincoln Highway

States Vote Funds to Push Feature Trunk Line.

BY A. F. BEMENT.

[Vice President, the Lincoln Highway Assn.]

WITH the advent of 1925 the Lincoln Highway association enters upon its twelfth year of promotional activity. Its directors will soon gather in Detroit or New York upon call of President J. Newton Gunn to consider plans for 1925 and to review the wonderful progress in the development of the Lincoln highway which was recorded in 1924.

Detailed figures still are lacking as to construction accomplished in many of the states and counties between New York and San Francisco last year, but incomplete figures indicate that in 1924 considerably over $7,000,000 was invested in permanent betterment of the route and in maintenance along its 3,100 miles between the Hudson river and San Francisco bay. The completion of the detailed tabulation of the year's work is expected to indicate that not less than 250 miles of new construction were completed.

Sweeping victories for good roads were chalked up in the November elections in many Lincoln highway states and counties where progress has lagged in the past. The construction programs which now stand approved in such states as Ohio, Iowa, Nebraska, and Nevada indicate that 1925 will see the elimination of many of the remaining unimproved gaps in America's transcontinental "Main street" and that a year from now the Lincoln highway can be announced as practically 90 per cent completed.

No question is more often asked of the headquarters of the Lincoln Highway association than "When will the Lincoln way be finished?" Situations not yet cleared up and sections of the Lincoln highway not yet in line for immediate construction west of Pittsburgh in Pennsylvania and west of Salt Lake City in Utah make it impossible to estimate the date of final completion.

It can be said, however, that the spring of 1926 should see nearly 2,300 miles of the route finished.

What does that mean? It means that bisecting America, through the heart of its most densely populated sections, will run a road thoroughly passable for every foot of the distance between the Atlantic and the Pacific and actually completed to the standard O. K.d by the United States government and by the state highway departments of the eleven states it traverses for all but some 300 miles of the total distance.

What a different picture is presented now for the contemplation of those "dreamers" who with Carl G. Fisher gathered together in 1913 and formed an organization to back the development of a great arterial road which would become the main line of an ultimate nation-wide motor transportation system.

Since that date $60,000,000 has been invested by the states and counties and by the federal government in shortening the Lincoln highway, in relocating it, cutting down the grades, widening curves, in pavement, in the elimination of railroad grade crossings, in graveling the long stretches across the western plains, and in all those improvements which have brought the Lincoln highway today to the status of the longest and most highly improved, continuous route on the face of the earth.

Sixty million dollars! Three times the sum originally estimated by the founders of the Lincoln Highway association as required to complete the route Certainly $15,000,000 more will be spent within the next two and a half years.

And when finally completed, for the first time, it will represent a far-seeing investment of at least $75,000,000—an investment paying annual dividends to those communities, counties, and states which have contributed to liberally to its development, and still greater dividends to the public of the United State, which, through the federal treasury, has also done much to bring the route to prompt and satisfactory condition.

Space does not permit a detailed summary of the many important accomplishments which marked the road building season of 1924. It suffices to state here for those who are now considering the great transcontinental tour for next spring that the Lincoln highway is now completed across the following states, a distance of 880 miles: New Jersey, Illinois, Wyoming, and California.

In the following states the Lincoln highway is so near to completion and the work is so rapidly progressing that the tourist of 1925 will have no cause for complaint no matter what the weather: Pennsylvania (where a paved detour takes care of the short west of Pittsburgh link), Indiana, and Nevada. The following states will in varying degrees still possess in 1925 a mileage of the Lincoln highway whereon difficulties may be encountered, depending upon the weather: Ohio, Iowa, Nebraska, and Utah.

In Iowa the situation is yearly growing more favorable. The Nebraska state highway engineer has an ambitious program in contemplation. Work of a permanent character will progress from the eastern half of the state near Omaha, where the state's densest population is concentrated, gradually westward during the next few years.

Utah remains the one questionable state. The situation has been immeasurably brightened by the recent defeat of a governor who has been opposed to the completion of the Lincoln highway west of Salt Lake City.

The new governor has not expressed himself relative to the addition of the Lincoln highway to Utah's federal aid system and the ultimate completion of the stretch across the Great Salt Lake desert, but at least there is no reason to believe that he is antagonistic to the interests of the through travel seeking to reach the Pacific coast via the shortest and most direct route through Salt Lake City.

Ohio will begin in the spring a comprehensive Lincoln way construction program which, within two years, will place it among the front rank of Lincoln highway states.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question $5 is awarded to William E. Sallmann, 6750 South Claremont avenue, Chicago.

The Question.

What interested you most at the Automobile show?

Where Asked.

The Silver Jubilee show in the Coliseum.

The Answers.

Charles J. Ellias, New York City, cashier—To me the most impressive feature of the show was the nightly demonstration of the illuminating system and the patriotic enthusiasm that marks every big automobile exposition. The artistic side of the show this year beats anything attempted in the past.

John H. Conway, 1422 Jonquil terrace, newspaper man—I was most impressed with the improved design of the eight cylinder cars. The silver tower was a new and appropriate feature of this, the twenty-fifth annual show.

Eugene F. Doherty, 111 West Washington street, bond salesman—The success of the automobile industry was revealed at this year's show, and I think that was the outstanding feature. The large number of manufacturers who have decided to build eight cylinder motors and the increasing number of cars equipped with four wheel brakes are most important. Jubilee show decorations this year were also a matter of unusual interest.

Miss Bercha Colloms, 506 North Griffin street, Danville, Ill.—I have never before attended an automobile show, and the thing that impressed me most was the attendance. All of these men gathered around exhibits must mean business. The silver tower in the center of the show is one of the most beautiful decorations I have seen.

Miss Ella West, 30 Pine street, Danville, Ill.—The thing that impressed me most was the crowd. The new designs and colors in cars were fascinating, too, and the decorations were more than worth the price of admission.

MOTOR CARS WORTH $2,000,000,000 ARE JUNKED EACH YEAR

Out of the 4,000,000 automobiles built each year in the United States, cars to the value of the appalling sum of $2,000,000,000 are junked each year.

Motor Coaches Replace Trolley Lines in East

NEW YORK.—After having transported passengers through the streets of Rutland, Vt., for forty years, the trolleys of that city have been withdrawn in favor of busses. This move entirely eliminates electric railways as a transportation factor in and around Rutland, other lines connecting Rutland with neighboring towns having been supplanted previously by bus service.

Among other trolley lines which have been displaced by the bus within the last month is one formerly operated between Providence, R. I., and North Scituate, Mass., by the United Electric railways company. The company has been authorized to operate busses as a substitute service.

Among the latest cities on the Pacific coast to abandon street cars in favor of busses are Astoria, Ore., and Santa Cruz, Cal.

Hills?—there are no hills any more!

This Rickenbacker Six (new series) possesses super-power.

Hills that worry ordinary cars simply do not exist so far as the Rickenbacker owner knows.

Grades seem to level down and hills roll out flat before you, as your front wheels approach them.

Those you used to labor up, now glide under the car at 35 miles per hour, or faster, if you care to go.

The same power that gives you great speed on level stretches also affords you excess hill climbing ability.

A very large crank-shaft with seven big main bearings and a perfect lubrication system, enable this car to climb grades all day on high without apparent effort—or the slightest after effect.

And, when coming down the same steep grades, you enjoy the comfortable feeling that your car has the greatest brakes ever known.

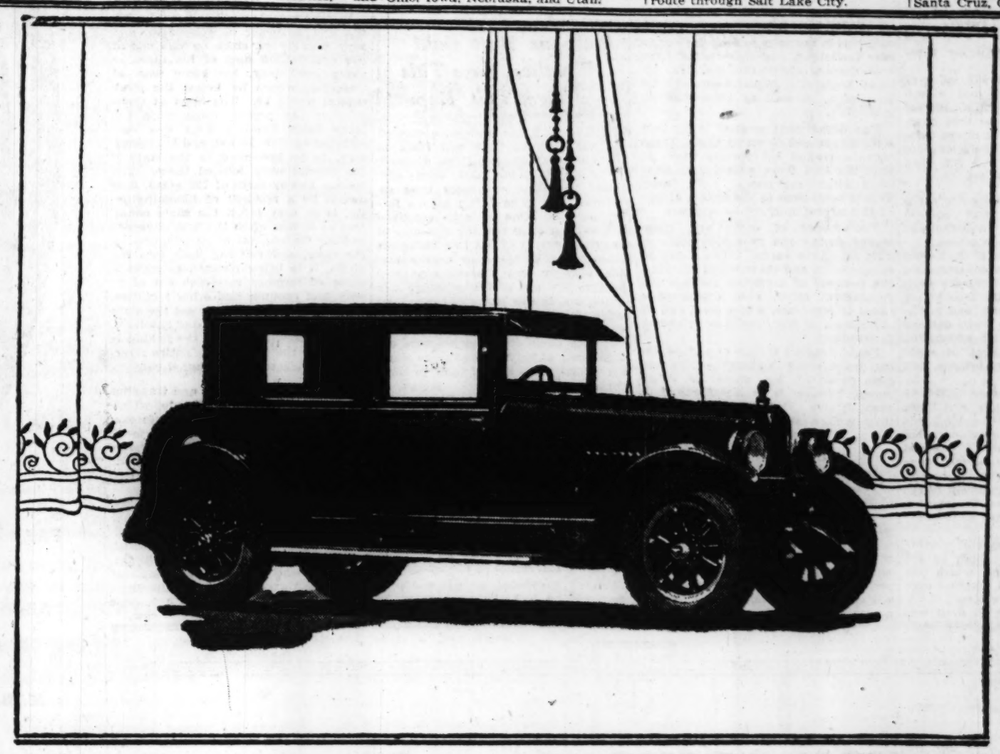
The only Four-Door Coach-Brougham on the American Market



For 10 Years the World's Greatest Buy

None Has Equaled Its Value

Hudson's position as the world's greatest value is not merely a new attainment. For ten years the Super-Six has stood alone in mechanical supremacy. Basic patents have kept others from copying its motor. The smoothness and long life it gives are exclusive. No motor has yet equaled the Super-Six in smoothness and long, economical car life.

A Leadership Never Disputed

Hudson, because of the simplicity of the Super-Six, has always enjoyed manufacturing advantages that permitted a lower selling price than is possible with more complicated types. That, in part, accounts for its leadership for ten years as the World's Greatest Value.

But Hudson's position is not limited to its motor. It has created more body types that have later become the vogue of the industry than any other maker. Hudson cars have always been regarded as smartest in line and beauty.

You hear everyone speak of Hudson value. To many that means lower first cost than is to be found elsewhere. Hudson was first by months to give closed car comforts at exactly open car cost. To hundreds of thousands of owners, Hudson value means the most economical service in operation and maintenance. No car ever built has equaled Hudson's record in that respect. For ten years the Super-Six has proved its lasting endurance. And while those cars of a decade ago still creditably account for themselves, today's Hudson, improved in many ways, is smoother, more lasting and more economical.

Still to others, Hudson's trim beauty is outstanding. No wonder, then, that when Hudson value is spoken, all wanted qualities are included. Hudson is the World's Greatest Value, because it costs much less than any comparable car.

Because it has proved a longer life,—

And because it has always provided better looks and more comfort at less money.

Hudson has always set the pace in car appearance, in performance, in quality, and in price.

No rival disputes that and every motorist knows it.

Ancient Works Fade Before Size of Road Building

Pennsylvania Finds Few Comparisons in 1924 Report.

HARRISBURG, Pa.—A train of steel hopper cars extending from Altoona to Englewood station, Chicago, a distance of 574 miles, would have been required to transport the materials used by the Pennsylvania department of highways during 1924. William H. Connell, engineering executive of the department, in a statement yesterday told that the department built 1,208 miles of roadway during 1924.

The material involved in the department's activities for the year totaled 3,462,888 cubic yards, or 3,606,815 tons. To transport this vast quantity would have required 72,130 steel hopper cars of a capacity of fifty tons each. These cars would have made 900 freight trains of average size and twenty miles of freight engines and cabin cars would have been required for these trains.

The department built 567 miles of reinforced concrete road and eleven miles of bituminous road on a concrete base. There entered into this pavement 1,131,254 cubic yards of concrete, and this concrete was sufficient in quantity to construct a wall 286 miles long, 10 feet high, and 2 feet thick.

In transporting 3,462,888 cubic yards of material 2,360 trucks were required and these trucks traveled a distance of 6,200,000 miles during the season.

Mention has been made of the actual concrete employed in the department's operations. The department for various purposes used 360,400 tons of cement, 787,800 tons of sand, and 2,418,000 tons of stone. The stone entered into not only actual road building, but into the surface treatment of highways, the construction of bridges, and so on.

Altogether there were 73,334,000 cubic feet of dry materials, and these would have made 1,746,000 cubic yards of concrete. The Washington monument is 55 feet square at the base and 555 feet high. The concrete made from the road materials would be sufficient to construct a monument of the same proportions as the Washington monument 212 feet square at the base and 2,140 feet high.

The volume would be sufficient to construct a pyramid as high as the great pyramid of Cheops, which was 482 feet high, and would cover an area of six and three-quarters acres.

The bituminous material used was sufficient in quantity to float the steamship Leviathan, and there would have been room alongside this vessel for six small boats of a displacement of 1,000 tons each, as well as three 100 ton schooners.

The department erected 10,800 cast iron danger and direction signs. These signs averaged 200 pounds each, so that the iron from which they were constructed represents 1,080 tons. This is equivalent to the weight of five of the largest railroad locomotives.

The amount of earth and stone moved during the year approximated 2,990,925 cubic yards. This was on construction and other work. Through the removal of a similar yardage the department might have excavated a canal 60 feet wide, 6 feet deep, and 47 miles long, or from Harrisburg almost to Reading.

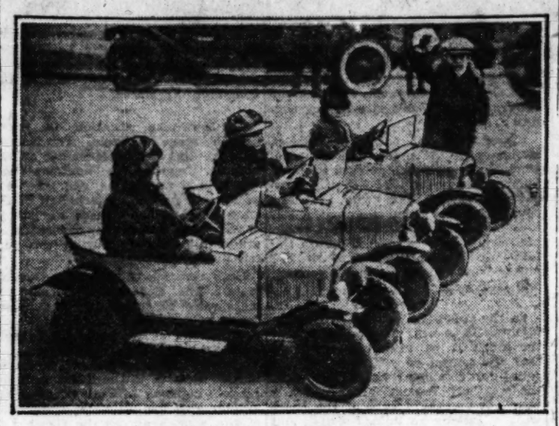
Pennsylvania's system of whitewashing poles along highway routes has been emulated by numerous other states, because it is a safeguard in night driving. During 1924 the department whitewashed 310,200 poles.

Urge Gas Tax.

An average of 2 cents a day will pay a 2 cent gasoline tax for the majority of Minnesota automobile owners.

The forecast is repeated in a highway bulletin this week, following in formal discussion of gas tax plans in committees of the legislature. There is added the story of the amusing experience of an assistant in the work of collecting gasoline tax figures for the lawmakers.

FLIVVER FOR FRENCH KIDS



These toy automobiles, designed by Andre Citroen, the "Ford" of France, helped kids in Paris to enjoy the holidays. They are exact duplicates of the five horse power flivver so popular in Europe. The picture shows the start of an exciting Christmas race on the Bois de Boulogne.

Balloons Beat Cold Weather, Says This Tire Test Report

THIS year it has been demonstrated that balloon tires will work in snow as well as in sand. Reports from motorists and tests conducted by Miller engineers have established this to be a fact says a factory bulletin. One motorist equipped with balloon tires had the pleasure of dragging several of his less fortunate comrades out of the snow near Ashtabula recently and thereby converted them to the use of low pressure tire equipment. In this particular case they had high pressure tires and even though they worked their cars on low gear they could effect no progress until the user of balloon tires came along and pulled them out of their predicament.

A tractor at a point near Daytona did a thriving business recently by extricating automobiles from Florida sand. These drivers would invariably drive their cars, equipped with high pressure tires, confidently into the sand only to flounder around and finally seek help.

The motorist equipped with the balloon tires happened along and found one of these cars so floundering. He offered his help and with no difficulty pulled the driver out of his trouble.

Having succeeded so admirably in one case he had the opportunity of helping several others, which he did.

Picture Book Land Along Mississippi Opened to Motors

DUBUQUE, Ia.—Recent improvements in the roads in Wisconsin between this city and La Crosse make it possible for tourists the coming summer to keep close to the river bank all the way through the most interesting part of the new federal fish and game preserve.

Until recently it was best to go to Prairie du Chien from Dubuque by way of Bloomington and Lancaster, interior towns in Grant county, but the development of the county road system in that county, which calls itself the California of Wisconsin, enables the lover of scenery and life on the upper Mississippi to make the trip through Potosi, Cassville, Glen Haven, and Bagley and pass through the Nelson Dewey state park at the mouth of the Wisconsin river, before arriving at Bridgeport, where that river is bridged about five miles from Prairie du Chien.

While the state park is named after the first governor of Wisconsin, and very fittingly so, since he was one of the outstanding men of his times in every good way, his home was at Cassville, where he hoped the state capital would be. The hotel at Cassville at the present time is in the large brick building that was constructed by Gov. Dewey and his townsmen, to be presented to the state if the capital were located there. The Nelson Dewey farm of 730 acres, now owned by a resident of Bloomington, Ill., is in very much the same condition as it was when the first governor had it. On account of its situation by the river, and running back into the bluffs, it is being planned to make a place of summer residence out of it, with golf grounds and other facilities. A movement is on foot to get the state to use part of it for a bass hatchery. In the Cassville vicinity the fishing is said to be the best on the entire river, from sunfish to large channel cat.

At this season hunting and trapping are at their height. Dubuque, which is one of the leading fur manufacturing cities in the country, finishes more than $2,500,000 worth of pelts annually and gets them largely from this region, along the river in the new fish and game preserve.

Grant county has set aside $300,000 more to put in the riverside and other county roads this year and next.

When the Grant highway pavement, now finished through Elgin, Rochester, Freeport and Stockton, is completed next year through Galena to Dubuque, this river region will be as accessible from Chicago as Green Bay is now.

MAXWELL

Excels All Other Fours By Right of Excess Values

Stated in the simplest terms, the reason why the new good Maxwell deserves to outsell all other cars in its field is because it offers the greatest value on the market.

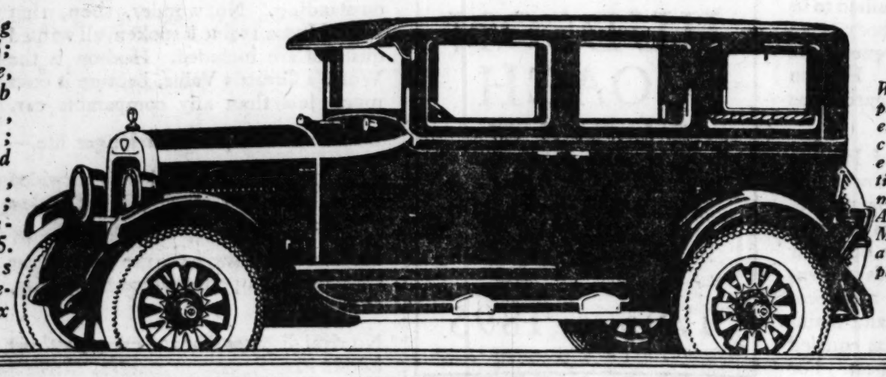
It took a great organization, great plants, great facilities and resources to create such values at Maxwell prices, but it also took the engineering genius of the Maxwell-Chrysler staff to develop in a four-cylinder car the qualities you find in the new good Maxwell.

No other four has ever been able to combine 58 miles an hour, an acceleration that sweeps the car from 5 to 25 miles in 8 seconds, a fuel economy that carries you an average of 25 miles with a gallon of gasoline.

No other four produces so much power with so little effort, with such a complete absence of vibration. No other four carries you so comfortably at all speeds and under all road conditions. No other four handles so easily.

These excess values that set the new good Maxwell apart from all other fours cover every phase of performance and ownership. Many of them a single ride reveals.

Touring Car, $895; ClubCoupe, $995; Club Sedan, $1045; Standard Sedan, $1095; Special Sedan, $1245. All prices F. O. B. Detroit. Tax Extra.



We are pleased to extend the convenience of time-payments. Ask about Maxwell's attractive plan.

Double Deck Cow Adds to Farmers' Revenues of Profit

Helps Him to Supply Milk and Meat Demands as Markets Change.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

This is the third of a series of articles dealing with dual purpose cows. Letters will be welcome from farmers, particularly those who have had a chance to compare revenues that come from herds producing milk alone, or beef alone, with the income from a dual purpose herd that produces both milk and beef.

ROBERT HOBBS of Kelmscott, England, has been quoted widely in America, as well as foreign countries, concerning his conviction that "to serve a densely populated country dual quality cattle are one of the supreme factors in the production of the three great food essentials—grain, meat, and milk."

The wisdom of such an authority as Mr. Hobbs, who has had more than thirty years' experience in the breeding of dual purpose shorthorns, is worth something to young American farmers who are planning to spend their time in the great game of helping to feed a hungry world.

No wiseacre can lay down a definite rule or formula for farmers to use in mapping out their course during the next ten, twenty, or thirty years, but there are certain tendencies clearly indicated in this country that will help in the planning. Countries differ; what British farmers find a profitable line to follow may not prove worth while in this country. Even sections of the country differ agriculturally. In planning their future program, farmers must see America first and make a detailed study of the prospective changes in their own district.

Each Has His Troubles.

In the corn and dairy belts the cow—dairy and beef—plays an important part in the scheme of farming. New conditions spring up constantly, causing breeders to stop and wonder which road to take. Dairymen in the Chicago milk district have their troubles and feeders in the corn belt and breeders on the western range have theirs. They are always wondering whether to expand or restrict the production of milk and beef.

Hobbs points out that in Argentina milk production beyond the level necessary for the rearing of calves born on the ranches is regarded in the light of a nuisance, while in dairying districts of Australia and New Zealand beefing qualities are almost entirely ignored.

"So long as the regions immediately adjoining these, agriculturally speaking, 'single purpose areas' undergo no further development, the single aim remains, but the moment the surrounding country makes appreciable industrial growth the agricultural development takes another course," he says. "It may almost be said that it is not until the population increases greatly and large cities make their appearance that the proper development of agriculture commences. The first consequence of industrial extension upon the farming of the district is an attempt to meet the demand for cattle capable of producing a good yield of milk, calves suitable for grazing into bullocks of high quality, and a good carcass of beef at the end of their milking days."

Shorthorn Is Popular.

It is this condition that has made the dairy Shorthorn popular, not only in the United Kingdom, but also in the thickly populated districts of the eastern states in this country, as well as in South America, South Africa, New Zealand, and in most parts of the world where the population is outgrowing food production.

Failing to make the proper allowance for the rapid changes that are taking place in this country, and marketing their eggs all in one basket, has been, perhaps, the reason many farmers have suffered losses during the last decade. If profits are figured over long periods, producers of the highest records of milk and beef may not be the ones who have the biggest bank accounts, although it is generally understood that the highest producing cows are the ones that really pay.

One of the greatest breeders in England once said that it is not necessarily the cow that gives the most milk in any one year that brings in the most profit. "It is the cow that will live, thrive, and breed regularly for several years and which takes, say, the average of five or six years of milking that gives the best average."

Must Look Ahead.

Cattle breeders, whether beef or dairy, would probably be able to handle their business much more intelligently if they would figure their operations on the basis of from seven to ten years, rather than on the size of the annual milk check or the total yearly returns on beef cattle.

Most farmers think a cow has reached the end of her period of usefulness when she is about 7 years old. Cows eventually travel the same route, and wind up at the butcher's block.

Twenty-five per cent of all the cattle brought to the Chicago live stock market are of the dairy breed, according to rough estimates made by C. A. Stewart, executive secretary of the National Live Stock Producers' association. This does not include calves. About 75 per cent of the calves that come to the market, including those up to 4 months of age and weighing 300 pounds, are of the dairy breed. More of the beef calves are fed and sent to market later.

Facts for Breeders.

In making comparisons of what the various breeds at different ages bring, Mr. Stewart brings out some valuable facts to the breeder who is puzzled in deciding which way to go. He says beef and dairy calves 2 months old weighing from 100 to 120 pounds, the size of vealers ordinarily handled on the central markets, usually sell at about the same price.

Both beef and dairy breeds of vealers were recently selling at about $11 a head.

There are two outlets for the dairy calf. If it is not used as a vealer it is used either for breeding or dairy purposes. Dairy calves do not respond well to feeding, according to Mr. Stewart. The feeder gets growth but not flesh in feeding them.

Mr. Stewart's figures show that if a beef and a dairy calf were put in the same lot and fed until a year old the beef calf would bring about $25 more than the dairy calf.

Using recent quotations, he says a dairy calf fed until it is a yearling, weighing about 700 pounds, brought from 8½ to 9 cents a pound, or a total of $59.50@63, while the beef calf, fed in the same lot, would weigh about 800 pounds and sold for 10½@11 cents a pound, or a total of $84@88.

If the same calves are roughed through and sold as yearlings the beef calf brings from $18 to $20 more than the dairy calf. The latter weighs in the neighborhood of 600 and sold recently at 4@4½ cents a pound, or a total of $25@27, while the beef calf weighed 700 pounds and sold for 6¼@6½ cents a pound, or a total of $43.75@45.50.

Beef Cow in Lead.

Assuming that the calves are heifers and are kept until they are seven years old—the age when a cow's period of usefulness usually ends—Mr. Stewart shows that the beef animal would bring much more. If sold as milkers for immediate slaughter, the average dairy cow at that age will weigh, he says, about 900 pounds. Such have recently sold for about 3 cents a pound. This would bring $27. The beef cow would weigh about 1,050 pounds and sell for 4 cents a pound, a total of $42, or $15 more than the dairy cow.

Many farmers feed their old cows before marketing them for beef. The dairy cow, if fed, weighs about 950 pounds and sold recently for 3½ to 3¾ cents, or $33.25 to $35.62. The beef cow weighs about 1,150 pounds and sold at 4¾ to 5 cents a pound, or $54.62 to $57.50. In round numbers, the beef cow would bring $21 more than the dairy cow.

HOLDER OF WORLD'S RECORD

TOPS LIST OF ALL COWS ON BUTTERFAT PRODUCTION—Melba 15th of Darbalara, a Milking Shorthorn, dual purpose breed, captured the world's 365 day butterfat record by producing 1,614 pounds. She produced 32,522 pounds of milk during the year. The great butterfat champion of all breeds is owned by J. T. Cole, Gundaigai, New South Wales, Australia. Her record was made under official supervision of the New South Wales agricultural department, and exceeds the former record of 1,349 pounds held by a Canadian cow.

Federal Report Shows Serious Hog Shortage

Uncle Sam's count on the hog crop in this country shows it was as small in 1924 as it has been any year during the last decade, and an acute shortage of hog products is ahead for 1926. This is indicated in the recent Washington report of the December survey, which shows that sows farrowed last fall were 28.2 per cent fewer than in the fall of 1923. The decrease in pigs, however, brightens the situation a little; the decrease was 22.2 per cent, due to bigger litters being saved.

On top of this discouraging hog report, the government estimates that the number of sows to farrow in the spring in the corn belt will be reduced 15 to 25 per cent, with a similar decline for the country as a whole. Last year's pig crop in the corn belt was 19 per cent less than in 1923. Coupling this with the fact that a shorter spring pig crop is ahead and the movement of hogs to market almost as much as it was during the previous year, with the December slaughter the largest on record, some idea of the seriousness of the situation may be gained.

Urbana Gives Course to Dairy Manufacturers

The annual dairy manufacturers' two weeks' short course is being attended by butter and ice cream makers from all sections of Illinois and several other nearby states at the state college of agriculture at Urbana, Ill. The first week was devoted to the testing of dairy products and the manufacture of butter, while this week will be spent in the manufacture of ice cream, stressing quality throughout the course.

Skilled manufacturers of central Illinois left their factories to attend the short course and give practical talks on butter making, procuring cream for commercial plants, handling eggs by a creamery company, manufacturing condensed buttermilk for hogs and poultry, the value of condensed buttermilk as a feed, and the marketing of ice cream.

According to the announcement of A. S. Ambrose of the university's dairy department, the college's dairy plant, recognized as one of the best equipped college plants in the country, has been turned over to the short course.

Short Course at Purdue.

Purdue university, Lafayette, Ind., will hold its annual farm business short course at the school of agriculture from Feb. 16 to 20. All phases of the economics of farming, including marketing, will be discussed by the various speakers and instructors during the four day course. At least fifty farmers are expected to attend.

MOTORDOM

It's Easy to Keep Battery in Shape, and This Tells How

Give It a Drink When It Needs One, and Be Sure It's Clean.

BY ERWIN GREER.

WHY is it that the battery engineer, with his university training, is allowed to turn loose blobs and gobs of words on an unsuspecting public? He evidently means all right, but when we come to figure out why our battery is batting his technical discourse only tends to further balls us up.

You wash yourself to keep clean. You take a drink because you are thirsty. All right, then. Give your battery a cleaning every so often, and more often a drink of distilled water, and your troubles will be over. That's all there is to it.

A storage battery is exceedingly sensitive to dirt. It requires only a minute quantity of dust or impurity in the water used to replenish the cells to produce a sort of "foot and mouth disease" known as local action, which will eat away at the plates and greatly shorten their life. Bits of metals are especially injurious, but it is never safe to let an impurity of any kind get in. Keep the tops of the cells clean and dry. Before removing the screw plugs for inspection see that all dirt is wiped away. If any acid has sputtered out, sponge it away with a neutralizing solution of baking soda in water. Unless great care is used, attempting to wipe away the unneutralized acid usually results in spreading it over the connecting wires, where it will cause corrosion troubles. Lay the screw plugs upside down on the top of the cell or, better still, place them on a clean paper or board.

Keep the cells filled to the correct level. The top edges of the plates should be covered one-half inch deep, or half way between the top of the plates and the under side of the cover. If too full, some liquid is apt to be pushed out by bubbles of gas. If the plates are allowed to stand uncovered they will soon go to pieces. A glass tube let down till it touches the plates, closed by a finger and then withdrawn, furnishes an easy means of measuring the depth above the plates. Only pure distilled water should be used. Store it in clean glass or earthenware; never in metal containers.

If a battery gets low or "empty" it is often not necessary to "have it charged" at a battery service station. If the car is used, but the battery is given a rest for a few days, the generator, if working properly, will charge it. This means little battery use, no unnecessary lights, and especially no continued battery cranking. If, after a hundred miles of charging and little or no use of the battery, it is still low and no grounds or "shorts" are found on any of the wires, then it is time to visit the battery service station, not before.

The greater number of starts and stops, the greater the care required to see that, before cranking begins, everything is made ready to enable a prompt start of the engine. Only those whose money is more abundant than their gray matter should hold the starter button down while trying to find out why the engine won't start. After such a workout the battery is as much "all in" as a sprinter after a closely contested quarter mile race.

In winter the battery has the odds heavily against it. Its work is much harder because of stiff oil and cold gasoline, and, in addition, the low temperature reduces its own ability to recover and to build up charge. Hence extra care is needed to use the battery as little as possible. Its work may be lightened by housing and blanketing the "tin horse" and by slowly pouring a quart of boiling water over the carburetor and intake manifold before attempting to start the engine on a cold morning.

It Looks Just as Well as it Rides and Performs

The final test of any automobile is performance and this is particularly true of the Chrysler Six.

To appreciate Chrysler riding ease, Chrysler roadability, Chrysler power and Chrysler agility, you must drive the car or ride in it.

Then you begin to understand why it is the talk of the country, why motorists invested $50,000,000 in its superior qualities the first year, why the factory built and shipped 32,000 cars during the same period.

But a visit to the Chrysler display rooms is a profitable experience in itself. You will observe at once that both the open and the enclosed models are far in advance of conventional ideas of design and beauty.

The low hung comfort of the Chrysler, the low roof, the graceful lines, the conservation of space, weight, height and length—all these are assets which every motorist is entitled to enjoy.

The Touring Car, $1395; The Phaeton, $1495; The Roadster, $1625; The Sedan, $1825; The Royal Coupe, $1895; The Brougham, $1965; The Imperial $2065; The Crown-Imperial, $2195. All prices f. o. b. Detroit subject to current government tax.

Table Quality Vegetables Listed in

The Gateway to Better Gardens

Vaughan's Gardening Illustrated

FLAVOR in vegetables, like the dew, vanishes early. Once out of the ground the loss begins. Sweet corn loses 40 per cent of its sweetness 18 hours after picking, government tests show. The sugar in all vegetables begins turning to starch the moment they are picked, dulling their fine flavor. Things grown in your own garden do taste better.

Days often elapse before market vegetables reach your kitchen. Professional gardeners grow market varieties; they cannot afford to grow tasty little morsels whose juiciness would prevent their shipping.

You can! And Vaughan's 1925 Gardening Illustrated shows you just the varieties to plant for flavor and tenderness—for table quality.

THIS GROUP ESPECIALLY APPETIZING

Here is a list of vegetables selected for flavor. A package of each will be mailed to you for $1.50—or pick out the kinds you like. 10 cents each.

Beans—Round Pod Kidney Wax; Stringless Green Pod; Limas—Carpenteria
Chinese Cabbage—Vaughan's Pe Tsai
Carrot—Nantes Half Long Scarlet
Sweet Corn—Vaughan's Michigan grown Golden Bantam
Cucumber—The Vaughan
Lettuce Leaf—Prize Head; Head—Vaughan's All Seasons; Romaine—Express Cos
Peas—Little Marvel, dwarf; Quite Content, tall
Squash—Table Queen
Tomato—Vaughan's Select Earliana; Improved New Stone

90 COLORED PLATES OF FLOWERS

Vaughan's Gardening Illustrated is unlike other seed catalogs, being a magazine of horticultural information as well as a complete list with pictures, prices and descriptions of everything a home gardener desires or needs. Of its 124 pages 36 are printed in full color, with more than 90 colored plates of flowers. It lists the best standard and new varieties of vegetables, together with unsurpassed collections of flower seeds, annual and perennial; gladiolus and other bulbs, hardy and tender plants, and fertilizers, insecticides, tools, etc.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

ASCHERS PLAN BIG CINEMA ON LAWRENCE AVE.

"New Terminal" to Have 2,500 Seats.

BY AL CHASE.

Movie theater magnates don't seem to be at all frightened by William A. Brady's recent gloomy prognostications as to what the radio may be expected to do to the stage. At least the Chicago film millionaires aren't worried. Every few days they announce another big picture palace.

The newest is a big cinema house to be erected by Ascher Bros. on Lawrence avenue just east of the terminal of the Ravenswood "L." It'll get its name from its location, for the Aschers have decided to call it the "New Terminal" theater.

Designed by J. E. O. Pridmore.

The Aschers already own an 896 seat "Terminal" theater, at 3308 Lawrence avenue, directly across the street from the proposed new playhouse. They've not yet announced their plans for the old house, but it is presumed they'll continue operating it.

Architect J. E. O. Pridmore, who designed the Cort, Adelphi, and many other theaters and other buildings throughout the middle west, has designed the "New Terminal" in the "modern Italo-Spanish" design. He says it'll have 2,500 seats and a complete stage. The exterior will be of terra cotta, Indiana limestone, and face brick.

To Open Next Fall.

Work is to start within thirty days, and it is hoped to have the films flickering by early fall.

H. O. Stone & Co. have underwritten a $550,000 first mortgage 6½ per cent bond issue on the project.

The theater site is on the south side of Lawrence avenue, 132 feet west of Spaulding avenue, and is "L' shaped. The entrance will be forty-three feet wide. The main auditorium will extend east and west and will be 175x108. The stage will be at the east end, fronting on Spaulding avenue.

Brokers' Notes

C. H. Reynolds, Walter B. Smith, and James T. Wray will be the officers of the newly formed North Shore Bond and Mortgage company, which has offices at 1569 Sherman avenue, Evanston. It will handle north shore second mortgage loans and do a general insurance business.

Mr. Reynolds, president, was with the United Cigar Stores company for twenty-two years and later with J. J. Harrington & Co. Mr. Smith, vice president, is assistant secretary and title officer of the Chicago Title and Trust company. Mr. Wray, secretary and treasurer, is associated with R. M. Johnston & Co.

Frederick B. Thomas & Co. of 10 South La Salle have opened a branch office in Winnetka in charge of Ralph M. Jaeger.

News of the Architects

James F. Denson is the latest loop architect to cross the river to the cleaner and quieter near north side. He has moved from 64 West Randolph to the new Central Life building at Michigan and Superior, 720 Upper Michigan avenue. His new phone is Superior 6844.

Jean R. Rohm & Son have moved to the Burnham building, La Salle and Randolph, suite 307.

Russell Walcott has moved to the Wrigley building; Pierre M. Blouke to 80 East Jackson; Arthur Jacobs to the Burnham building, and Erich J. Pataiski to 179 North Wells.

Beg Your Pardon

A. M. De Vry & Co. inform us that they unintentionally misinformed us regarding the sale of the southeast corner of Des Plaines and Fulton, reported in this department last Sunday. It should have been reported to THE TRIBUNE as the southeast corner of Jefferson and Fulton. Albert O'Rourke owns the southeast corner of Des Plaines and Fulton and admits he was rather startled to read that it had been sold.

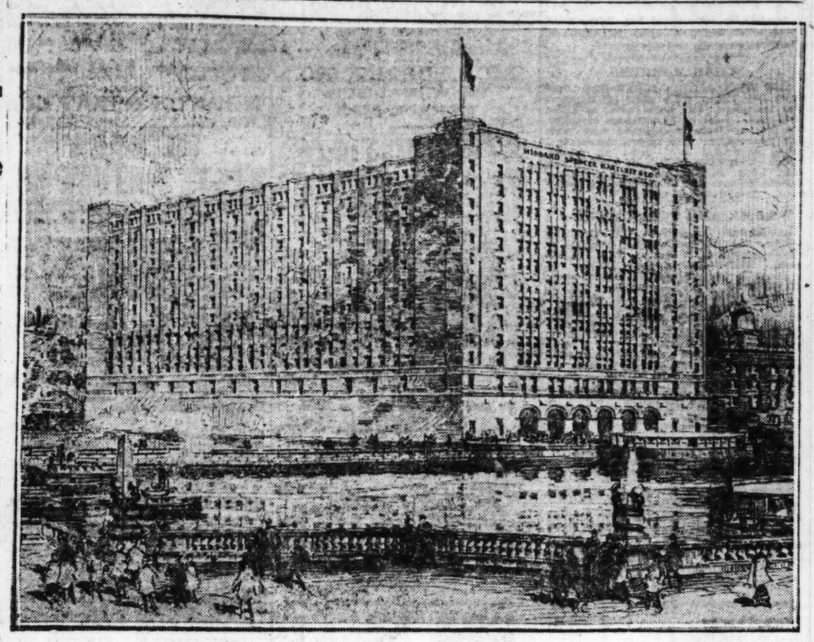
FLATS FOR NORTH SEELEY AVENUE.

I. S. Stern has drawn plans for a thirty-six flat building to be erected at 7324 North Seeley by Mrs. Harriet Goodhart on a 142x100 lot, at a cost of $150,000.

PAYS $165,000 FOR FLATS.

John Linane paid an indicated $165,000 for the twenty-seven apartments at 5320 Winthrop. Henry L. Degener was seller.

World's Largest Wholesale Hardware Building



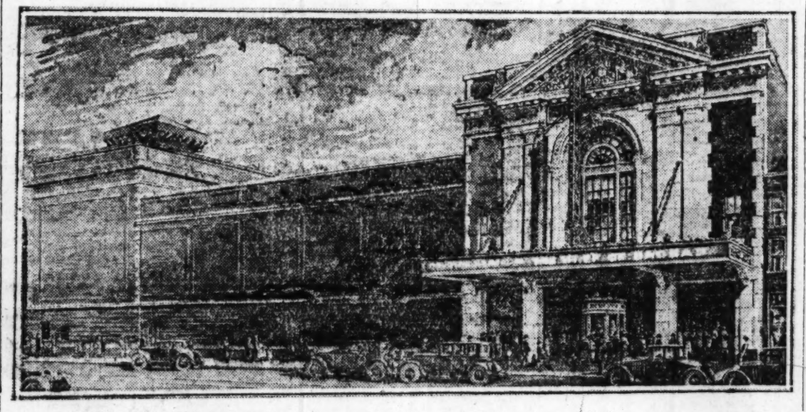
Contracts have been let for the steel and work is to be rushed on the above thirteen story $4,000,000 office, warehouse, and wholesale building of Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co. on East North Water street and the river, about 128 feet east of the Kirk soap factory and diagonally across from Tribune square. As soon as this is completed wreckers will begin tearing down their present building at South Water street and State street bridge to make way for the new double deck boulevard.

Graham, Anderson, Probst & White's plans call for face brick elevations overlooking the river and North Water street. The west wall, which eventually will be hidden by some structure adjoining, will be of ordinary brick, but the bleakness of the ordinary party wall will be relieved somewhat by the use of panels. This wall will have windows which will be bricked up when the property adjoining is improved.

The site, which was purchased through Albert Wetten & Co., fronts about 185 feet on the river, 172 feet on North Water, 423 feet on the east and 335 feet on the west. The building will contain more than 1,000,000 square feet of floor space. The upper floor will be used for the general offices of the firm. The next floor below probably will be used for recreational features, and later the roof may be covered with tennis courts, etc.

All the activities of Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co. will be housed in the new building, and the present warehouse adjoining the new building on the east will be sold. This will be the largest building in the world, it is claimed, devoted exclusively to the wholesale hardware business and kindred lines.

$800,000 Movie for North Side



Architect J. E. O. Pridmore designed the above New Terminal theater to be erected by Ascher brothers on the south side of Lawrence, 132 feet west of Spaulding avenue. Completion date is set for early fall. More is told about this project in a nearby column.

WHEAT'S UPWARD RUSH HELD NO GUIDE TO FUTURE

BY SCRUTATOR.

Notwithstanding its dramatic interest, the wheat situation relates to the American agriculture of history, not the farming of the future.

Temporary world conditions can only delay the inevitable readjustment of our farm production to the home demand. More than once this column has pointed out that the proportion of the national income of the American people from the farms has shrunk to a point where this continent can no longer be regarded as a source of raw products for the rest of the world and agriculture is being slowly reorganized on a domestic basis.

This proposition is distasteful to internationalists, financial and sentimental, but nobody has put it better than Herbert Hoover. It is only about five years since Mr. Hoover was looked upon as primarily an internationalist, and that is why his presidential candidacy got nowhere, outside the eastern circles which are the custodians of the exotic thinking and culture which bulks so large in our total output of print paper but has such a negligible effect on American life and political action.

Hoover says: "After seven years of constant study and practical dealing on an unprecedented scale with the broad economic currents of production and distribution, I have the conviction that the first thing needed in aid of the American farmer is a positive long view national policy for better setting of agriculture in the national economy. Generally the fundamental need is a balancing of agricultural production to our home demand. We import agricultural produce that we could better produce at home. We export foodstuffs and other agricultural products. Our farmers are caught both ways. They suffer in both directions—from competition of cheaper labor and lower standards of living abroad.

"For the first time in our history our physical and economic situation permits us to look forward to this balance being attained. The combined growth of our population and the practical limits on extension of agricultural areas make such a policy within the region of practical possibility."

Farmer's products must be given the same value in tariff for stimulation of domestic production as has been the case in industry, Mr. Hoover declares. The farmer must be given domestic markets comparable to those created for factories. This means a strengthening of national defense by making America practically self supporting—something no other nation can probably achieve. We must export less farm products of one kind and import less of other kinds.

While our agricultural exports as a whole are less than 10 per cent of our total farm production, in the case of wheat we range as high as 25 per cent and of cotton 50 per cent. The obvious remedy is to put some wheat acres and cotton acres to work growing products, which we import or products which can be economically substituted for imported products. The American farmer will never be on a stable basis as long as he is competing with cheap foreign labor in foreign markets to which he is exporting, and at the same time competing with foreign cheap labor and cheap lands in the domestic markets where America is importing foreign stuffs.

FINANCIAL NOTES

A special meeting of stockholders of Lawyers Title and Trust company has been called for Feb. 11 to vote on a proposal to divide the company into two corporations, a title guaranty company and a trust company, and also to vote on a plan whereby, after division of the company, the stock of the guaranty company be increased from $5,500,000 to $8,000,000 by issuance of 25,000 new shares, of which 5,000 shares shall be distributed as a stock dividend and 20,000 shares offered to stockholders pro rata at $200 a share.

Stockholders of the Detroit and Cleveland Navigation company have authorized a change in the form of capital stock from $50 par to $10 par by the issuance of five new shares for one of the old. Outstanding stock totals $6,038,000.

The Union Oil Company of California has called a special meeting of stockholders for April 3 to consider an increase of $50,000,000 in the authorized funded debt. Of this amount $2,500,000 is represented in $10,000,000 5 per cent bonds sold early this week. This leaves $47,500,000 of new authorized debt available for issuance.

Formation of a banking syndicate headed by Pynsbody, Hourbteling & Co. of Chicago to finance the construction of the $11,000,00 bridge to be built across Lake Pontchartrain was announced today by the Pontchartrain Casualty association.

The bonded indebtedness of the Congress hotel was reduced at the annual meeting to $998,000 through the retirement of approximately $250,000 in outstanding bonds. All the preferred stock of the hotel company has been retired and the present indebtedness represents the only lien against the property.

There were 525 commercial failures in the United States last week, according to reports received by R. G. Dun & Co., compared with 536 in the preceding week and 489 during the corresponding week a year ago.

RAILROAD NOTES

Federal Judge Morris yesterday denied a petition for the appointment of a temporary receiver for the Boston and Maine railroad. Counsel for the petitioners said that a bond issue of $500,000 would mature Feb. 2 and the railroad would be unable to retire it. President James H. Hustis of the road said that 90 per cent of the bondholders had agreed to withhold temporarily presentation of their holdings.

Grain shipments east to the seaboard have continued quite liberal the last week from Chicago and other western points. Traffic officials of lines operating east from Chicago and St. Louis report an excellent volume of freight, with indications that the month of January will show up much better than the same month a year ago.

The bill authorizing the sale of $20,000,000 West Virginia road bonds has been signed by Gov. H. G. Morgan.

Car loadings on the Pennsylvania lines from Jan. 1 to Jan. 24 were 575,636, against 562,287 in the 1924 period.

Yankees Review the Trade Conditions in Great Britain

London, Jan. 31.—The month's economic feature is the approach of the sterling-dollar rate to parity and the consequent talk of a return to the gold standard, says the American Chamber of Commerce's summary of British trade for January.

While calling attention to the immense expansion of British imports in 1924 as compared with 1923, the summary also notes the serious discontent among labor, particularly the railway men and coal miners, and gives the number of those unemployed as 1,269,706, which is 17,879 more than a year ago.

Prospect of a liberal run of hogs here next Monday was used as an argument to weaken the market yesterday. Declines of fully 5@10c were recorded, with trading extremely dull at the reduction.

Top and average prices lowered 5c at $11.05 and $10.60, respectively, both prices being 5c under the high time of the week and the same as previous Saturday. Nearly half of the day's fresh receipts were "directs," which accounted for the indifferent attitude of larger houses. From 10,000 to 15,000 "directs" are expected here Monday.

Too Many of Lower Grades.

With practically all buyers favoring the better grades of hogs, an accumulation of common mixed and "packers" comprised most of the number unsold at the close last week, with market for these in a topheavy condition.

Hog receipts last week at 268,600 were third smallest since the week ending Nov. 8, being 33,000 smaller than the previous week and 20,200 smaller than a year ago, but show 52,900 increase over the five year average. Estimated average weight of hogs last week at 225 lbs. stands 3 lbs. lighter than previous week, 5 lbs. lighter than a year ago and 6 lbs. under the five year average. General average cost of hogs last week at $10.60 stands highest since week ending Oct. 18, being 25c above previous week, $3.60 higher than a year ago, and 90c above the five year average.

Cattle Receipts Small, Too.

Cattle receipts last week at 56,300 were smallest since last September, barring holiday weeks. On the strength of the light supply market advanced unevenly 50c to $1.50, during the first half of the week, with medium grades of steers showing the sharpest upturn. However, prices broke after midweek and practically all of the advance was erased on late sessions. Butcher stock gained 25@50c early in the week, but reacted on closing days, with late sales steady with a week ago. Steer quality graded poorer than usual, with few loads selling above $11.60, which secured choice 1,617 lb. averages. A load of fancy 721 lb. steers and heifers mixed, topped at $12.75, with six head of 908 lb. steers at $13.25. Average cost of beef steers last week at $9.35 was 50c above previous week, 10c above a year ago, and 10c above the five year average.

Sheep Receipts Small.

A sharp break in the lamb market early last week caused producers to hold back supplies, which cut the week's sheep receipts to 64,100, smallest since July, 1924, with the exception of two holiday periods. Market quickly reacted and was raised 25@40c above the close of the week previous, with top late in the week at $19.00, against $18.35 in midweek. Fat aged sheep were discriminated against and closed at the low price of the week. Semi-demoralized dressed meat markets earlier in the week were largely responsible for the sharp fluctuation of prices. Feeding lambs were little changed during the week.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 20,000 cattle, 75,000 hogs, and 18,000 sheep, against 16,406 cattle, 88,156 hogs, and 37,061 sheep a week ago, and 21,978 cattle, 64,454 hogs, and 14,013 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 58,000 cattle, 250,000 hogs, and 66,000 sheep, against 57,605 cattle, 228,075 hogs, and 64,386 sheep a year ago.

METAL MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—COPPER—Domestic consumers appear to have covered their requirements for the next thirty or sixty days. Resales reported in Germany at prices equivalent to about 14.55c for electrolytic f. a. a. New York, where sellers generally are unwilling to consider anything below 14¾c for electrolytic delivered. TIN—Slightly easier following the decline in London and in other metals. LEAD—Cut $5.00 a ton. ZINC—Easier as a result of weakness abroad. ANTIMONY —Quiet, but spot prices were firm, owing to delayed arrivals of several vessels from the far east.

WHEAT PRICES WAVER ABOVE $2; HEAVY SALES

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Considering the reduction in the outside interest in the wheat market, demands for more liberal margins and the heavy and persistent selling the net loss of ¾@1c for the day was surprisingly small.

Sentiment in some instances became outright bearish, but on the breaks there was aggressive buying by strong interests and the close was on a rally of over 1c from the inside figures with May at $2.02⅛@2.02¾, July at $1.70⅝@1.70¾, and September at $1.56⅞.

The general public continues to buy corn and oats and there was also considerable professional buying of the latter grain, especially toward the last. Corn closed ¾c to ⅞c higher with May at $1.35⅛ to $1.35⅝, July $1.36⅛ to $1.36⅞, and September at $1.37¼ to $1.37⅝. Oats gained ⅝c on May and September, while July was off ½c, May closing at 63⅞c. Rye finished ⅛@1c lower.

May Wheat Higher for Week.

All deliveries of wheat, as well as July and September corn and oats, sold at a new high on the crop the last week, and in the face of immense profit taking May wheat at the last showed 7⅞c over the finish of the previous week, while July was unchanged and September ⅛c lower. Corn was 2¼@3c higher for the week, and oats up 1¾c to 2⅝c, while rye gained 3c on May and was 2½c to 3c lower on the new crop futures. Lard was under pressure and off 15c for the week, while ribs declined 22½@27½c, and bellies gained 15@45c.

Wheat prices fluctuated in a most erratic manner within a range of 2⅜@2½c, bulging and breaking sharply, due largely to speculative influences. Foreign news was again decidedly bullish, with private cables from Europe estimating that North America would have to furnish 160,000,000 bu to importers the balance of the crop year, or about equal to the entire theoretical surplus.

Julius H. Barnes was out with a long summary of the world's situation which was construed as decidedly bullish. On the other hand the German government has started to sell some of its accumulated stocks of grain which restricts the fresh export demand. Buenos Aires was off 1@1½c for the day and Liverpool down ½@¾d, the latter declining on prospects of large world's shipments and a liberal increase in supplies on ocean passage.

Coarse Grains Show Strength.

Buying of corn, oats, and barley on the part of the public, due to heavy margin demands on wheat, tends to advance feed grains and the deferred deliveries sold within a fraction of the best figures on the crop, and more than offset the effect of the decline in bread grains. All breaks brought in a good class of buying. Eastern call remains slow and no mention was made of export business in oats, but Europe is apparently taking barley on a fairly liberal scale. Winnipeg oats at the top were up over 3c from Friday's finish, largely on public buying.

Rye market was unsettled, breaking early on an accumulation of overnight selling orders, only to react sharply when good buying appeared. Export demand was only fair.

Strength in corn and scattered buying more than offset the effect of lower hog prices at the yards and prospects of an increase of 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 lbs in lard stocks to be shown in Monday's statement, and lard closed unchanged to 5c higher. Ribs were off 2½c, and bellies 20@50c higher. Deliveries on January contracts were 850,000 lbs lard and 50,000 lbs ribs. Prices follow:

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Most of the grain trade was bearish yesterday. Apparently short selling was overdone, as the disappearance of grain on the weak spots through commission house buying brought a covering movement toward the last. Sentiment was more mixed at the close, with the short interests reduced, yet there was a disposition on the part of most of the local trading element to press the short side on every indication of weakness. As regards wheat, the underlying conditions have not changed, but with May above $2.00 there is a disposition towards conservatism until the trade becomes accustomed to the high level of values.

Southwestern interests are bearish on wheat. A Kansas City man says the trade there has been inclined to sell wheat ever since the market left $1.60 for May. Farmers are selling wheat freely and Kansas City had a good run, but stocks will show a heavy decrease for the week.

Outside interest in oats is increasing with heavy commission house buying, particularly at the last, buyers getting their oats mostly from pit traders. Receipts of oats at primary markets dropped off nearly 1,000,000 bu last week and shipments increased 300,000 bu.

James K. Riordon, one of the largest dirt farmers in the vicinity of Chicago and a successful grain operator, says, "Prices for farm products have been too low and unless a level somewhere near the present is obtainable for grain prices in the future, production is likely to decrease. Land and everything else has gone up, and why shouldn't farm products advance to a parity with other commodities? The grain trade would do well to forget that wheat once sold at 50c and corn at 15c."

"We are wiring everywhere on barley, but unable to get offers, except on sharp advances," said a Baltimore message. Prices are up 3c from Friday's close.

The Buenos Aires Argentine wheat price yesterday was $2.15⅝, compared with No. 2 hard winter at New Orleans, $2.21⅜. Argentine prices were 1@1½c lower for the day. Corn prices were equal to $1.30, compared with $1.56 for American, via Atlantic ports.

A private cable put out by Russell of New York said that Europe would require 160,000,000 bu of wheat from North America to the end of the season, or July 31. A Rotterdam cable said that Europe would require $44,000,000 bu for the balance of the season and that they would look for North America to supply 160,000,000 bu of the requirements. Russell figures that taking the entire maximum from Canada, there might possibly be 80,000,000 bu of Canadian wheat available as some figure it, which would mean that the United States will be called upon for 80,000,000 bu, which would cut heavily into the carryover.

George H. Tanner has assumed charge of the grain department of W. H. Colvin & Co., and Frank Choate has also become associated with that house.

PRIMARIES FOR WEEK

Primary receipts of all grains last week were 91,928,000 bu, an increase of 80,000 bu over the previous week and 1,460,000 bu as compared with last year. A feature was the moderate increase in wheat and corn and a good decrease in oats from the previous week, a big gain in wheat and oats, and a loss in corn as compared with a year ago. Details follow:

DRY GOODS AND GARMENT NEWS

[Copyright: 1925: Fairchild News Service.]

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The year 1924 established a new high mark in value of trade in the country's retail stores, according to statistics compiled by the federal reserve board today, following completion of its December report yesterday. The report shows sales set new records in every branch of retailing except chains of music stores, where total sales ran behind 1923 and 1920. The volume of Christmas shopping surpassed all other years and in department stores it was approximately 4 per cent greater than in 1923.

NEW YORK.—National observation of a "made in U. S. A." week from Feb. 7 to 14 has been obtained by the National Retail Dry Goods association, according to announcement today.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass.—Striking employes of the Wwight Manufacturing company today organized into a union and will receive a charter from the American Federation of Textile Operatives.

STOCK MARKET BOOSTS PRICES OF OILS, RAILS

STOCK MARKET AVERAGES

New York, Jan. 31.—Speculative interest in today's brief session of the stock market centered largely in the oil and the southern and southwestern railroad shares, which continued to advance under heavy accumulation while the rest of the list moved within rather narrow and irregular limits. Trading was again in large volume, today's sales exceeding 1,000,000 shares.

Tidewater was the outstanding feature in the oil group, jumping 6½ points to 163½. Cosden advanced more than 2 points to 35, and the Pan-American issues, Maracaibo, Sinclair preferred, and Standard Oil of New Jersey advanced a point or so. Shell Union and several others touched their highest prices in a year or more, though the net gains were small.

Railway Shares Move Up.

Missouri-Kansas-Texas common and preferred, Southern Railway and Wabash preferred B established record tops at 23¾, 86, 85¾ and 44¼, respectively. Southern Railway canceled its gain and closed fractionally lower, but the others showed net gains of a point or more. Colorado Southern advanced nearly two points to 50, the highest price since 1922, and a good demand also was noted for New York Central, which closed nearly a point higher at 123½.

Commercial Solvents issues, which recently recorded a sensational gain, broke badly on profit taking. The A stock dropped 16¾ points to 169¾, and the B stock fell off 8 points to 167. Mack Trucks was forced down to 131¾, but it rallied later to 133½, where it was off 1¾ on the day.

Standard Industrials Steady.

The standard industrials moved within narrow limits. U. S. Steel common closed unchanged at 126¼, and Baldwin, American Can and Studebaker showed fractional recessions. Bethlehem preferred issues advanced to new high levels.

Some of the individual strong spots in the industrial list included United Fruit, which advanced 6¼ points to 217½, and American Linseed, Durham, International Combustion, Manhattan Electrical Supply and Worthington Pump, all of which showed net gains of from two to four points.

Foreign exchanges displayed a firmer tone as to the month closed, but trading was rather quiet. Demand sterling ruled about a half cent higher around $4.79½, and French francs were quoted around 5.42½ cents.

New York Banks Boost Surplus.

As might have been expected, after the reserve bank's report of Thursday that reserve credits of members' banks had increased $38,000,000 in the week, the actual week-end surplus reserve of the New York associated banks went higher in their statement of today. The increase was only $10,417,000, but it raised the "actual" surplus to $52,000,000.

These credits at the reserve bank, however, seem to shift back and forth much more rapidly than the week-end showing would indicate. Following an "actual" deficit of $23,500,000 on Jan. 10, the clearing house banks reported a surplus of $70,200,000 on Jan. 17, of $41,600,000 on Jan. 24, and of $52,000,000 today.

WALL STREET NOTES

Strength and activity of the Southwestern railroad issues featured the bond market yesterday. Rumors of new merger developments continued to supply the basis for accumulation of such bonds as Frisco adjustment 6s, International Great Northern adjustment 6s, "Katy" adjustment 6s, Southern Pacific 4s, Chicago and Alton 3½s, and Rock Island refunding 4s. Gains ranged from 1 to 3 points, lifting many of these issues to new high prices.

Strength of oil company obligations also was well sustained. Skelly 6½s mounted 2 points to a new top, and Sinclair and Pan-American lines continued to work higher. Marland Oil 8s, with warrants, however, dropped 5 points on a small turnover. International Mercantile Marine 6s developed unexpected strength, moving up 1¼ points. Public Utilities worked up under the leadership of American Water Works 5s, and Tennessee Electric 6s and Magma 7s figured in an advance of copper liens.

Total stock sales for January were 41,339,690 shares, compared with 42,853,700, which was the largest in about twenty-five years. Total sales for January of last year were 38,798,500, and 20,268,100 for the corresponding month in 1923.

Preferred stockholders of Wilson & Co. are opposing the suggestion contained in the tentative reorganization plan that they accept one share of new stock in exchange for twenty of old and are demanding a more favorable settlement. Having received notice that the interest due next Monday on the Wilson & Co. 7½ per cent debentures will not be paid, the New York stock exchange has ruled that the bonds must be dealt in "flat."

Wall street reports say steps are being taken by E. I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. to retire the $18,164,500 of 7½ per cent notes outstanding. The issue is due May 1, 1931, and is callable prior to May 1 next at 107 and interest, and after that date at 106 and interest on sixty days' notice. In June, 1924, the company retired $10,000,000 of these notes. The original issue, May, 1921, amounted to $35,000,000.

The Western Pacific bid for the $1,000,000 Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad company's refunding and improvement 6 per cent bonds, series A, has been accepted and it will take over the bonds in return for $1,000,000 advanced during reorganization of the Denver road. The interstate commerce commission required that bids for the block be submitted, as the road has an interlocking directorate.

Clearings for January were $3,070 100,000, an increase of $394,800,000 over January, 1924. Balance last week totaled $47,100,000, an increase of $700,000 over the preceding week and also a gain of $4,200,000 over the corresponding week in 1924. The New JEWETT

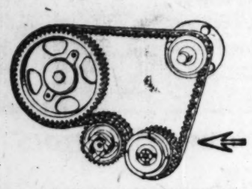
The finest car of its size ever built



Silent Chain Drive

The Jewett motor is built with a new silent chain drive for pump, cam and timing shafts. Chains wear, stretch after a while, so we provide an automatic take-up sprocket (indicated by arrow) with a coiled spring which, expanding, keeps a constant tension on the chain, completely offsetting the effects of wear (stretch), preventing backlash and retaining timing accuracy. Silence is permanent.

IT seems almost like a stroke of genius—this New Jewett. Never before was there a car which you felt like calling a "gem." Every line of it is exquisite. Every detail is perfect. You can compare it with any $3,000 car and find nothing to condemn. Yet the price is about half $3,000.

The Paige-Jewett engineers have done more than produce a car which is fine to the eye and delightful in details. They have created a car which is truly marvelous in results, compared with what the world could heretofore expect from moderate size automobiles.

Results That Astonish

Here, in a car so handy that you can maneuver it like a taxicab, is riding comfort that you have never experienced in any car under 125-inch wheelbase. Here is body room such as you find only in the largest, bulkiest cars today.

Wherever you go in the New Jewett—whomever you invite to ride with you—you will be proud of your car for what it is—for what it does. The all-'round results which the New Jewett offers are literally unbelievable. They don't seem possible to the experienced driver, but when you see them and try them and feel them, you know them to be facts.

Here is a car of such perfection in engineering that you cannot hear or feel the motor. Yet it operates the car in high gear from two miles an hour to faster than you dare drive. It whisks you away through traffic while other folks gasp and change gears.

Quality That Stays

And Jewett performance will remain that way. It is not a flash-in-the-pan that will lead you to the service station shortly. No car of its size was ever so stoutly built as the New Jewett. It weighs from 200 to 500 pounds more than any car near its size today. These pounds of steel and big stout body frames mean years of lasting satisfaction.

It is less than thirty days since we announced this New Jewett. Only a few thousand the country over have had a chance to see or drive it. Yet on every hand you hear: "Have you seen the New Jewett?" You hear it with enthusiasm, with admiration. Apparently the world has been waiting for somebody to build a convenient size car so beautiful, so exquisite, so finely engineered, and so able that you and your wife can be proud of it anywhere.

Look below. There is a nearby place to fill your eye with the beauty of the New Jewett and fill your soul with the thrills of its performance.

New Counter-balanced Crankshaft

A counter-balanced crankshaft statically and dynamically balanced gives new smoothness to Jewett. Vibration cannot be detected — regardless of speed. Silken smoothness at all speeds. Its substantial weight—102 lbs.—indicates its strength. We don't know of a heavier crankshaft in any comparable car.

Sure, an' Who Could Be After Resisting This Utterly Mad but Delightful Young Irishman?

"And now, turn about's fair play!"

"DID you remember about the flowers, Kitsie?"

"Yes, dear, they'll be here, all right."

"Bless you, Kit, you're an angel! Why do I let you do so much for me? You absolutely spoil whoever you live with—I suppose you'll spoil Tommy Tyler, some day, just as you do me!"

Christine's pale, smooth cheeks flushed a little, but her dark eyes met the other woman's straight.

"Tommy hasn't invited me to spoil him, my dear," she said.

"O, well, that's a detail—he's too lazy and too sure of himself! But he will—you know it as well as I do. And if—when he does, you won't be a fool, will you, Kitsie?"

Young Mrs. Schenck threw a shrewd glance at her friend from under her curly blonde lashes. She was fond of Kit, and Kit really ought to be settled, you know. And with her figure and long, distinguished, clever face, all black and white, and her tact and good nature—why, goodness, plenty of nice men (not too young, of course) would be delighted to marry her. Everybody wasn't looking for money; some nice widower, perhaps.

She came back from her abstraction to find those dark eyes fixed somewhat discontentedly on her.

What a good sort old Tillie was!

"But just the same, Kit, I do wish you'd stop playing about and get down to business. It's all right, now, of course, and you can go to half a dozen places whenever you want. But with your looks and your advantages and your friends, you ought to—to——"

"I ought to cash in?"

"Yes, my child, you ought. It won't be so nice, ten years from now. It won't matter, then, if Tommy isn't so frightfully exciting—honestly, it won't. The reason I'm disappointed that you haven't been a little more serious about Tommy, dear, is because I'm afraid that when I leave town you'll skip off to the country somewhere, and—and I've got to leave soon."

"Really, Tillie? When?"

"I'm afraid in two or three days, dear. You know how sudden Fred is about things. And I did hope that before I left you'd bring things to a head, Kit. Will you?"

"But Tommy Tyler stays in town through June, Tillie, love!"

"Don't make fun of me, Kitsie—I really want this to happen! He talked about you a lot at the Ellslers, and that afternoon he came to tea I caught him looking at you awfully thoughtfully!"

"Tommy has a thoughtful look," said Kit, cheerfully.

"And I asked him to dinner tonight," Mrs. Schenck concluded, "so just decide to, Kit, and—and stick to it! You know, he's a little spoiled, and there's no use expecting him to do it all. But he's as good as gold, and not a bit stupid, and you both like music, and he'd appreciate you a lot more than a young man, my child!"

Kit "took it standing," as she would have said, but she was honestly a little scared and shocked. It was Tommy Tyler or nothing, as far as she knew. And she had meant to get used to it in the next month. Every one seemed to think she ought to. Here it was April, already. Of course, she could always go to her sister-in-law in Rochester—but—— O, dear, Helen was frankly glad of her help with clothes, and Will enjoyed double Canfield with her and long talks about his cases, and the children were fond of her. But Kit did love her own bathroom, and was not accustomed to a family breakfast!

O, why had she fitted in so well with her rich cousins and utterly failed to learn to live like her poor ones? Why had they all let her take it for granted that old Cousin Frederika Schenck would surely leave her something substantial? She had had a home there whenever she liked, and if she had earned her way to it—why, she had expected to! She didn't want something for nothing. And the future had seemed so far away! Somehow, it didn't, now. And if she went to Rochester, she'd have to stay quite a while—it was an expensive trip.

Mr. Tyler, seated next to her at dinner, noted with appreciation how black her eyes and hair looked above the smooth black satin of her gown, how white her shoulders were! She certainly wore her clothes well.

"I must say I like those plain, empty sort of dresses," he observed, "when a woman's got the figure to wear them. And you all seem to have nowadays. What do you do—'daily dozens'?"

"O, everybody does, don't you think?" she answered carelessly.

He wasn't really old, and she did like him, and she knew how to make just the kind of home he liked.

Tommy Tyler felt a slight sense of chill, and turned discontentedly to a golfing lady beside him.

Kitsie pulled herself together. What impish contrariety pushed women into moods when they could least afford them? She turned presently to Mr. Tyler, and the soft stream of her admiring interest laved his soul.

"We must get to some of these last concerts," he said thoughtfully, "they're going over into April, I hear. Where'll you be? At the club? Mrs. Schenck said you wern't running away quite yet."

Thank heaven, Cousin Frederika had paid for a life membership for her!

"I suppose so," she answered, "I'm a little undecided. I'd expected to be with my cousin till May."

"So she said—she was telling me how she'd miss you. You certainly have wonderful friends, Miss Craigie."

"They're wonderful to me," she said absently.

"I can quite understand why," said Tommy Tyler warmly, "by jove, I don't blame them!"

The next day was an orgy of shopping, collecting, comparing, telephoning.

From the depths of her checkbook her cousin looked up suddenly.

"O, bother, there's that maid's room in Eighty-sixth street!" she complained, "I promised them for the first of April—that's tomorrow."

"What maid's room, dear? Anything I can do?"

"It seems a lot of bother," Tillie began, "but Fred thought we'd better oblige the superintendent, as it really costs so little trouble, and he may be glad to ask a favor of him some day. You see, we leased an extra servant's room on the top floor, and I didn't need it. The superintendent knows that, and he is anxious to get hold of an extra room for some new tenants. So he asked me if I would be willing to rent it to him and take an empty one in the roof of their other house in Eighty-sixth street, instead. He will move the furniture, and bring it back in October, and pay me twenty dollars a month, besides. So I said I would, as he'll do it all, and is awfully grateful, and, then, twenty dollars a month is something!"

EXTRAORDINARY, how rich people loved to save money! But then perhaps that's why they had so much! Fancy all that fuss for twenty dollars a month—still, it would buy a lot of gasoline, wouldn't it?

"Of course, dear," she answered mechanically.

"And another thing I thought of, Kit. Why don't I put that filing cabinet from my room up there? It has a lot of papers I might want in it. I thought you might drive up there and see that the things got up, all right, and I'll introduce you to Mr. Feldstrom and he could tell the other superintendent that you could come there any time."

When she relaxed at last, the next afternoon after a hectic day, on the motor's blue gray springy seat, it was a frightened young woman that sat there, apparently so luxuriously. Smooth locked and finished, from her daring little black cockaded hat to her steel buckled pumps, she was stupidly close to tears, inside of her, under Tillie's three years ago fur jacket.

For Tommy Tyler had asked her to a concert on the day after tomorrow and she had no place to stay in!

And she could not spend even three dollars and a half—and her breakfast—at the club: she ought not! There were train fares and tips and a few Christmas presents and the cleaner's bills and taxis. And six hundred dollars! She had counted on Fred's Christmas and birthday presents, already. It couldn't be done.

And yet it must be done! It must! Tommy Tyler had spoken about the new Czecho-Slovakian pianist next week.

"I don't go enough where you go, you know," he had added briskly. "And as you won't bother to attend to it, I must!"

O, why must Tillie leave just now!

"If you'd step in, Miss Cragie," said Feldstrom eagerly. "This is Mr. Strovberg: the lady from a hundred and ten, Strovberg, Mrs. Schenck's 'partment. She's to have the key."

"Everything's here, miss, and all put away nice," said the superintendent. "Will you come up in the elevator? Here's the back one, for the help, and there's the back stairs—they go all the way up. I'll have to ask you to walk up a flight from the ninth floor; the tenants' elevator stops there."

"Now, if you'll get out, miss," said Feldstrom apologetically, and they walked up a clean, gray painted iron stair with a line of fresh black across the gray, to mark the hand rail height. The landing was painted concrete, bare and clean. Six narrow doors with numerals stenciled on them opened out from the hall: "bathroom" and "lavatory" were painted on two others. It was light and empty and silent.

"Yours is number six," said Strovberg. "You'll find we keep things up as good as down with you, I hope. This floor's washed regular, every day, and the stairs, too. And the helps' elevator's run as good as the tenants'."

The cubicle—for it could hardly be called anything else—contained an iron bed, close against the wall, its head just not touching a narrow built in closet, its foot just clearing a neat, tiny basin with a small shelf nailed above it.

"Hot and cold water, you see," said the superintendent, "and the radiator's fine. I laid that little table right over it—I figured you might want it for the papers, if you was to pick them out here in a hurry."

"That was thoughtful," she said politely.

The radiator table stood under the window; next it in the corner the tall, thin officelike cabinet stood, with just room enough to pull out the long drawers, along the side of the next wall, without touching the single chair; next that again, opposite the bed, a cheap pine chiffonier painted like oak with a small mirror on top. Between the bed and the chiffonier was a space of perhaps two feet. Between the chiffonier and the side where the door was there was an empty space against the wall. Kit found herself calculating unconsciously that one tall, thin object could have been put there! Then every inch would have been occupied—and the inhabitant of the cell could still take a few steps in the middle of it. A comfortable old blue rug covered the stone floor, in this open space, and the window shade was in good condition, the large window, clean. Outside it, swung like a screen door, was a strong steel mesh grating.

SHE followed him through the hall to the heavy back door: here there was little space, but as they dropped slowly down she saw the kitchen doors of the apartments with milk bottles and waste baskets waiting for professional attention.

"I never was on the roof before," she said, dropping the key into her wrist bag.

"No, ma'am, I suppose not," said Strovberg. "Jim, this lady has a room upstairs, and you'll know her, if she has to come up—there's things stored there."

"All righty," said the shirt sleeved man.

"I think I can get the six o'clock limited, Kitsie dear," her cousin greeted her, "and Julia Schenck's coming with a nurse, tonight, she wires! Where shall Eckles take your things? You'll send your trunk by express, I suppose? Those little ones aren't heavy—he can take it down. The country'll be lovely, now—and you can always run in," she added meaningly.

"O, of course," Kit answered lightly, "I'll stay here for a night or two, I think—somebody'll put me up."

"Why, of course, they will! If you don't want to send the trunk directly, you could leave it up there—if there's room. You've got the key, you know."

"And I could leave those hat boxes there, too, and my little leather trunk," Kit agreed with relief. "I hate to stagger in on anybody for a night or two with more than a suitcase. I'd like to do that, Tillie. Eckles can take them up for me, when you've finished with him!"

"Then I'll say good-by, now, dear. I'll write you, to the club?"

"The club, I think," she answered, after a moment. "I may stay on a bit."

"I would, if I could," said Tillie. "I really would, my dear—good-by."

How careless they were, rich people! How little they understand, really—but how could they, after all. What were a few nights at the club, to them?

If Julia Schenck hadn't the trained nurse, she would have been desperate enough to throw herself on her mercy. But now it wasn't even possible.

She packed doggedly, wondering if there were any cheap hotel, cheaper than the club. Some place one could go to, with just a suitcase. But where were they? Kitsie knew only expensive hotels. The hall boy remembered her as she entered the apartment, and so did Jim, who came out for her trunk.

"O, the lady for storage," he said, "all righty."

He arranged the standing steamer trunk in the one possible space against the wall, put the little leather one under the bed, disposed the hat boxes on the chiffonier, and accepted twenty-five cents gratefully.

"If there's anything else, any time, just let me know," he said gruffly, "I'm always here."

Kitsie dropped down on the uncovered mattress to think. At least she was alone, here; the late sun streamed through the window; it was as quiet as the grave.

Lord, if only she had a room like this, even!

It was a place to sleep. She started, and stared around her. Then, rising, she pulled at the drawer of the chiffonier.

Cotton sheets and pillow cases in one; red edged towels in another; two clean, thin blankets in the third, folded in a fresh counterpane; a good pillow stuffed into the fourth; the bottom drawer loosely filled with a cheap glass vase, a painted china tray, a large, handsome ash receiver, with matches in the holder, a bottle of ink, a cake of Tillie's best soap, and a fine leather bound copy of the complete works of Shakespeare!

She looked at her trunk and dressing case, at the hot and cold water in the corner, at the electric light bulb over the bed, with its neat paper shade.

"Heavens, why don't I?" she said.

Quickly, almost mechanically, she opened the dressing case, spread a towel over the chiffonier, and arranged her silver and ivory toilet articles on it, her mother's picture and old Aunt Frederika's in their purple leather frame, where they always stood. Her writing case, the mahogany ash tray, and the Shakespeare, on a bit of Chinese embroidery that just fitted the shiny pine table propped on the radiator. Her triple mirror (country house bathroom light is so uncertain!) hooked to the window fastener. Tooth brushes, powder, and soap on the towel covered shelf over the basin. Calendar and telephone pad on a handy hook in the wall. Towels on the little nickel rack. Dresses in the wardrobe trunk. Evening coat (why not?) in the closet; but you must drag the bed down to the basin, to open the closet door. Well—there's a fine shelf for hats! Then when you have shut the door you can drag the bed back and wash in the basin. You couldn't be in both places at once, anyhow—could you?

Dragging the bed back, she washed her hands, straightened her hair, listened carefully at the door, heard nothing, slipped out, tiptoed fearfully down the stone stairs—how different from her careless climbing of them—and rang the bell at the ninth floor, drawing her first free breath as the iron door swung behind her and she emerged with the "tenants' hall." What would the owner of 8-B, 8-C, and 8-D think to see her standing there? But she was alone in the hall, and alone in the lift, which was operated by the superintendent himself.

"Get your papers all right, miss?" he asked.

"No, I may have to come back to sort them," she answered, clearing her throat. "If I have to work late I may stay there tonight—it would be easier. I am out of town now."

"I see. Well, you've got your key," he replied, simply.

She drew a long breath. That was easy!

KITSIE rode to the club in a street car, and sank into a great velvet chair near the soothing spring fire. She felt tired, a little scared, a shade defiant, and after a sandwich and a cup of tea, she took a street car uptown, calculating the cost of coffee and rolls at the club in the morning. But a certain brightly lighted shop on a corner caught her eye, and with a smile she stepped off the street car and purchased a tin of powdered coffee, two rolls, some sweet butter, and three oranges. The pharmacy next door supplied a neat little nickel outfit of covered paninkin tray, standard, and tins of marvelous solidified alcohol; the two square packages were not too unreasonably large for a busy woman in a clean cut tailored suit to carry, at a pinch—they might have contained stationery or flowers or books. She walked in bravely: nobody in hall or lift. It was half past eight, a slack hour.

She had a moment of terror on the stairs and another when, with her packages at her feet, she worked nervously at the lock, but there was nobody but herself to watch her struggles with it. Once in her little cell, she slipped the bolt and breathed again. It was done. She was safe for the night!

She made the bed, disposing of her clothing with some difficulty, opened the window from the top, and put out the light, tired as a dog, but triumphant. She had found the way!

Before she slept for the night, her eye was caught by strange bright little lights in the dark square of window opposite the door—what are they? They must be high, far away . . . good heavens, she was looking at the stars! Calm and bright, the pretty things burned there before her.

"It's like sitting on deck at night!" she thought, and smiled as she went to sleep.

In the morning, after a perfectly competent sponge bath, first pulling the bed up to the closet, she heated water, stirred it into the brown powder, buttered her rolls and ate, relishingly, at her radiator table, in a pink crepe de chine kimono; later she smoked one of the club cigarets, and read half of Hamlet, Prince of Denmark, tipped comfortably back in the pine chair.

The concert was a huge success, with tea at the Plaza after, and they walked to the club, where Tommy left her.

"This must be a great place to stay," he suggested, "you women have about everything nowadays!"

"Yes, it is," she answered.

Every morning she stopped there for messages. Soon she found a request to call him at his office, and smiled a little into the mouthpiece at the proprietary tone of his pleasant voice.

"Look here! I couldn't get you last evening—they said you weren't stopping there!"

"No—not now. A friend uptown asked me to use her spare room, and it's quieter. But I'm not there much in the daytime. You can always leave a message here."

THE OROF - - - - - By Josephine Daskam Bacon

"O, well, where is it? I'm going to send a taxi for you and my sister tomorrow night. Her car's in the country."

"Don't bother, Mr. Tyler—I can——"

"Nonsense. Where shall Ellen pick you up—at 7:20?"

She gave him the number, after a second's hesitation, and at ten minutes after seven she pattered down the service stairs in gold tissue slippers and a blue and silver evening wrap, a shining comb high in her hair. How wonderfully convenient the evening dresses were now—slipped over one's head with no hooks in the back.

For the first time, a couple entered the lift at the fifth floor. The lift boy had not recognized her in the least! Her two companions looked interestedly at the dull blue cape, the twinkling slippers. But only for a moment; they went on talking. The doorman stared uninterestedly at the handsome lady sitting so haughtily on the leather bench.

"Taxi, ma'am?" he suggested helpfully.

"No, I'm waiting," she said briefly, and when the driver peeped into the hall, with "Is Miss——" "It's Mrs. Henderson, isn't it?" she asked quickly and swept out.

"Well, you are prompt!" said Tommy Tyler's sister, astonished.

SHE was not even frightened, now, when the lift stopped at the ninth floor. The boy took her there unquestioningly—that was where she had got in. She wouldn't have minded much if he had waited, which he never did, to see her start up the stairs. What difference did it make? It wouldn't be long now. An afternoon at the Art museum, soon the expedition to that new Persian restaurant, downtown; the Westchester week-end—Tillie couldn't complain of her, this time!

And Tommy was thoroughly good—what better could she ask? A little selfish, perhaps; a little inclined to be peevish if one didn't follow his moods; a little conventional and set in his bachelor ways—but, then, he'd been a bachelor so long! And what good husband that one knew wasn't conventional? Of course, they all took it for granted that a man of forty-five would naturally marry a woman thirteen years younger! Men were so amusingly confident of their own youth—well, she was lucky; he might have perfectly well picked a girl in her twenties! They often did. And their love for music was a great help—he really appreciated it.

She stared contentedly at the stars. How good it was to feel so independent! It was nothing to make the bed, and even dragging out the leather trunk, and having to push it back, before she could stand up in the room, was rather amusing. The old Irishman who mopped up the halls, early in the morning, was only too glad to brush out the little room, once a week, and so grateful for his quarter dollar! He seemed to see no reason why the lady shouldn't be living there. Every morning he took her paper bag of breakfast scraps, left hastily at the service lift, with no notice of its contents. And never had she encountered a soul but him in the hall or on the stairs. She had wondered at this, until she realized that the servants' hours were not hers. She had long ago planned out that if she heard a key in a door or a voice in the hall she could wait quietly, half way up the stone steps; they used their lift to the top, of course.

She was wakeful, tonight. The stars fascinated her. How wonderful it would be, to lie in a tent, away off somewhere, staring at them with some one you loved—really loved and wanted. Nonsense, Kit, pull yourself together! Heaven knows, you're old enough!

There wasn't any need to go to Rochester for it. Tillie and Fred would give her a nice little wedding. Very quiet, for Tommy still wore a black band for his mother. He had told her about his mother in the concert intermission, that first afternoon. She had spoiled him, too, evidently. He expected it from his women, of course. And why not—he supported them! You had to be fair, hadn't you?

Just not asleep, she started, suddenly. A slight sound had broken the stillness—she half sat up in the narrow iron bed. There it was again—a light scraping, a sliding noise; some one was walking on the roof. The sound came nearer, reached her window, paused. She distinctly heard a low murmur, a voice—then another voice, lower.

She knew then that for the first time in her life her legs were trembling with fear, sheer, physical fear! It was like a sudden chill. In a lightning flash of imagination she realized that not to save her life could she raise an alarm, she couldn't be found, here! It would be too dreadful. Tillie would never understand, and Tommy Tyler. O, how he would loathe it! What would he think? The papers. O, no, not for the world! Let anything happen—she had nothing valuable; a small sable collar, Aunt Frederika's old quaint sapphire, Freddy's birthday watch. Let it happen!

SILENCE, and then a husky whispering. Inexplicably, the trembling left her. Hardly conscious of what she was doing, she slipped noiselessly out of bed and glided to the window, crouching beside it. The sky had clouded over and there was not even starlight, the roof was utterly dark. She could dimly make out two figures, pressed against the wall near her.

"Where's he now?" one man whispered.

"Ssh! Go easy," the other warned, "around one o' them damn chimneys, most like. Don't be hasty, Bill; no gun! We'll get him with it—I'd rather my knife."

"Why don't we hear 'im now?"

"Stockin' feet."

"Better break for the stairs——"

"Break nothin'. I'll get 'im, I tell yer; hold yer mouth. I'll get 'im."

Silence. Kit could hear her heart pumping. Suppose she turned on the light and frightened them off? But then, that other—would they "get him"? Who was he? A pal? Or a policeman? In any case—a knife—how awful! They were two against one, whoever he was, and she could not bear that! And in front of her window. O, Kit, Kit, what a beast you are, after all! A man murdered and you are thinking of the papers!

"'Ere, you go one way, I'll go the other—he can't get off. If 'e squeals—give 'im the gun and beat it—'cross an' back, mind. I'll step down two floors an' wait, inside. I got the key All ready?"

The steps moved gently away, with tiny creaks and slides. Her heart pumped. When she heard nothing more, she rose, stiffly, and with a definite impulse, pulled on the electric light. At least it wouldn't happen there!

A moment of silence, and then another step. They weren't back, so soon? Then her heart stopped for a second, for a light, scratching tap sounded near the window, the grating creaked gently.

Perfectly brave, suddenly, she stepped close to the open window.

"Who is there?" she said, very low, "what do you want? Go away!"

"If I go away, I'll be getting murdered, I'm afraid, my dear!"

The voice, a young, soft one, came calmly up to her, glued against the window.

"Put out your light, like a good brave soul, and let me in for a bit—won't you? I've nothing but my hands, and there's two of them after me. I'll go down inside, in a jiffy, and not be troubling you. O, will you put out that light?"

She took a step, and pulled the chain; darkness blotted everything.

"Now, don't you be screaming, my dear—I'll have 'em, yet! Don't touch the window—easy does it!"

With incredible agility and utter quietness a tall young man swung himself over the sash and into the room.

"Ssh! Don't scream!" he whispered, "they may be back! Where's your door? Where's the back stairs?"

Kitsie reached for her pink kimono, threw it about her, and breathed hard.

"What do you want to do?" she heard herself whispering, unbelievably. "Why should I let you into this house?"

"So that I can be getting out of it, my dear!" he whispered back. "O, you're thinking I'm a burglar, are you? Here, take a look at me—do you think I've the look of one?"

A bright flood of light illumined him for a second; his hand grasped a tiny searchlight. Young, tall, white faced, and black haired, like Kit herself, but with light, laughing blue eyes. He wore formal dinner clothes, his white shirt front smudged and wrinkled, his tie twisted under his ear. He had no shoes on. His dark hair stood out in every direction. Though he smiled, he was breathing hard.

"And now, turn about's fair play," he said, hardly above his breath, and flashed the light full on her for a moment.

"Oho!" he whispered, showing snowy teeth under a small un-American mustache, "It's always in luck you are, Terence, boy! If my life's to be saved, better a young beauty than an old hag! I'm more obliged to you than ever, my dear! Now I must hasten along and try to collar my ugly friends as they come down—I've been over two roofs for them and I don't want to lose them."

"Burglars?" she breathed.

"What else?" he answered, "we caught them with their hands in the sideboard and the most of the silver on the table before them. But if they drop here or next door, they'll find a good shot at the back, and a fine, brave janitor at the front, and the police, maybe, by now!"

He was nothing but a handsome, daredevil boy; it was quite clear he was a gentleman. And he might have been dead—the young idiot! What a risk! She moved to the door softly, and opened it.

"Go out, now," she whispered, "and do be careful! The stairs are behind you—the next floor is the ninth. Don't be silly, now."

"Would this be silly?" he whispered back, and, bending quickly, he kissed her gently, and closed the door on her!

"The idea!" she murmured, half angry, half laughing. "He knew very well I couldn't say a thing!"

The house was utterly silent. How far down was he by now? Oughtn't she to have warned him that one of those brutes was coming down inside? But perhaps that plan had been abandoned, since they hadn't found him. . . . What a mercy he had seen her light! He had thought her one of the servants, of course. Who wouldn't have minded being kissed.

"Not that I did, either," she thought honestly. "He was a sort of darling, you know! I hope it's all right."

She waited long by the window, but heard no sound, neither shot, nor outcry or whistle.

"Then they got away—I hope so," she said to herself, as she fell sensibly to sleep at last. "A boy like that would jump right at them! But Tommy Tyler wouldn't."

IN THE morning she could almost have thought it a dream. But there on the gritty window sill was the print of a man's foot. She wiped it off quickly, and smiled as she made her coffee.

At nine o'clock she walked down the apartment steps. There was no man at the door, and the lift boy hurried out to join him, at the curb, where he stood with the superintendent, pointing to the service entrance.

"'Twas just there he ran right into 'im," she heard, "and they with handcuffs all ready. Neat as could be. The gentleman was there himself with a pistol—they seen 'im on the fire escape, the both of 'em. The other got to the area, but—nothing doing! A young feller in his stocking feet lep right on him and he never peeped. They marched 'em off, quiet as lambs. It was great! Well, they can't always expect to get away with it, can they?"

So her crazy Irishman had been in at the finish, after all! It must have pleased him.

A man passed her, walking quickly, turned the corner just ahead, wheeled swiftly about, and met her full face. The odd movement caught her attention, and she glanced curiously at him: where had she seen those blue eyes, that long line from cheekbone to chin? He lifted his hat, and smiled delightedly.

"It is you—isn't it?" he said. "Don't tell me I'm in the wrong of it!"

Kit laughed, completely taken by surprise.

"Yes—it's me," she answered, before she had time to think, even. "How did you know?"

He gave a triumphant little crow of laughter, and twirled his light, foreign looking stick in the air.

"How is it?" he cried. "Because I have a pair of eyes in my head, and because the seven other women who've left that house since eight o'clock had no eyes like your own! Well—did you hear the news? They've caught and jailed both the gay boys of them! One was a dirty little Englishman, with a knife on him as long as my elbow—the other one an Irish lad, and I'm sorry to say it!"

He had swung into step beside her, as easily as possible; it would have been too absurd to object to it!

"I knew you'd be eager to know," he went on, cheerfully, "and I fled here as soon as I could, to catch you coming out. I'm glad you came so soon, for I'm to be in court, to identify 'em, at ten. I marked them both, do you see, in the doctor's dining room and I never forget a face."

"I see you don't," she said demurely.

"O!" he looked down at her accusingly—he was very tall.

"That! Quite different. A debt of honor!" he said airily. "I don't get my life saved every day."

"Nonsense," she began, but he interrupted her.

"Nonsense, is it?" he cried. "And him with a knife on him? O, I don't say I haven't been as near before this, for I have. I've been in hot water ever since I was ten, for that matter. I can't seem to keep out of it!"

At his perplexed sigh she burst out laughing again, and he laughed with her.

"I'm Irish, you know," he added.

And she answered, "Yes, I rather thought so!"

He shot a sideways glance at her.

"You ought have a drop of it yourself, maybe!" he said.

And she heard herself answering, "My grandmother was an Irish woman."

"There! I knew it!" he crowed. "Who wouldn't, with the quickness of you and the braveness and the good sense!"

"I don't think there's much good sense in chasing desperate burglars over a strange roof in the middle of the night," she remarked severely. "You deserved——"

"Didn't I, now?" he interrupted again. "And yet, you see, I didn't get it. The trouble is, I never do!"

Could she never stop laughing at this lunatic, and send him away? But it would have been as easy to be cross to a friendly child.

"Well, let it be a lesson to you!" she said, trying to speak seriously. "You may not always find a lady on the roof who happens to be awake!"

"Ah! And that's what I wanted to know," he cried quickly. "What were you doing up among the Biddies? I was wondering at that all the night!"

She bit her lip. What a thing for her to have said! How unnecessary!

"I'm afraid," she said stiffly, "I shall have to stop here," they were near a convenient cleaning establishment, where she had left some gloves. "Good-by—I'm glad you got the burglars," and she paused.

"Why! But don't you want to hear the end of it?" he asked in such frank surprise that she had all she could do not to laugh again.

"We'll know, by noon. There's been two robberies in that house already, and a string of pearls and a terrible fine sapphire gone besides. They think it's the head of a gang they've got; the lady saw the Londoner herself. But she was too scared to move—I'm betting you'd not have been!"

"I'm afraid I shan't have time——"

"O, not now. I know hardly more than yourself. But I shall by noon, and then I could tell you. Where could we—wait, I'll tell you! You be in the park, over there, by half an hour after noon, and I'll have the whole thing for you! Over by the gate, down below, where the animals are—I'll tell you, you be beside the sea lions—in the pool, you know. I'll meet you there, shall I?"

Kitsie drew a long breath.

"But, why should I—really. I'm afraid you—You see, I'm busy," she faltered aimlessly. He looked so eager, so boyishly intent. It was absurdly difficult to be severe with him.

"Now, don't be hard on me," he pleaded. "Don't spoil my pleasure in it all! Who else will I be telling it all to? Dr. Vaughan is leaving at noon, and I'm sailing, myself, it may be any day now, and I've not a soul to tell it to!"

"Sailing?" she repeated vaguely (really, she didn't know how to do it—she, the experienced Kitsie Craigie!)

"To South America, and to a fine job, too—I'm an engineer, you see, and, by all I hear, there's plenty of knives down there, and I'll not be out of practice."

"Dear me!" she murmured, one hand on the doorknob of the shop.

"So you won't fail me," he begged, "will you? I've barely the time to get there. Half after twelve, now by the sea lions! Don't forget!"

"I can't really promise," she said. "If I have time——"

"Don't be bothering to promise," said he with a gleaming smile, "only come! Au revoir, then!"

His glossy black hair showed a moment, the gray hat was tossed over it again, he waved to a waiting street car, and flew away.

"Well, of all the absurd performances!" she muttered, and went slowly into the shop.

OF COURSE, she would not go, of course. She found a message from Mr. Tyler at the club, agreed to a suddenly improvised party in the new Persian restaurant that evening; wrote a few letters; read Punch aimlessly; tried to think of some one for luncheon. But all the while she watched the great clock. At twelve-ten she caught herself making a luncheon excuse; at twelve-fifteen she escaped from the detailed history of a recent surgical operation, on the plea of a recalled engagement; at twelve-twenty she was walking amazedly towards Central park!

After all, boys like that were persistent. He was a mad Irishman—he might inquire at the house for her. She might even be called as a witness—yes, that was why she was going! To finish the thing up. And it was such a beautiful day and she really had nothing to do.

She strolled into the park and there he was, easily picked out in his light, loose tweeds, his hat the least shade on the side of his glossy black head. A neat, square box dangled from his finger—violets, she was afraid! How absurd boys were—but how interesting!

"O, here you are!" he called delightedly. "Will you look at these fellows, now! I'd rather be a seal than any other animal but myself, miss—do you know, I don't know your name? And you saving my life!"

"My name is Christine Craigie," she said instantly—in heaven's name, why?"

"O, no! Is it then?" he cried. "Will that be the Craigies from Ballymoira?"

"Why, that was my grandmother!" she replied, flushing with interest. "She married her cousin."

"To think of that, now!" he marveled, smiling straight into her eyes. "I often heard my mother tell about the old squire—she went to hunt at Ballymoira. Do you hunt?"

"When I get the chance," she said. "I love to ride."

"You would," he answered. "You've the hands and the back for it. That's the glory of my job, you see—I can be on a horse all day long."

"Were you ever in Ballymoira?" she asked, eagerly. "I've never been in Ireland."

"No," he said, "I never was there. I wish I had been, to tell you of it. But since I was ten, I've hardly been a year in the same place, at all. There weren't miles enough in Ireland for me, Miss Craigie, and that's the truth!"

"I don't know your name, you know," she said recklessly.

After all, why not? How absurd! He was only a boy, and she had saved his life, perhaps.

"You don't?" he cried. "For heaven's sake! How foolish—I forgot entirely we weren't old friends! I'm Terence O'Neill—Terence Christopher Patrick O'Neill," he added solemnly. "So you can take your choice! My mother always called me Kit, you see, and it's that I love best!"

"Why, that's my name," she said involuntarily. "Isn't it funny?"

"Funny, do you call it?" he answered in a strange dark voice, "it seems very creepy to me, Miss Craigie."

BOOKS and BOOKMEN

By Gene Markey.

BOSTON, Jan. 31.

IT IS impossible to saunter about this quaint city without being aware that Boston was once the literary capital of the United States. For there was a time, some threescore years ago, when even literary London used to cast an eye toward these shores to see how Longfellow and Holmes and the other boys were trimming their whiskers. But there are still charming old book shops here, and enterprising new ones, and we have been, for several days, browsing about among new books and old.

Of all the seven-day wonders who have popped up among the so-called younger generation few have survived, and each season there are newer and younger generations coming along. But from our casual point of view, there is one young man who is well on the way to a career of literature, and that one is Sidney Howard. Once upon a time he wrote a poetic drama, "Swords," which perished on Broadway, and this year his "They Knew What They Wanted" is one of the successes of the theater; but it is his new book with which we are chiefly concerned.

"Three Flights Up" (Scribner) is not a novel; it is really four novels, though perhaps technically they would be called long short stories. But they are four widely different tales, each one bearing definite marks of literary distinction. Of the four, we preferred "The Likeness of Elizabeth," though there is much to be said for "Transatlantic."

Mr. Howard's writing has a bold stroke to it, yet at the same time a light touch and a deft quality of humor. He writes like an aristocrat, which means he is never bogus and never a snob. We recommend "Three Flights Up" to you, and we predict a merited literary fame for Sidney Howard.

"Hippy Buchan," by Ethel Boileau (Doran), is a brave, bright little novel. Some one has pinned upon it a label, "The gay and tender tale of a man's quest of happiness." Which is just what it is. Hippy is a young Englishman, thirty, and engaged to be married, when of a sudden the lady does a not unheard of thing: marries a richer man. So, for a time, Hippy is not happy. Then he becomes a marquis, and a remarkable happening befalls him.

Ethel Boileau writes with zest and a certain sparkle. "Hippy Buchan" stands among the most entertaining of the new novels.

Two or three years ago there appeared, if you recall, a plump volume of James Huneker's letters. Any one familiar with the life and the tastes of that superb critic must have realized that a restraining hand had been laid upon the editing of those letters; but now a new volume of "The Intimate Letters of James Huneker" has been published by Boni & Liveright. There is no question that Huneker was a monumental figure in American journalism, and, indeed, it is our own belief that he was quite definitely something more. But however you figure his Parnassan batting average, you will discover the full flavor of the man distilled in these "intimate letters."

In London one hears much of "the Sitwells." They are, it appears, a brother and sister act, headliners of a certain literary group in that city wherein so many literary groups flourish. But the Sitwells represent a certain verein, just as J. C. Squire represents another, and Lytton Strachey still another. Oddly enough, we have this week encountered a book by Osbert Sitwell and one by J. C. Squire.

"Triple Fugue" is Osbert Sitwell's book of stories, and they (the stories) sound as if they belonged in a book called "Triple Fugue," if you know what we mean. They are nice, precious little pieces of writing, never rough or disorderly, and no doubt they were hailed with shrill delight by those literary lights who do not hide under bushels in London. Somehow we have the impression that Mr. Sitwell writes with his little finger delicately crooked.

J. C. Squire, the editor of the London Mercury, has written a lot of satirical verse that is very good indeed, and a lot of essays in criticism—not so good. In this new book, "Grub Street Nights Entertainments," he has done an array of stories—stories of London and the literary circle wherein Mr. Squire presides as a placid pontiff. There is a certain "air" to these tales, a certain shrewd and ironic touch. And if you like what Mr. Squire represents, you will like "Grub Street Nights Entertainments." As for ourself, we enjoyed the book.

"Chalk Face" is a mystery story of the Waldofrank-and-earnest school; and, frankly, it is one of the most curious yarns that ever fell afoul of our reading lamp. Told by John Mark, M. D., the tale gambols along and tangles up Dr. Mark in the murder of his sweetheart's other admirer. It is as if Sherwood Anderson and Ben Hecht smoked a lot of hasheesh and sat them down to write a mystery story on a plot furnished by Dr. Frank Crane. You never read such wild stuff in your life! We have no doubt that Waldo Frank is an artist. He must be. No one could get away with his opiumed prose and not be an artist. But we are frank to confess that Waldo has us wondering.

But speaking of murder, along comes F. Tennyson Jesse with "Murder and Its Motives"—an arresting book upon a dainty subject. But Miss Jesse proceeds sternly and scientifically to analyze murder as a gentle art, and separates it into six classifications: Murder for gain, for revenge, for elimination, for jealousy, for love of killing and of conviction. Each kind is represented by famous murder cases in England during the last sixty years, and the author dwells with emphasis upon the chill crimes of Dr. Neill Cream, whose motto was "strychnine for strumpets." There is no literary distinction to this work: there does not need to be. But it is a grand book for a dark night when you're all alone in the house and a banshee wind is wailing outside the windows.

THE ROOF - - - - - - By Josephine Daskam Bacon

His face was suddenly quite serious, even sad. His eyes seemed veiled, darker. He looked oddly at her.

KITSIE felt a strange sense of oppression. She drew a heavy breath, and looked away.

"Now tell me about the burglars," she said with determined lightness. "Did you identify them? Was it a gang?"

"O, them," he answered indifferently, "yes, I knew them both. They had their photographs in the Rogues' gallery, safe enough. They think they can trace the pearls, from what they got out of the Londoner. They're terribly pleased. That janitor man was quick as a hound."

"That's good," she said. "We're not often as efficient as that in New York. I'm afraid. I—I'm glad to know about it. And now I must be getting back to my luncheon, Mr. O'Neill."

"O, I brought the luncheon," he said, "I meant to tell you I would. Don't you like to eat out of doors? I do. There must be good places here, and we can watch the animals—they're all out, this warm day!"

"Why . . . why . . . it's very kind of you, but I'm afraid . . ."

She stared at him, in real curiosity. This was simply unbelievable. What did he think—if he thought at all!

His serious mood had passed. He twirled his stick, and laughed richly.

"Afraid . . . afraid!" he mocked. "How many times will you be saying that word since I knew you? Is it that way you take your fences, then?"

"With a green Irish hunter, yes!" she flashed back, sharply.

He seized her hand, and shook it warmly.

"And that's one for you!" he said. "My, it's a pleasure to hear a woman with a real tongue in her! Now don't tell me you're against picnics, for I couldn't believe you. It's eating in chop houses makes Englishmen what they are. I'd rather a sandwich where it's green than all the entrees in New York!"

"And I would, too!" she said frankly, "only . . . only . . ."

"Oh, no, it's your fine friends!" he crowed. "You're scared of them, maybe? But they'll never hunt for you up by the bear pit, now, will they?"

"No," she admitted, "I don't suppose they will."

"Well, then, let's go there," he said, and she went.

The sun was as warm as in late May. Children and nurses and a few loungers basked in it; the grass was wonderfully green, the beds already flowering. They found an empty bench in a deserted bend of the asphalt, and shared chicken sandwiches and little French pastries, fairly, like children.

"This is fun," said Kitsie, irrepressibly. After all, it was only today. Who would ever know? Now she was in it; why not enjoy it? It was different—and Kitsie did love things that were different. There wouldn't be any too many of them, later! Picture Tommy Tyler eating sandwiches on a park bench near the bear pit! She laughed, and choked over a bit of pastry.

"I knew you'd like it," he said easily; "for my part, I'd always eat out of doors if I could. I expect we shall, mostly, down there."

"It sounds awfully good," she said. "What will you be doing?"

"O, anything—whatever they put me to. Railways, I think, and I'm to try a little mining if I like. It's my father's oldest friend is high cockalorum out there, and it's a life for a king, he says."

He drew a slender pipe from his pocket. "You won't be minding this, I know," he said, "and I suppose I should have a cigaret for you, like all the English girls, but I haven't, worse luck."

"O, I have my own," she answered, and under the amazed eyes of a passing nurse she lighted one. Shades of Tommy Tyler!

"And now tell me," he said, puffing comfortably, "what were you doing, up amongst the Biddies?"

"O, that's where I sleep—just now," she said, laughing a little.

"Just now? And your people?"

"My people don't live in New York," she broke in hastily. "I am—I am alone here."

"But you live here?"

"I stay with my friends, mostly—my brother in Rochester is all the family I have," she said.

"And your friends let you——"

"O, no," she went on quickly, "they haven't any idea, of course. They think I'm visiting. But it wasn't convenient, just now, and I had the use of that room, and it was necessary for me to be in New York for a few weeks, you see. So I took this way."

"Why was it so necessary?" he asked, flatly, stuffing his pipe.

KITSIE was staring idly at a small grizzly bear, padding toward his bathing pool. She might have been in a dream; afterward she decided she must have thought she was, and that nothing made any difference.

"Because I wanted to be where the man was I expect to marry," she said.

"O, you're promised to him, then?"

"O, dear me, no. But it is likely I shall be."

"O, and you love him?"

The sun beat on her crossed ankles; the sky was blue, with slow moving white clouds; how green the trees were!

"I shall make him a good wife," said Kitsie slowly.

"Oho! 'A good wife,' is it? He's rich, I m thinking?"

"For me, yes."

"And young enough?"

"He doesn't wear crutches," she answered, dreamily, "and only an eyeglass!"

"How old will the man be?"

"As a matter of fact, he's only forty-five," she said decidedly.

"O—an old man," he returned, easily. "That's too bad, now!"

"Dear me," she said, lightly. "That shows what a boy you are. Now he doesn't seem old to me at all. You see, I'm thirty-two—that makes a difference."

"I'm thirty-four myself," he said simply, "but I'd not care to marry a girl twenty-one."

"Thirty-four!" she exclaimed. "Why, I should never have guessed it! I've heard Irishmen look younger than they are."

"And Irishwomen, too." He turned to her with a saucy smile. "I thought you were twenty-six—or seven."

"Well, I'm not," she replied, smiling faintly back at him, "and it's high time I was settled for life."

"You'll not be happy," he said, quietly.

She shivered a little in the sun.

"Happy?" she repeated bitterly. "How many people are happy, Mr. O'Neill? At least I shan't be dependent on my brother."

"O, I know," he answered, thoughtfully, "I know. It's hard for women—don't I know it? But you'll not be happy," he said again, in that same strange, dark voice she had heard once before. Again his eyes veiled, and turned darker.

She felt oddly scared. A horrid depression fell over her. It seemed like some queer, impersonal oracle speaking to her. How miserable it all was! Why must she—she shook it off angrily.

"Now you're spoiling such a nice picnic," she said, brightly and determinedly. "And how silly of you, when it was your own idea! I was enjoying it so! You're only a boy, if you are thirty-four—and I can't be an engineer, you know. I was never taught to be anything, so naturally I am marrying. And marrying a man I like very much I shall be happy enough, Mr. O'Neill."

"'Like very much,'" he repeated slowly. "'Like very much!' God help you, dear girl, but that's not it at all! I may be a boy, as you call it, but I know too much for that! 'Twill never do!"

"Look here, Mr. O'Neill," she said, eyeing him squarely and speaking, once and for all, as she would have spoken in some strange, clear dream to a fair-minded judge on his bench, "this isn't so simple as you think. I was not brought up to earn my living—except in one way. It was taken for granted that I would earn it in that way. And it will be earning it: I know how to make a good home and pull my oar in the boat. So long as women are what they are, and life's what it is—that is, a profession—men are always saynig so, aren't they? Life isn't all romance: every one says that goes, anyway. I don't object to romance any more than any other girl—I only say it never happened to come to me."

She breathed quickly; her eyes shone.

"I'm not deceiving anybody. The man I am going to marry knows perfectly well that this is no Romeo-Juliet affair. He likes me, very much; he knows I'll make just such a home as he and his friends expect; he knows I'll be a good mother to my children—if I have any. We have a great many tastes in common—isn't that what counts in the end? I'm not a girl of twenty, you know. I have seven hundred dollars a year. And I happen to prefer to be dependent upon a husband who needs me rather than upon a brother who doesn't. If you were more practical, and fairer, you'd realize that—romance aside—that's a perfectly reasonable proposition!"

He stared ahead. He might have been miles away.

"Reasonable?" he echoed. "Yes, it's reasonable enough. And fair enough, as you say. I've lived most of my life in older countries than this, my dear, and I'm not saying it doesn't work that way. It does, often. It did with my own sister. But it's you I'm thinkin' of—you! And, I'm bettin' you, 'twill never do!"

KITSIE had meant to go home—back to the club, that is: she had no home, she thought, swiftly. An odd idea—when had she pitied herself before?

But she swung obediently along beside Terence Christopher Patrick O'Neill, and he talked of bridges in South America; of farms in Virginia, where a second cousin of his mother's half sister broke and trained hunters; of silver mines in Nevada and oil wells in California; of cathedrals shelled and farmhouse billets in northern France; of Chinese pirates and English landlords.

Of New York he knew little; it seemed to him the least interesting city he had ever visited.

"There is one fine thing here, though," he added, pensively, "and that's the big zoo away up to the north, yonder. Were you ever there?"

"No, I think not," she said, carelessly.

"You think not? Don't you know? My, but it's a grand place. Though, of course, they know better how to do those things in Europe. Well, you should be ashamed—I'll take you there tomorrow. And you can tell your old gentleman about it."

"I forbid you to——"

"I must look at the saddles in the morning—will you be ready by noontime?" he asked.

Even then she knew she should go!

"You're looking marvelous, Miss Craigie," said Tommy Tyler that evening. "Out in the country all day, I'll bet you!"

"Yes," she said, glancing away from him, "I was."

Purposely she let him understand she would be at tea with Mrs. Henderson the next afternoon. That would keep her, surely!

But at teatime the next afternoon she was sitting on the grass, in the sun, watching the buffalo, and laughing at Kit O'Neill.

"I'd better get it out of my system," she thought, recklessly. "Surely I can do one crazy thing before I—before I stop being crazy," she finished, a little shocked.

"It will be an amusing thing to remember when I'm settled down and it's all over," she mused.

"Does he know where you're living?" Terence asked, suddenly, through his pipe.

"He?"

"Your old——"

"That's enough. Of course not. Nobody does—but you."

"You mean you aren't going to tell him?"

"Certainly not. He wouldn't understand——"

"Oho! He wouldn't understand—and yet you're going to marry him? It's a great pair you'll be! I envy you altogether."

"You don't understand. He's a very different——"

"I can see that. You're both very different, I'm thinking."

Kitsie sighed.

"Not so different as you think, Mr. O'Neill," she said, slowly. "Don't think I am—as I am with you. You only see one side of me. He will only see the other."

"Then he'd better wear a patch on one eye," said Terence, briskly, "or there'll be a great surprise coming to him one of these days, I'm thinking!"

She laughed, but she frowned doubtfully. How much did he see, this mad Irishman? Had he the second sight?

That night she dined with Mr. Tyler's sister and her husband; she had supposed, too, with others of their friends. But she and Tommy were the only guests. He was frankly proprietary now—aggrieved that she had failed him yesterday.

"You certainly said you'd come," he persisted. "Ellen understood it, too. Why didn't you? Didn't you know I was coming?"

"Why, was it definite?" she answered, carelessly. "I'd forgotten."

"Really, Tommy!" said Mrs. Henderson, amused.

He flushed, and twisted the ribbon of his pince-nez.

"He's going to ask me, tonight!" she thought—and sighed.

O, not now! Not yet! Surely there was time enough!

And by ways he could not guess, imperceptible shades, baffling misapprehensions, she held him off. He was sure enough now! There was no worry.

BUT that night she was frightened. What did it mean, this unsteadiness, this—this—yes, this boredom! He bored her; Tommy Tyler bored her. Not that he wasn't good and kind and cultivated and reasonable. He was. An excellent husband. Granted—but he bored her. Why did he bore her? When did it begin? Since when could she afford to be bored by an excellent husband? Was it because she had been so far from bored of late by—by a pair of blue eyes and a slight brogue? O, fool! No wonder Tillie looked queerly at her! At her age, too. And she had a real liking for Tommy.

"I knew you'd like it," he said easily. "For my part I'd always eat out of doors."

"I'll settle this," said Kitsie, and went sensibly to sleep. But her pillow was wet.

She stayed in her room, writing letters, till noon. At twelve, precisely, she walked slowly down the front steps, paused a moment, and turned deliberately to the right. He was waiting, on the corner at the left. He expected her. They were to lunch together on a lovely, sheltered knoll he had found between the reservoir and the art museum, and then they were going in to look at the Egyptian things. It was to have been the last time; she had quite decided that, but—they were going. It was as much of an engagement as they had ever made; he had announced it and she had laughed. But she had meant to go. And now she was turning to the right, and he was watching her.

Her heart was heavy, but she walked straight on, got into a street car at the corner, and rode to the railway station, where she looked at various time-tables and inquired the price of tickets. As soon as Tommy had asked her she would run out to the Savages and tell them. Then he could come out there—they'd be so interested, the dear things! All her friends—her real friends—would be delighted.

But all the while that ridiculous strained sadness grew in her. How hurt he would be; how surprised and hurt. It was like telling a child you'd go somewhere with him and then backing out. You explained and explained, and the child listened and listened—but you felt like a beast. And he was going away to South America, and it wouldn't have been much to give, one more afternoon. It was inconsiderate and rude, moreover, when she'd gone as far as she had. What must he think? She spent a miserable afternoon, and paid more for silk stockings than she should have.

Dropping in for a scratch dinner at the club, she found a note waiting for her. At the sight of the unfamiliar square handwriting she grew a little pale, then smiled sadly. His, of course. He wasn't going to take it lying down, then. She ordered tea and a club sandwich, and retired to a further corner. Temper, probably, and a piece of his mind; well, that was natural.

"Dear Miss Craigie," she read, "I am sorry you didn't care to come. It would have been a fine day. Why did you not come and tell me, though? That hurt me. It was not like you, I'm thinking. Perhaps you thought I'd be angry? But not with you, who has been so kind to a poor stranger of an Irishman. I'll not forget it, and you may be sure of it. I was sorry not to see you, because I'll have little chance now, for I must be sailing the day after tomorrow, and tomorrow I must go to Bridgeport to see about some machinery my boss has cabled for. And the next day, though it's late we sail, you said you'd be off for a week-end with I won't say who. So unless I can see you this evening I doubt I'll be able to say good-by at all. And I should like to. I'll call in at eight. If you should like to be in your club, and if you care to see me, we could have a bit of a walk. The moon is full and it's fine out of doors. We could walk up to your home—it will always be your home to me! Your grateful friend, KIT O'NEILL."

KITSIE gulped frankly when she had finished this: "That hurt me——" Well, it might have. It was a brutal thing to have done. She was ashamed of it. She sat alone in her corner till the servant announced, "Mr. O'Neill," and went to meet him, both hands outstretched. His sensitive face was tired and sad; he looked older, not a boy at all. He had never, in fact, looked so young as that first night in evening clothes.

"While I," she thought, "look older, in mine. Isn't that odd?"

At her warm welcome his whole look changed; his eyes flashed, the little hollows under his cheekbones seemed to fill.

"God bless you!" he said softly. "You're friends with me, then?"

"Of course," she told him. "And I want to beg your pardon for being so rude. I—I lost my head, I think."

"But now you've found it again, what does it matter at all?" he said gaily. "Let's get out of this, shall we? It's smothering here. Don't they know it's spring?"

"It is too hot," she agreed, moving out beside him, "but you know this is wonderful weather for April. We can't count on it."

"Maybe not—but we can take it while it lasts," he said, looking down at her, "can't we?"

"Yes, yes," she answered, with an uncertain little laugh. "We can take it while it lasts!"

As they crossed the street he pulled her hand through his arm, and she left it there, smiling, when he pressed it closer. Her spirits were high; she wanted to laugh.

The park was checkered with moonlight, the bushes and shrubbery black and velvety. As they walked on northward it grew emptier, though couples, close like themselves, were here and there, and more fondly entwined pairs dotted the benches.

"I walked down here today," he said, gently, "alone."

"O, don't," she cried. "It was horrid—horrid!"

And suddenly, without the slightest warning, she began to feel most terribly upset and unlike herself. Her mouth began to draw down oddly; her eyes smarted.

"For heaven's sake! I must stop this!" she thought terrified. "I will stop it. Thank goodness he can't see me!"

The tears were flowing silently down her cheeks, but she dared not raise her hand to wipe them away!

"You didn't think, I suppose, how I would feel," he went on, quietly. "It was nothing to you, of course, but——"

"O, it was, it was!" she gasped out. "I—I was miserable!"

To her horror she gulped, sniffed helplessly, and could not catch her breath.

"What! What!" he cried, "you're not—you're not——"

"Of course I'm not—I have a cold," she began, angrily, but he stopped dead, and turned her face to the moonlight.

"You're crying, God bless you," he said, his own voice thick and strange. "O, the wonderful girl you are! Don't stop, my darling, don't stop, for when I see the blessed tears of you I'm the happiest man alive!"

He kissed her wet cheeks hungrily, and she leaned, limp, against him. It was too terrible, but she couldn't stop; her eyes brimmed, and spilled again and again.

"I—it's because I'm so tired," she sobbed. "It's nothing else."

"The Lord forgive you for that lie," he said, and kissed her again, in the middle of the open path. "It's because you love me and you can't bear to have me go from you, my dear! And if that's being tired I hope you'll never have a minute's rest, in this life or the next!"

"Why, how can I love you?" she asked, amazed and thrilling to her toes, "when I hardly know you? You're crazy, Terence O'Neill!"

"'Hardly know me?' And you from Ballymoira—Kitty?" he whispered, and walked on brazenly, his arm tight around her, under the eyes of an indulgent policeman. "Why, the families were friends, it's three generations now! I wonder at you! Didn't I kiss you the night we met? And how could I be doing that to a stranger?"

"Yes—you thought I was a cook!" she flashed at him.

He laughed contentedly, holding her closer, so that they walked with one motion under the dark trees.

"And I suppose it was a cook I came hunting the next day?" he said, "and by the same token, a black burglar you walked off with, so gentle and kind?"

"Nonsense. I knew you weren't a burglar that night. I saw you," she answered.

"And I saw you," he said. "Kiss me, Kitty—my own sweet Kitty Craigie!"

And Kitsie did, under a Japanese quince bush, and experienced no boredom.

"We're—we're crazy," she said, weakly, drawing away from him.

"We're Irish," he answered, chuckling. "They say it's the same thing, my dear!"

"But we can't possibly——"

"Oho! Can we not?" he crowed. "With a town full of churches, and the city hall besides, and a fine great ship sailing the day after tomorrow! I'll marry you at noon and sail away with you at five o'clock, and the grand saddle I'm after buying you for a wedding gift will be sailing down with us as we go!"

"O, Terence, you didn't!"

"Indeed, and I did, then. And cursed him every minute. You're to call me Kit."

"Yes, Kit (how strange that sounds!). But I couldn't be married all alone——"

"No more you need. Telegraph your brother in Rochester to come flying, to give you away, and I'll have Dr. Vaughan for our best man—and he's the best friend that ever I had, to go and get his silver stolen, to send me up the roof to you!"

"But what will my cousin think?"

"It's write her a long letter you can, from Buenos Aires—'I'm married to a fine young fellow, cousin dear, with a fortune before him!' At least, that's what Carew says—me father's friend I told you of. Though I don't know about that—there was never an O'Neill with a fortune yet! But there's plenty for two, my dear, and better coffee, I hear, than that you were telling me of, in the tin!"

"O, you'll never grow up! (But I'm not very sensible myself.) And I couldn't get enough things——"

"God bless me, you've got all tomorrow! And what will you be needing at all? You'll be on horseback all day. And that fine pink little wrapper for the evenings——"

"Kit! You're not grown up!"

"We'll grow up together, me darlin'," he said, softly, "and we'll be old together, hand in hand. Do you like to think of that? For I do."

"Yes, Kit, I do—O, I do!" she said. "Kiss me again—we're nearly home!"

The Amazing Crime By HENRY C. ROWLAND

Blue Ribbon Fiction

THE STORY SO FAR.

JOHN OLIVANT, young war veteran and confidential agent of a rich promoter, Julius Jedburgh, is in Salt Springs on business with
MR. POINDEXTER, bank president, father of SHELBY POINDEXTER. Olivant and Shelby see the bank robbed in broad daylight. With Mr. Poindexter before the robbery was
COL. VAN DOORN of the Royal Army Engineers. The robbers escape in a queer looking airplane with wings like a turkey buzzard's. All the witnesses seem to succumb to an odd limpness which renders them incapable of pursuit. Olivant confers with FRANK CLAMART, once an international crook but now a shrewd sleuth. Clamart lays the bank robbery to one
HUMBOLDT, an arch-criminal and withal a superscientist. Clamart believes Humboldt has found a way to poison the air so as to render his victims helpless while he and his confederates loot at their will. Clamart thinks Humboldt is
M. DE. SAXE, a mysterious Belgian, a wonder chemist. In Washington De Saxe becomes enamored of COUNTESS LEONTINE, a beautiful adventuress, friend of Clamart in his criminal career. Olivant goes to Washington to investigate De Saxe. There he dines with THOMAS JEFFERSON PAYNE, a coal baron, and Shelby Poindexter. Olivant recognizes a waiter as the bank robber of Salt Springs. Two men ambush Olivant and he is winged by a mysterious silent bullet, but is saved by Clamart. All go to Payne's home near his mines. Shelby and Olivant see a plane just like the bank robbers' land close by, and learn De Saxe owns that property. Payne admits to Olivant that he loves Shelby. Shelby and Olivant go to inspect De Saxe's mine, and are set upon by a horde of little men who slash Shelby's mule with a knife. Fleeing, Shelby and Olivant escape through a tunnel that leads into the De Saxe chateau. Hiding there, they find Clamart with pistol covering De Saxe. Clamart has fonnd the slashed mule and with it the body of one of their assailants, an Anamite, killed by the animal's hoofs. The Anamites must be tools of Humboldt, De Saxe says, for Humboldt was half Javanese. Suddenly the house begins to shake as in an earthquake. Then three Anamites waving knives rush out upon Olivant and Shelby. John fells them all with a heavy piece of masonry and carries Shelby to safety just as the chateau crashes. Payne rushes to the scene and sends John and Shelby home in his car. He directs a vain hunt for Clamart and De Saxe. Shelby disappears again and Tom learns a woman has driven the De Saxe car from the chateau. Olivant meets Col. Van Doorn and starts with him to the ruined chateau. Van Doorn claims he has come to buy the De Saxe mine.

INSTALLMENT IX.
Humboldt in Person.

THE result of Olivant's gesture was startling. A grip fell on his wrist like a steel clamp, and a voice said crisply, "Sit still, Mr. Olivant."

Olivant sat still. His hand was jerked from his pocket. His fingers, having already clutched the packet of cigarets, remained clutched on them, unable to open from the compression of the extensor tendons. As the fading light fell upon what was contained in his hand, Colonel Van Doorn released his grip with a short metallic laugh.

"I beg your pardon," he said. "I am still suffering the effects of a recent experience where I had to do with a treacherous enemy and one that might at any moment have recourse to a lethal weapon. See the power of the reflex mind."

Olivant turned slowly this statement in his own. It failed to prove convincing. But it had at least the effect, if only from sheer anger at a violent contact not so easily laughed away, to restore his own nervous equilibrium.

He did not answer. Instead he lighted a cigaret, inhaled the smoke, blew it out through the open window. He noted in so doing that they were approaching the fork where the road led back to the scene of catastrophe.

"This is the turning to the Muller property, or shall I say the De Saxe?"

"So I am aware," answered the colonel. "In fact, I was aware of it when we passed this way before. I went on to Mr. Payne's, hoping for the opportunity of a few words with you, and it would seem that for the second time today fortune has favored me."

Olivant took the cigaret from his lips, then in a perfectly calm voice he answered, "I think I get you, Professor Humboldt."

Again the dry chuckle. "Permit me to say, Mr. Olivant, that you are a young man, not only of most uncommon courage and sang froid, but of rare perspecuity. You are, in fact, precisely the sort of young man I would wish to have allied to my own interests."

Olivant had got himself thoroughly in hand. "Really, you flatter me," he drawled. "Might I ask where do we go from here?"

"I hope, Mr. Olivant, we are to go along together. Aside from a mutual interest, I should really hate to see you go the road of those fools back there, my esteemed but lamented confrere, Raoul de Saxe, and of that excellent and able, if unconscious, ally of mine, Mr. Frank Clamart."

"And your little Anamites, colonel, or were they also Javanese?"

"Neither. A mongrel breed between the two. They served the turn, and I am glad to be rid of them, just as I was more than glad to be disembarrassed of some auxiliaries that Clamart once before had the goodness to rid me of. A useful fellow, Clamart. Too bad one has to prune in this way, Mr. Olivant. Of course, you must understand that what has happened was in every part my plan. It slipped up only in one—please forgive me if I say minor—detail. I had not quite counted on you and Miss Poindexter's getting mixed up in this again."

Olivant nodded. In a sudden rush of exaltation at this moment of stress, it seemed to him one might do much worse than to finish as gamely as Frank Clamart had done. But he had not Clamart's terrific virile force, or at least what he did possess was differently applied.

So he answered with the slightest drawl, "Permit me to say, colonel, that the hand is not yet played out."

This brought another laugh. "My word, but I am getting to like you better every minute, Mr. Olivant. No, the cards may not all be on the table, but the trumps are all in my hand. De Saxe was the only man I had the slightest reason to fear. Not to say anything but good about the dead, I shall admit freely that in science he was entirely my master. But he possessed a weakness which, as we approach the curious epoch of individual supremacy, is a real sincere love and pity for that entirely superfluous and ill guided terrestrial parasite which is the human race."

"I am just beginning to realize that fact, colonel," Olivant said. "And yet De Saxe was a professed atheist."

Humboldt laughed. "Another way of saying that deep in his heart he was the victim of age old superstition No actual atheist is ever a professed one. He does not take the trouble to talk about it. De Saxe wanted to be a sort of deputy god."

"And what, may I ask, is your own ambition, colonel?"

"O, merely to be the strongest and most successful parasite. At this moment I probably am that."

Olivant fell back on the flippancy that sometimes serves an end.

"Now that you've got a clear field, colonel, what do you propose to do?" he asked. "What do you want?"

"That can be said in two words—to rule and to own. But, unlike De Saxe, I have no consideration at all for the result on others. I am not concerned with the welfare of the world. I suppose I am the greatest egoist and the most complete."

THEY had passed the fork in the road, and now, at a word from Humboldt spoken through the tube, the car slowed its pace and presently turned into a narrow lane or wood road that, as Olivant saw, led into a sort of clearing. The chauffeur switched off his lights and, guided by the moon, which was by this time fairly bright, threaded his way between the stumps until the car came presently to a sort of shed, on the slab sides of which the bark glistened in patches. Here they stopped.

"The time has come," Humboldt quoted, "to talk not of many but of one thing. I find myself at this moment vastly in need of the services of just such a young man as yourself. You have seen, Mr. Olivant, what it means to oppose me. But you have not the slightest conception of what it would mean to you to throw in with me. De Saxe is unquestionably dead and Clamart is dead, and from this point my career ought to be safe and easy sailing. I have, as I have said, no scruples and no illusions. I don't want to rule the earth like De Saxe, nor to protect or destroy it from the results of human folly. All I desire is to enjoy it enormously for as long a time as I may be capable of such enjoyment. If you choose to enjoy it with me, here is your chance. I shall not require of you any participation in anything you might consider in the light of violence or crime."

"Then what do you require?" Olivant asked bluntly.

"I want you to induce Mr. Jedburgh to act as my banker."

It was Olivant's turn to laugh. He did so in a note of which the accent was contempt.

"Either you overrate my influence with Mr. Jedburgh, or else you entirely underrate his own business systems and principles. He is rather particular about his clients or associates. I should say that about the last thing Mr. Jedburgh could be persuaded so much as to consider would be the financing of an avowed pirate like yourself."

"You appeared to have leaped at a wrong conclusion, Mr. Olivant," Humboldt said drily. "I do not require financing by Mr. Jedburgh or any other capitalist. My account with him would be entirely a deposit one. What I require is that Mr. Jedburgh should undertake the custody and handling of the vast funds which I expect to have soon at my disposition. The means by which I acquire need not be his affair.

"Good for you, John!" a voice trilled out. "Shelby—!" Olivant called.

"Now that De Saxe is out of the way, and Clamart, an unexpected bit of good luck in the latter case, there is nothing, absolutely nothing, to stop me. Mr. Jedburgh, a millionaire promoter, is precisely the person to handle the enormous funds I shall have presently. These would be principally, if not entirely, in gold and specie, and from what I know of Mr. Jedburgh, he is not the man to meddle in the affairs of another or to become unduly curious as to the source of large amounts he undertakes the custody of to his great profit."

Olivant was silent. He had always been sensitive to any imputation of a discreditable sort where the business methods of his benefactor were concerned. This was due partly to loyalty, partly because any such reflection could not help but include himself as Jedburgh's confidential secretary. Olivant was perhaps the only man living who believed in Jedburgh's business probity, even while admitting to himself that this was not based on any moral scruple at all.

As if taking Olivant's silence to mean that he desired to learn what might be more interesting to himself in regard to the proposition, Humboldt continued in his cool, even voice, "You see, Mr. Olivant, what I most require at this moment is a sort of oubliette in which to drop my treasure. I feel Mr. Jedburgh could furnish such, naturally to his own great profit. I feel also that, in consideration of your relations with him, you would be the best one to approach him on the subject. In return for this service your own gratuity would be almost carte blanche, and you can have a million dollars before the first of the year."

"And what," Olivant asked, "is the alternative?"

"Well, if the restrictions of your character compel you to refuse them, all you have to do is to step down from this car and walk back to Mr. Payne's. I shall not threaten you. In fact, I assure you that whatever you see fit to say or do about this meeting of ours will result in no danger to yourself."

"Why this generosity, colonel?" Olivant asked.

Humboldt made a negative gesture with his hand. "Don't call it that, my dear fellow. Generosity is a quality that has no place in my scheme of things. I have occasion to know that you are far from being the lazy and not over brilliant young man that you appear. Your social position could not be improved, and with money enough you might become a leading figure of the best set. Such a man at this moment is what I most require."

"To pull off big jobs of burglary?" Olivant asked.

"No. One more really important haul and I shall be finished with that sort of thing. In a word, I have first to fill my war chest."

"Then you feel, colonel, that you have now nothing much to fear," Olivant said.

"Nothing and nobody, barring accidents, of course. De Saxe was my greatest danger and Clamart was a bit uncomfortable. Now that they are removed, it ought to be plain sailing."

"I'm surprised that you don't make certain that they are removed," Olivant said.

"Small fear on that score. I was looking on from a little distance when it happened and I do not see how they could have escaped, especially as I had other strings to my bow."

Olivant nodded slowly. "I know about that. Those little devils rushed them at the first shock."

HE did not see fit to add that the same little devils never reached them. It suddenly occurred to Olivant that Shelby and himself were not the objectives of the snaky knives in the hands of the dwarf killers, and that this might account for the fact of his having come out of the melee unscathed.

Olivant shared Humboldt's conviction that De Saxe and Clamart were certainly killed. After the collapse of the chateau, Olivant had rallied enough to investigate the ruins and had called repeatedly, without receiving any response. So far as he could ascertain, that part of the building in which Clamart and De Saxe were sitting had come straight down upon them.

So that now here was Humboldt, who might or might not be exaggerating his powers, free at any rate to go ahead unhindered in his employment of them. Olivant did not believe that even Shelby's statement would have much weight. As they had been together, it would be said that they had concocted the same story for some reason or other, if no more than to create a cheap sensational publicity.

Humboldt now spoke with a touch of impatience in his crisp voice.

"It seems to me a young man of your actual sound sense ought not to take long in making his decision, Mr. Olivant. Of course, if you are one of these sentimental fools hampered by that superstition that is called the voice of conscience, there is nothing more to be said. But I don't for a moment believe you are. I think that, like most of your class, you are what is called a good sport, and that, having thrown in with Clamart, you would have played the game and remained incorruptible to any such proposal as mine. But Clamart is dead, and De Saxe is dead, and nobody else to oppose me. For you to attempt to do so alone would be rather like a little boy providing himself with a false beard and cheap revolver, trying to play Sherlock Holmes. People would smile indulgently and tell you to run back to your mother. Besides, you would never have the least idea how to start. And while I dislike threats, for it has always been my policy to avoid forewarning an antagonist, it must be perfectly plain to you that any annoyance you might try to cause me would be quickly met with suppression."

Olivant did not answer. There was, in fact, nothing to say. The crisp, concise voice with its Oxonian accent appeared precisely to have stated the case. But it may truthfully be said that he was spared the strain of struggling against temptation. There was nothing in Humboldt's offer, magnificent as it might sound, that tempted him at all, any more than it would have tempted him when serving as liaison officer in France, had he been approached by an enemy secret agent and offered the equivalent of a million pounds sterling with future rank and title to obtain and deliver the plans of the general staff.

It struck Olivant as odd that a man of Humboldt's perspicacity should not have realized that to an individual of a certain caste and traditions and general moral texture no infamous offer can possibly make any appeal. It seemed so axiomatically impossible as to be absurd.

But Humboldt's next words showed the trend of his deduction and the reason for his hoping that he had estimated Olivant aright with no preliminary sounding out.

"If I had thought you to be the usual stupid, one ideaed young man of the class you represent, I'd never have bothered with you," he said, "but I have reason to believe you are not."

"Why the flattering estimate, colonel?" Olivant drawled.

"Because you were so quick to throw in with Jedburgh when he offered to take you on. That act made you—excuse the rough word—a renegade. Jedburgh is precisely the same sort of brigand in a more or less lawful way that I am unlawfully and through scientific means. He plunders right and left, smashing companies and corporations and gobbling them up when crippled. The difference between us is only in method and security from apprehension. Moreover, he is not a gentleman by birth or culture or associations and I am, although in a sense of what might be called a pure blooded mongrel, oriental blood on my father's side, ancient Teuton nobility on my mother's. In physical type I inherit from her, but mentally and to some extent temperamentally, from my father, who was a prince of the blood royal. I am merely telling you this to let you know that in allying yourself with me you would not be serving a low grade of intellectual world disturber, but a sort of scientific Alexander, bent on conquest. Neither am I unregenerate in the ethical sense because of an oriental viewpoint that has not really changed through the ages."

OLIVANT had no reason to doubt this personal sketch. He had from the first discovered a cosmic dissimilarity between what the man looked to be and what Olivant had immediately felt him to be. It was that same cosmic alien quality that had repelled him.

But the mere confirmation of this estranged Olivant more than ever. He felt again his first inchoate impulse to get away from the presence of that man at any cost, to spring out of the car and scurry into the black shadows of the vivid moonlight.

A really dreadful fear infused him. It was not the fear of any ill that Humboldt might see fit to do him, but a ghastly horror of that personality itself and of its propinquity. It required the output of all his will force to keep from manifesting this dread in some crude, craven, silly way.

Olivant struggled manfully to get himself enough in hand to get thence some dignity if indeed it was true that he was free to go. He managed to achieve control of himself. Then suddenly that curious faculty, memory, that can serve us such helpful or harmful turns, came to his entire rescue. His inner ears vibrated again to the strident tones of Frank Clamart as they gave his harsh, defiant, contemptuous ultimatum to De Saxe.

Olivant thrilled to the recollection of it. It did not occur to him that De Saxe had actually been one of Clamart's own sort, though each was blind to the existence of good in the other. But it helped Olivant.

So now when Humboldt asked with a tinge of austerity, "What about it, young man? My word, but I've taken a lot of trouble with you," Olivant answered in a pleasant voice that in his type took the place of Clamart's snarl of the underworld: "Why, I'll tell you what about it, colonel. I think you're the uttermost limit of everything that's rotten. I'd rather you'd kill me in my seat, as no doubt you may, than throw in with any such blight as you. Life isn't good enough. Death would be a jolly sight cleaner, and I've always tried to be clean no matter what came of it."

SILENCE utter and absolute followed this declaration which was almost ludicrous in its contrast between the amiable inflection and the dire insult of the words themselves.

Humboldt's brisk military voice broke it jarringly. "Well, what grace can a world expect when it's so over populated with fools like you?"

"None—from hell visitors like you, colonel," Olivant retorted cheerfully. "But so far the fools have managed to hold them down where they belong, and I've got a hunch that in spite of your Satanic prompting they'll keep on holding."

He had scarcely spoken when there came the most astounding interruption that could have been imagined at that time and place to the topic just discussed. The car had come to a halt beside the dark slab built shed that had served to house a saw when the big timber had been cleared away.

From the dark recess there came a sudden clapping of hands, as if some materialized spirit of light was applauding Olivant's defiance of the spirit of darkness. And then a girlish voice breathed tremulously but with distinctness from the gloom, "Good for you, John," and a laugh trilled out.

Olivant bounded in his seat. Here was madness. Something in him must have parted under the strain. Humboldt chuckled.

"Shelby——" Olivant called.

"Yes. He brought me here to prove to me that every man had his price, John. But it looks as if there were some that he hadn't the price to buy."

Olivant whipped about, and again that gorilla grip fastened on his wrist. It more than held him.

"Sit still," Humboldt said. "I told you I tied off loose ends as I went along. And if you persist in your refusal of my offer, then I shall have to tie off the last two of them, here and now."

TOM PAYNE, that sorely tried coal operator and harassed host, rode down from the smoking ruin in a state of mind that may be best described as mazed. He drove slowly homeward. Then as he went into the house his heart sank. His mother met him at the door, and he read immediately in her drawn face that there was no news.

"Does Mr. Poindexter know about it?" he asked.

"No, he's been sleeping all the afternoon. A little while ago he wakened and asked for Shelby, and I told him you had all gone off on a little excursion in the moonlight and might have supper somewhere."

"How about the explosion?"

"He was asleep at the time. Fortunately he's been drowsy since coming here. O, Tom, what is it all about?"

Tom found it better then to tell her what he knew and the more or less vague conclusions at which he had arrived. Being a thoroughbred, Mrs. Payne listened quietly until he had finished, then she put her finger on the point that had most troubled Tom. "But why couldn't Shelby have left a word, anything to reassure us, if only to say that we needn't worry."

Tom shook his head. "It's past me, mother. The chances are, though, that something happened that led her to slip out in a hurry, intending to come right back. You see, her own family affairs are so involved that she may have felt she mustn't miss any chance to nail the bird. But I've got a lot of confidence in that chap Clamart. He knows the ropes and what he's doing, and will see before long how it all works out."

They decided then to let Mr. Poindexter believe them to be

H. L. MENCKEN on Book Collecting

I.

MOST American book collectors, so I am told by an honest and Christian dealer, begin their collecting with what the trade knows as curiosa—which is to say, with pornographic books. The traffic in such stuff is enormous in this virtuous realm, and any dealer who avoided it altogether would probably come to grief. The ambitious Babbitt, having outfitted a room with shelves and set up shop as a beginning intellectual, turns to it quite naturally, for it consists largely of works that he has heard of all his life and never read. Now, having definitely gone in for the concerns of the spirit, he believes he has a right to read them. Moreover, they are expensive, and so possession of them gives him an agreeable glow. So he puts in his order for Paul de Kock, Rabelais, Balzac's "Droll Tales," and the writings of Zola, Congreve, and Dr. Marie Stopes, and proceeds to improve his mind.

But this madness, as a rule, does not last long. The neophyte discovers, to his dismay, that the more lascivious masterpieces of the world tend to be dreadfully dull, particularly when read in series. Worse, he discovers that other collectors—the older fellows whose libraries he admires and whose vast knowledge of editions and "points" he envies—do not take much interest in pornography. They have been through it and got over it. Now they view the man who amasses it with a lofty and somewhat tart disdain, as a veteran congressman views a college sophomore on his first jag. So the beginner quietly transfers it to his top shelf and turns to something else.

II.

ONLY too often, alas, that something else is something quite as conventional as his first choice. Book collecting, indeed, runs in fashions, and what one collector is trying to collect all of them seem to be trying to collect. Until recently the prevailing craze was for first editions of Joseph Conrad. Ten years ago they sold for an average of $3 a volume; on the day of Conrad's death some of them were bringing $50, and even more. Will the price hold up? In other words, are Conrad's first editions good investments today? Some say one thing and some another. My own impression is that some of them are now a shade too high, but that others are probably still too low, and that the cost of a complete set, ten years hence, will certainly not be less than it is today, and may be appreciably more.

For Conrad was a writer of solid merit—perhaps of the highest merit—and interest in his work is not likely to diminish in our time. The beginning collector who confines himself to such authors is on safe ground, and his heirs and assigns, when he is called to glory, will praise him. What gets him into difficulties is following less logical crazes. At the moment, for example, high prices are being paid for the first editions of a long string of third rate English poets and essayists, and prices almost as high for the first editions of certain Americans, including the present subscriber. The chances are that these prices, on some blue tomorrow, will suddenly collapse—that interest in their first editions will disappear as the writers themselves shuffle from the scene. A few of them may survive the acid of time, but not many. Who will read the Sitwells in 1975? Or collect their books? Who will read the plays of Arnold Bennett? Or the political pamphlets of H. G. Wells? Or the essays of Chesterton? Just as many, and no more, I take it, as will read the state papers of the late Dr. Harding.

Many of these authors are now collected, I suppose, because their first editions are relatively easy to find. The collector, putting in his blanket order, may reasonably hope to get all of them in a year or two. But that is really not book collecting; it is book buying. The true collector devotes himself mainly, and sometimes wholly, to the hard nuts. He lives in hope that some day the angels will direct him to a copy of Dreiser's "Study in Contemporary Celebrities," a book now as rare as Poe's "Tamerlane." No one, so far as I know, has even seen a copy. But it exists, and some day it will be dug up. That day a collector's heart somewhere will give a leap like a bucking Ford and Dreiser himself will tie a rope around his neck and jump off a chair.

III.

BUT book collectors, of course, do not confine themselves to books that are read, or, indeed, that are worth reading; some of the most eagerly sought of rarities are so rubbishy in contents that not even a newspaper copy reader could read them. The good book, in fact, is apt to be much less rare than the bad one, for the former was commonly printed in a relatively large edition, whereas the latter probably came out modestly and all save a few copies went back to the paper mill. Shakespeare's First Folio is not a rare work; nor is it, as such things go, expensive. There are plenty of books that bring more at auction, and many of them are so dull that they are never read by any one.

The rich collectors bid against one another for such forbidding rarities as the poorer collectors fight for the first editions of Robert W. Chambers, Frank R. Stockton, and Hilaire Belloc. Both classes would get further, I believe, and have a great deal more fun if they got off the beaten runways and tried collecting in less familiar fields. There are still plenty of opportunities. The first editions of many of the early American poets, including even Whittier and Longfellow, are to be had cheaply; so, even, are most of the first editions of Emerson. At the moment they are apparently not collected at all, but soon or late a demand for them will spring up, and then the collector who was early on the ground will be able to sit back at his ease and watch his collection turn golden.

A few years ago I was offered a hundred first editions of the early American humorists, running from Haliburton to Petroleum V. Nasby and Artemus Ward, for $100. These books are but little collected now, but that they will be sought for eagerly on some near tomorrow is absolutely certain. All that is needed to turn the tide is a fortunate clash in an auction room or the announcement that Mr. Coolidge prefers Bill Arp to Anatole France. The late Mr. Harding made a market for Edgar Saltus. When it was made known at the White House that his favorite work of history was "Imperial Purple," all of the first editions of Saltus tripled in value overnight. And they are still holding up.

IV.

BUT these are more or less obvious opportunities. There are even better ones in the by-ways. Who would have thought, twenty years ago, that Beadle dime novels would one day sell for $10 a copy? Yet it has come to pass, and an extensive collection of them is now in the New York public library, cherished as if they were black letter Bibles. There is a capital chance for collectors in the opposite direction—that, to wit, of early Sunday school books. They are fast disappearing. When garrets are cleaned out and they reach the dealers most of them are tied into bundles and sent to the paper mill. In twenty years they may bring $50 apiece.

I have before me one that would make an excellent corner stone for a collection, "The Two Ways and the Two Ends, or, The History of Manlius Spencer and Roland Larkin," published anonymously by the American Sunday School union in 1842, with twenty-four appalling lithographs. The book is not only amusing in itself; it probably has the distinction of having inspired Mark Twain's "Story of a Good Little Boy" and "Story of a Bad Little Boy." At the back of it are advertisements of many books like it; in the one year of 1842 the Sunday School union published no less than eighty-two new volumes. Whoever starts to amass them will have a lot of fun at small expense, and when he dies the library of congress will be delighted to receive his collection.

Collecting for the library of congress, indeed, should engage far more patriots than it does. All copyrighted books must be deposited there, but what of the immense mass of uncopyrighted stuff? It comes in every day—trade catalogues, pamphlets, appeals for funds, political manifestoes, broadsides, and what not. It constitutes a superb history of the age; exactly the same sort of stuff, out of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, is now bringing high prices. Why doesn't some American collector begin collecting it here and now? He will accumulate in a few years, and at almost no expense, an immensely interesting and valuable collection, and when he passes from this vale he will leave something to give delight to the librarian of congress or his own executors, according as he is a patriot or a good business man.

NEXT SUNDAY—Mencken on Mark Twain

absent on some excursion from which they might not return until late. Even the catastrophe was kept from him. Tom did not dine in the house, but went into the town for a consultation that had to do with the business of the mine—pressing enough in all truth.

When at about eleven he returned to the house, the Negro butler informed him that there had been no news and that the family had retired. Tom's big shoulders bowed a little as he told the old man to go to bed, then went into his study and closed the door.

It was very dark outside, a heavy cloudbank having risen to obscure the moon. Tom sank heavily into his arm chair. He had scarcely done so when there came a soft tapping at the long French window that gave on a corner of the porch outside. Tom sprang up and unhooked it, threw it open, then stood staring, petrified, at his late caller.

THE picture framed in the French window against the dark background of the trees struck Tom as the most incongruous that could have been presented, even at that moment of bizarre and terrible events. Yet he was in some measure prepared through the information given him by the breaker boy. Also as a man trained to meet emergencies he did not merely sit and stare.

"Come in, please," he said quietly, and as his visitor stepped inside he closed and bolted the window, then drew the dark curtains across it.

The Countess Leontine had not played chauffeur, as Tom had been forced to persuade himself. But she now wore a chauffeur's visored cap, as described by the breaker boy, and the dark blue driving coat. This she threw open, for the night was warm. She was breathless as if from hurrying up the slope afoot. But Tom noticed with relief that her lovely flushed and eager face showed no sign of distress.

"Please tell me first," Tom said, "if you know anything about the disappearance of my guests."

"What guests, Mr. Payne?" Leontine asked in her rich throaty voice.

"Miss Poindexter and Olivant and Clamart."

She looked perplexed. "I did not know that any of those three were here."

Tom's heart sank. "Do you know anything about De Saxe?"

"Only what you know yourself. That he and another man were in the chateau at the time of the explosion. But since the debris has been cleared without discovering their bodies, I should say that they must have managed in some way to escape." She leaned across the desk. "Was the other man Frank Clamart?" she asked.

"Yes," Tom answered. "Where were you at the time?"

"Down at the entrance to the grounds, watching the approach from behind a bush."

"Watching for whom?"

"For a man known in some quarters as Humboldt. He is a sort of alchemist, Mr. Payne, who has made use of certain discoveries for his criminal purpose. Frank Clamart and I have both been on the wrong scent. We thought De Saxe to be the man. But instead of that, he was actually a former colleague and confrere who, never suspecting the use that Humboldt might make of their research work, experimented jointly with him until he began to have his doubts. Then the war came and interrupted their experiments. Humboldt threw in with the enemy, and De Saxe was obliged to escape from the Bolsheviki across Siberia. Later he turned his knowledge to the production of a fertilizer until he began to suspect the fearful danger of Humboldt and what he was up to. Since then he has devoted his knowledge and energy in preparing for the struggle to suppress him and the damage he might do."

"How long have you been here, countess?"

"I left Washington last night on a late train, and on arriving at your nearest station I hired a local car to bring me to the Muller property. I had to warn De Saxe that Humboldt was on his way to this place."

"Was this Humboldt known to you?"

"Yes, as an officer of the Dutch Army Engineers. I had met him a number of times in different parts of the world. But it was not until yesterday that I was able to identify him as the former student and later the confrere of De Saxe. If I had known that Frank Clamart was here, I should have tried to get in touch with him. It is plain now that he came to investigate De Saxe, whom he thought to be Humboldt. The affair is even more complicated because De Saxe told me a day or two ago of his conviction that Clamart was Humboldt's agent who handled the details of the crimes made possible by Humboldt's scientific knowledge."

Tom drew in his breath softly. "That explains it. De Saxe took him up there to the chateau to have it out with him. Did either of them know that you were here?"

"Come in, please," he said quietly.

"No, and I was not there when he returned because I saw some Boy Scouts cross the road below and enter the woods. It struck me then that I might persuade them to act as pickets. I followed them, but they disappeared. De Saxe must have driven in while I was gone."

"What became of his chauffeur?" Tom asked.

"I don't know. He may have sent the man to some other point of observation, or he may have fallen into the hands of Humboldt."

"Then you believe this Humboldt to be in the locality?"

"It was Humboldt who caused the explosion," Leontine said. "Of course, I don't know how he managed it. De Saxe should have been on his guard, especially since he suspected Clamart. But he underrated Humboldt's power."

TOM sprang up with a bleak face. "Do you think Miss Poindexter and Olivant have got mixed up in this devilish business—this damnable duel of wizards?"

"I'm afraid so, Mr. Payne. After the explosion, I saw you drive away with them. I kept under cover until dark, waiting to see if anything was found of De Saxe. Then I went to the car and slipped into this coat and cap that were lying on the seat and drove down the road to where it forks, then pushed into the woods. I wanted to be where I could watch both roads. A big sedan car passed twice coming and twice going from here."

"That might have been my car."

"No. I saw yours, too. This one was larger and of a different make."

Tom pondered an instant. "I don't know what car that could have been. I haven't heard anything about it. My own is the only one of that sort in the place. The others are all touring cars."

"Then it must have been Humboldt," Leontine said. "But why should he have come and gone twice from here?"

Tom turned cold again. "He might have managed to lure off Olivant and Shelby Poindexter on some sort of pretext. What sort of man is he—in person, I mean?"

"He looks and speaks like a British army officer of birth and distinction. Just now he is known as a colonel of the Royal Dutch Army Engineers who has retired to occupy himself as a mining expert—coal and iron and oil. He was actually at one time what he pretends, so that unless carefully investigated he could support inquiries. I have met him a number of times in my travels and found him what the British would call a tremendous swell."

Tom dropped his chin on his knuckles and stared across the desk at Leontine. "If you'll forgive my saying so, countess, this all sounds like a fantastic nightmare to me. Two super-scientists gunning for each other with unknown forces; one a kind of Merlin and the other an archangel of sorts and the rest of us getting caught up in their fire and generally demoralized. What 'particular crimes' on the part of this Humboldt did you refer to a moment ago?"

Leontine gave him a level, steady look from her wonderful eyes. "The first of any importance, Mr. Payne, was an attempt to smooth the way for certain operations to flood this country with narcotic drugs, principally opium. It was to be supplied by a man named Don Quinto. Humboldt's part of it was to remove the obstacles in its path, principally by the use of a poisonous gas, or what Clamart described as a toxic ether. Clamart broke that up with the aid of two or three others, one of whom was Mr. Olivant."

"What?" Tom cried. "My harmless friend Olly."

"Mr. Olivant is not such a fool as many people suppose," Leontine said. "He would not be Jedburgh's confidential secretary if he were. The next two coups of Humboldt were, I am quite sure, the robbery of Mr. Poindexter's bank and the bigger job that immediately followed—the treasury messengers."

Tom sank back in his chair and stared at her.

"Are you a secret service agent?" he asked.

"No, Mr. Payne. I may as well tell you I am precisely the same sort of woman that Mr. Clamart is a man. We were both formerly members of what might be called the upper underworld. We are old associates who came at about the same time and for much the same reasons to see that our entire code and ideas and behavior was not only wrong, but that they no longer fitted our natures. Since that time Frank Clamart has not only gone straight but felt straight. He came into his true self before the war. But even the lessons taught me by the war in which I did my best to serve left me not entirely convinced. It took a later and sharper and more terrible personal one to set me straight. But that one accomplished it. Since then I have worked with Clamart for the good of society instead of to plunder it."

Tom received this statement a little abstractedly. That part of his mind detailed to the consideration of what was being told him about herself by this beautiful and vital woman was willing to accept and approve her deposition. But the greater part of it was centered upon Shelby, then Olivant.

HE ROSE abruptly. "It's hard for me to take it in, countess, but the situation seems to be this. De Saxe has brought down the roof on us here, and the first thing we've got to do is to try to collar this man Humboldt. Apparently he's got it in for De Saxe and Clamart, and if they're really still alive they'll have to shift for themselves. He's got a score to settle with Olivant, too, from what you tell me, and as my guest and good friend I'm bound to protect him. But Shelby Poindexter is another matter. What would you suggest? Hadn't I better start a general summons to block all the roads? There aren't so many hereabouts, and I don't think he can get far."

"He's had already nearly five hours, Mr. Payne."

"Well, then, we'll just have to comb the whole darned country for them. That's quite possible."

"Yes, but what sort of a charge have we against him?" Leontine asked.

"Why—all that you just told me. This drug thing and the bank and messenger robberies and the explosion and now the disappearance of Shelby and Olivant."

Leontine leaning forward against the desk summed up the hopelessness of the situation.

"Clamart is not credited by the American police," she said. "They know enough about myself to have me deported if they wanted to take the trouble, and I'm sure I don't know what civilized country would accept me under such conditions, because my record has been pretty widely published. Both Frank Clamart and I are in the maddening positions of two people who are trying our best to protect society and whose protection or even offers of service the authorities would laugh at as a tremendous joke. On the other hand, this Humboldt or Col. Van Doorn—for he has taken his mother's name—is known and respected in Dutch colonial and home circles and also in many European ones as an able and distinguished man who, although an Eurasian by birth, is yet a royal one."

"A royal one?"

"Yes, but what difference does that make?" Leontine said impatiently. "He actually is what he professes to be, and of what I know him to be nobody that I think of, not even De Saxe, has any proof. He might be shown to have been a late enemy, but that's all been through the clearing house now. In the language of crooks, Mr. Payne, nobody's got anything on him."

"But if he's got Shelby and Olivant?" Tom cried.

Leontine smiled a little scornfully. "Don't think for a moment that he'd ever be so foolish as to take any part in their abduction that could possibly be traced. He has the oriental faculty of working from a perspective so dim and shrouded in such a fog of intrigue that no light could ever get through to shine at him."

"But that's impossible," Tom cried. "Every animal is bound to leave its tracks."

"Sharks don't, Mr. Payne, nor owls and other predatory nocturnes of prey. Not even our wolves of the steppes when the snow is falling."

"Well, then," Tom cried desperately. "What have you to suggest? You haven't come here to tell me all this and then wind up by saying there's nothing under heaven we can do about it, have you? Where can I nail this bird? Where does he hang out or where is he next apt to be found? I'll go it blind on your say so and get my paws on him and choke something out of him if it's only his life." He gave a sort of sob. "Aside from her being here under my roof, my family's guest, I love that girl, countess."

Leontine's eyes glowed. She had found her task easier even than she had anticipated. Here was the sort of vital essence she understood and to which she responded.

Her long and beautifully rounded arm stole across the table desk and her hand fell on Tom's wrist. "If you really feel that way about it, Mr. Payne, I may be able to take you where he is."

Tom snatched open the upper right hand drawer of his desk, hauled out the heavy old .45 that had been slung from the shoulders of three generations of Paynes in moments of crisis, then slipped on the loose blue serge coat hanging on the back of his chair.

Leontine's eyes glowed at him with that hot approval that even as a character reformed she could not help but be inspired with at the sight of a strong man eager to come to grips. And yet there was a pitying indulgence in their depths, as if she were looking at a little boy who armed himself with a popgun to set forth courageously to hunt a robber in the night woods.

"Let's go," she said.

THE MAN WHO CAME BACK—STRONG!

See What Biochemistry Can Do for Human Beings of Almost Any Age! Men and Women Offered a New Nourishment That Rebuilds the Tissues! Amazing Return of Virility and Vigor!

His system run-down—almost ready to stop! Such was this man's condition when accounts of what biochemistry is doing prompted him to try it. Look at his picture taken a couple of months later!

An astounding story of suddenly acquired health—and every syllable true. To the left is a photo of J. P. Shaw before he staged his remarkable comeback. Spring waters, diets, even drugs had no effect on his ailing condition. Still in his forties, he was an old man. Then biochemistry—with the result seen in the picture on the right!

In this picture of Mr. Shaw, taken two months later, you see what happens when biofeeding brings new life cells to an impoverished system. His neuritis is gone; the old sluggishness swept away; he looks like another man, feels twenty years younger. Back to his business of building, working harder than ever.

(By WILLIAM R. DURGIN)

"OLD acquaintances don't recognize me," says this New York contractor and capitalist. I shouldn't think they would! He doesn't look much like the man who had so recently sought the shelter of a sanitarium. Biofood has seemingly given him the energy of a dynamo.

This new form of nourishment does the most remarkable things for men and women of whatever age.

Biofood gives an old man a new impulse that is usually felt within a few days.

It brings run-down women to a tingling state of health often within two or three weeks.

The most aggravated case of constipation entirely disappears in a majority of cases where biofeeding has been followed for a couple of months.

Biofood is not a cure. It is a food. Just a highly developed, scientific combination of the elements every human system must have for growth and repair.

How Biochemistry Works

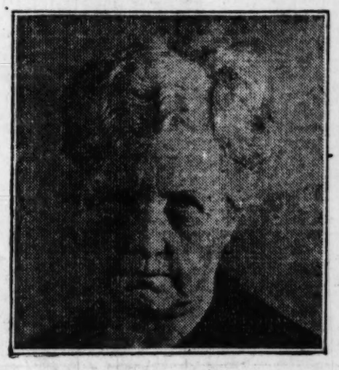
Modern cookery has pampered our palates at the expense of our physical being. Our meals don't contain enough sulphur, enough phosphorous (of which healthy bodies must contain more than a pound!) enough iron. Biofood supplies these and other minerals; the right quantity of each.

That is why a man's physical powers that have commenced to abate are restored to a remarkable degree shortly after biofeeding gives his organs stamina.

That is why women who thought certain ailments their natural lot have found Biofood a source of joyous health they had thought gone with girlhood.

Nervous disorders are dispelled by biochemistry; so is indigestion, gastritis, and even rheumatism. Diabetics who had hoped at best for a little relief have reported a return to pristine health. All due to the readjustment of the system which takes place when it receives the right materials with which to build health! Will Biofood do these things for you? It is natural that it should. It is a scientific certainty that it would.

WHAT A WOMAN DID IN 5 MONTHS



Different Pictures of the Same Lady!

Can this be the same person? It is. Matilde Hoffman required five months of biochemistry to bring about this transformation, but it was worth it! Malnutrition had made her an "old woman." Proper nourishment—not dieting—brought health. Second photo by Haydn.

How much longer will women take "tonics" for anemia? Or turn to cosmetic makers for relief from wrinkles? What "cure-all" has ever done what Biofeeding did for Mrs. Hoffman? What "beautifier" could tranquilize and smooth a face as biochemistry has done in the case above?

Christine Hollingworth, another lady who tried Biofood, had done just about everything to overcome the lassitude that had made her a mere onlooker in life. In two months she was once more a normal, energetic woman with days and nights crowded with her household duties and social activities.

When the Organs Are Restored to Their Full Functioning

Not all who adopt this better balance of nourishment are invalid, or even ailing—in the sense of being "sick." Many who had thought themselves normal have found that biofeeding has brought a vitality and vivacity they had forgotten. One grows accustomed to a sluggish state; becomes resigned to a general slowing-up; under the quickened impulse from perfect nourishment they awaken to a new interest in life!

So, don't wait until you must have this marvelous stimulus to cells and tissues. Try it now, and see if you don't soon experience an altogether new thrill to living.

For Children

Parents often think a child normal when it is only Youth that keeps active a body clogged with waste (cellular waste which no laxative can dislodge). Children thrive on a small allotment of Biofood; quickly show it in their progress at school, in their play. See from the photographs what Biofood did for a little girl who was not well; Cora Slavik made this improvement in less than a year, according to her mother's letter.

What a Life Insurance Company Says

So vitally important is this proper balance of nourishment that the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company says in its latest public bulletin: "Eat your A B C's! Many of our physical ailments could be avoided by proper selection of food." What an endorsement!

In no sense is Biofood a substitute for the things you are eating now. You continue to eat what you like, and as much as you like. Furthermore, you will have a new relish for your food; a robust appetite. Incidentally, you will get complete, restful sleep.

Control of Your Weight

Those who are underweight will find that perfect assimilation soon rounds out the parts that need it. If you are overweight, don't waste time and money on "reducing courses" when all you need is the full elimination that prevents the piling-up of tissue fat. A few months, perhaps just a few weeks, will correct the condition completely.

We owe the present practical form of biochemistry for the body to the patient, eight-year study which the Kuhne brothers have given first in Germany, and later here in America. It is only since the many elements were combined in the simple A B C compounds called Biofood that its benefits were so handily available to the public. And the Kuhne brothers have arranged an easy way whereby any individual may learn all about this new and remarkable means to health—and have a supply of it for their own use.

To Those Wishing to Try Biofood

Pages might be written of the countless accomplishments to the credit of Biofood. Or filled with the actual letters of those whose gratitude has led them to report the results, and send photographs to substantiate their wonderful stories. But you will profit more by your own experience with this universal manna for mankind—and it is a simple matter to do so, thanks to arrangements by which packages containing a full month's supply are now being distributed.

Before you are asked to take Biofood, however, the makers want you to know exactly what it is and exactly why it does the things it is sure to do for you. Without any expense to you, they will send you The ABC of Health, in which the principle of biochemistry is made so clear that you will wonder how that wonderful body of yours can do as well as it does with the drag which the average modern menu places upon it.

Get this vitally interesting book at once. For there is no Biofood "age." People in their eighties need it; babies have derived incalculable benefit from it. To read this book is to realize the reasons; to realize that Mr. Eugen Kuhne and his brother have flung the door of sparkling health wide open! Read the offer printed here:

The Bob Still Popular in Paris

by Antoinette Donnelly

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—To the American man Paris may mean a number of things—a perfectly legitimate business reason for looking over the field of contracts and prospects; a perhaps not so legitimate excuse for looking over the field of femme as she is forbidden him by the alert vigilance committees of our music revue centers back home; or, perhaps an opportunity to stock up on the spirit that is said to breed, if not cheer, at least forgetfulness of the synthetic aroma that hovers around A1, the furtive back door caller.

To the American woman Paris means direct communication with those occult spirits invested with the power to look into the future and answer with authority: "Will skirts be short? Will hair be long? Will hats be large or small?"

Paris may have its Louvre, its Beaux Arts, its Notre Dame, its Tuileries gardens—for some folk, but for the women folk it houses those time honored destinies which shape our ends, such as Poiret, the dressmaker; Reboux, the milliner; and Antoine, coiffeur de luxe. Until they and their confreres in art and confusion have been consulted, Mona Lisa hasn't a chance in the world of seeing Mrs. Jones and her daughter, Miss Jenny, on that promised hurried call at the Louvre. Miss Venus de Milo might just as well sit down while she is waiting.

Antoine certainly has to be seen before the Luxembourg gardens, for 'tis the shrubbery that grows on the head these days that counts. He would better be seen before crossing the threshold of one of the great couturiers. He most unqualifiedly must be seen before the hat that sang of home, sweet home has been replaced by a Rue de la Paix model, else the groan at parting with so much money for such a little chapeau may live to be a bigger groan when you find you haven't enough hair left to hold the new hat up with.

Antoine is an artist who sees a coiffure not from the eyes up or from the ears back, but from the crown to the toes and back again. Not so much by the number of hairs on your head does he gauge his effect, but by the shape of the skull, the thickness or slenderness of the neck, the narrowness or breadth of the shoulders, and so on down to the last line of your ill or well fitting shoe.

The line and proportion of the body have as much, if not more, to do with his ultimate verdict as the shape of the cranium, the width or length of the face, coarseness or delicacy of feature.

Rumors were reaching New York a couple of months ago that bobbed hair was on its way out. I have interviewed hairdressers with the smartest clientele in Paris, and to a man they tell me they have no evidence to support the rumor. Out of 150 heads handled in these separate establishments less than fifteen have long hair.

Antoine predicts a long run ahead for the bob. False hair pinned on to dress up for evening wear is not being adopted as readily as it was expected. Lovely headdresses in gold cloth and silver of a hundred different designs have caught on for evening wear better than the false hair.

An observation of my own which would indicate that bobbed hair certainly is not out is made on going through the ultra smart French fashion magazines. If you search for a long haired model carrying the newest in dresses, you may be rewarded—but not likely. Too, I made inquiries at several of the large dressmaking establishments, and was told there is not sufficient evidence for a good sized hint that it is on the wane. On my way around the hairdressing parlors I asked about new styles for the long haired coiffure. Not a single one was offered—except the styles that belonged to the prebob period called "antique" or else the suggestion that one clinging to her heavy tresses would better adopt some picturesque style and try to get by on that, to be worked out in the privacy of your own boudoir, I take it, without benefit of drawing or photograph from the ruling powers.

The bob in its present phase of popularity in Paris is not an advertisement for the permanent waving machine. Permanent waving is not the profitable business on this side it is at home; that is, among the chic and the smartly coiffed. You do see some frightful bobs here as at home. But you see fewer of them, for the instinct of the Parisian shop girl even is to avoid flamboyancy in any detail and aim for the simple silhouette.

Another thing I note pleasingly absent from the hundreds and hundreds of bobbed heads seen is the absence of that too marcelled appearance which mars many an otherwise good head. The wave here seen is universally a large one. Antoine allows where the part comes on the side of the head, but one large wave for the top of the head and one wave apiece for the sides with the ends curled up. Another recommendation he makes applies to the back of the head. Instead of a straight downward line from the crown to the nape of the neck, the swirl which is a movement from one side to the other is less common.

His infallible rule for a fashionable bob is that it must bear a resemblance to classic sculpture.

The Botticelli bob, illustrated here, is being introduced by Antoine as a charming "coiff" for the girl of good features—but not for one with a big nose or a too broad face. A part is made in the direct center of the head. The hair, instead of being brushed down over the ears, as was popular with the former center parting, is combed back in the direction of the part and brought around over the edge of brow and ears in a simple figure S. Tiny combs hold it in place at the sides of the head. No wave is given on top, and but a large one over the ears.

Antoine urges a study of the line of hair around the face and to work with a comb until you have worked out the most flattering frame. The length of the jaw from chin to ear may need to be cut off by hair brought down well over the ear and out upon the cheekbone. Such a jaw, in his opinion, commits total beauty destruction if the hair is worn back tight and the ear is left exposed. It is reminiscent of the profile of a horse.

You do see over here quite a number of women wearing their usually glossy black hair brushed back straight off the forehead and the hair tucked behind the ears. Where the ears are small and shapely, this is smart.

A much lower part on the side is being worn and worn effectively over a brow that needs a little more softness.

A brunette with a thin face is permitted the bangs like a little girl's, but none other, in Antoine's opinion. A blonde may take upon her head a bit of fluffiness, but the brunette is asked for her own sake to hew to the line of the close, trim crop.

One sees a strong tendency to a short haircut with the hair in the back running down to a fine point. On the other hand, a popular line and one favored by Antoine is to cut the hair in the back to appear from a distance as though the hair were not bobbed. The line might better be described as one identical with the effect when you put your head down and flop your hair over to comb it. The rim is like a gentle half moon.

One thing is sure, the popular old excuse about short hair being so much less trouble and so much more comfortable than long is not borne out by the care the elegant Parisian gives her head. Perhaps that is the reason one does not find so much misgiving on this side of the water about the bob's threatened loss of popularity. Woman frequents the hairdressing parlor often enough to avoid that in between spell when line and curl both vanish in a messy looking head, and only one's kindest relatives can see virtue in its owner.

THE TROUSSEAU WILL INCLUDE MANY EMBROIDERED FROCKS AND GOWNS

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—Just so that you wed Chic and Dignity, there is sure to be a happy ending to your wedding gown. Of course, it does seem at first to be an incompatible union, but it is really remarkable how this oddly assorted couple does hit it off. Through some alchemy of art, all the modern touches—such as jabots, godets, circular hems, and their ilk—are reconciled to that ceremonial flavor which is the sine qua non of a wedding gown

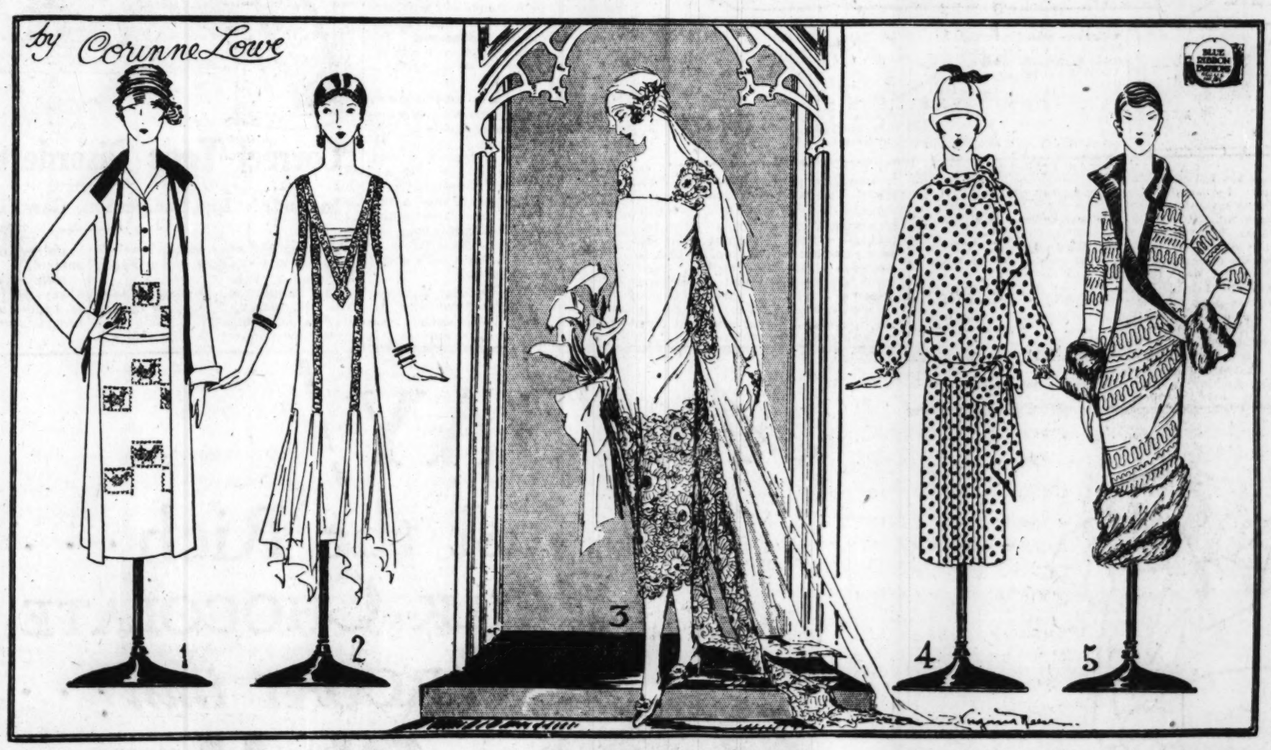
In the last six months no radical changes have occurred in the creation of these garments. After all, why should we expect innovations here when the silhouette of everyday wear offers so little encouragement? What with slinky lines and flaring hems plodding along in the same old way, what with Policeman Style still traveling the one familiar beat, we can't look to the wedding frock to start any insurrections.

And so we behold again this winter the same group of offerings in this province. Here for the young and slender bride is the period frock with its molded bodice and flaring skirt; here for more mature types are the sheaths and the tunics and the draped effects to which our eyes have now become so thoroughly accustomed. Many of the sheath gowns pursue the policy of the scalloped hem outlined by the season's less ceremonial styles. Still others widen their skirts at the hem by handkerchief drapes and jabot effects—these latter perhaps reaching from neckline to skirt edge. Quite a few believe in a sorority of waist lines and apportion one to both hip and underarm zones; a device, by the way, which is especially successful in garbing the tall bride who yearns for an effect of diminished height.

Yes, they do all these things, but they certainly don't do them with any gesture of, "Just look at this brand new idea." The fact of it is, that more and more the problem of the prospective bride is to search about among established modes rather than to blaze any new trails. After all, too, here is no insignificant assignment, for that quest among the traditional involves a careful study of one's type in order to discover just which one of these accustomed modes is going to most become the individual you.

Among many different models of wedding gowns we have selected one sketched in the center because of an almost universal adaptability. It may be worn by the young and mature, by the tall and the short, by the slender and the not so slender. It is equally susceptible to argument concerning material and trimming. Finally, the simplicity of its line not only strikes the dignity essential to all wedding gowns, but it also insures a future of service after the marriage bells have rung. For it is obvious that a frock marked by, let us say, the circular hem line or a certain type of tunic, is bound to go out of fashion much more quickly than is this classical mode.

Here you find the creation developed in ivory white satin draped on the side and held in place by one of the two panels of rose point lace hanging from the shoulders. The panel on the other side, I hasten to mention, is allowed to hang perfectly free—a divergence which spells the one word of whimsical irregularity permitted to this classic type. Yet that one word is potent, for in a season when every other modish garment is apt to take sides or to develop a front in contrast to its back, this device means everything to the general character of the robe. It is one of those fusions of Chic and Dignity of which I have spoken.



A wide band of the same lace encircles the skirt, which, by the way, is somewhat shorter than heretofore. However, the bride is a privileged character so far as the length of skirts is concerned, and those who feel that this type of gown loses requisite formality through shortness may prolong the illustrated length by several inches. Medallions of rose point are placed on the point of the long fitted sleeves, and the veil of white tulle with its anchoring lilies falls to an equal length with the lace panels.

As has been the case for several seasons, the modern wedding gown is not dependent upon lace. Again this winter quite a few of the notable models designed both in New York and Paris substitute for this hereditary trimming embroidery or touches of tulle. It goes without saying that the silhouette of this model of ours is not committed to rose point for its effectiveness. Instead of that encircling band about the skirt, there may be an embroidery of pearls, of silver thread, or an intermingling of both. There may, too, be merely inset motifs of lace emphasized by pearl or silver embroidery. In any of these cases the long lace panels would yield to the material of the frock, and they would be trimmed with whatever touches are selected for the skirt.

ANOTHER VIEW OF TODAY'S FIGURES.

There is just one suggestion which one is obliged to make concerning the adaptation of this model to the small woman. The deep band is sure to subtract rather than add to her height, and for this reason la petite had far better omit the lace on the skirt and to make the frock an unbroken line of satin. If any trimming at all be used, it should be confined to a comparatively narrow impression at the hem of the skirt. A longer skirt than is indicated here will also add to the illusion of extra inches.

Among the materials now employed for wedding gowns we find stress laid upon the various tissues which belong to the general mode. Ribbed silks, for example, and silver metallic weaves! And in the development of crepe satin, the wedding gown has not lagged behind its peers. On one stunning Paris model I have just seen I found bands of the satin surface forming the chief decoration on a draped sheath frock composed of the crepe surface. To be sure, these bands were applied with a fairy-like glistening of silver thread and of embroidery, but in their leading sentiment they differed not one whit from those on the charming evening gowns designed of satin back crepe by Patou.

If you decide upon embroidery for your wedding gown, you will be doing something that has the sanction of the early spring mode in all types of apparel. In silk and wool, in beads and in brilliants, we are going at embroidery with a freshness of spirit that would seem to indicate a long, embroidery starved past. Sports clothes, afternoon dresses, evening clothes—all seem to bear witness to the prevailing passion.

Of course, an embroidered dress sounds just about as new as a dog's bark. But the interesting thing is that the best designers don't seem to be applying embroidery in the same old hackneyed way. Yes, there are still those familiar allover embroidered sheaths which we have been looking at this many a day, but the most of the new things don't look as if they were simply color soaked. Discretion is the better part of needlework nowadays, and so we encounter our designs used sparingly and effectively.

Here are some of the examples pointing to present day finesse: In one of Cheruit's models a satin which is the color of an autumn leaf is set off about neckline and skirt hem with narrow bands of minute pearl embroidery, and the same bands are used to negotiate the introduction of irregular godets in the skirt. A black lace dinner frock, also imported, falls over a foundation of black satin which has a deep border of multicolored flowers executed in silk floss. Third, a black georgette is embroidered down the front with a panel of varitinted silk embroidery outlined by silver thread and widening gradually from the neckline to the hem, where, taking its cue from the panel, the embroidery is extended all about the skirt in a band of two inch width.

A last striking illustration of modern embroidery themes is found in a Patou gown which allies a black satin corsage with a black chiffon skirt. On this skirt there are appliques of silk flowers, each with an embroidered center and each attached by silver thread.

It will be seen from these examples that our modern embroidery playground is the skirt. Although occasionally a band or a motif is used on the corsage, there seems an increasing tendency to lavish our ornamentation upon the skirt and more especially upon the hem zone. There is, too, a great deal of this work in the form of bands. This, after all, is to be expected, for the early spring modes are terribly addicted to bands of all sorts—as much so as is a circus.

In the trousseau garments which we have illustrated for the winter bride, you will see a plentiful use of this trimming touch. At the left for the ensemble sports costume is an ivory camel's hair twill embroidered down the front of its frock with a peasantlike effect of bottle green embroidery. This is topped by a matching coat which echoes the green embroidery in a collar and narrow ties of taffeta.

For her evening gown the bride to be can select nothing more in line with recent prejudice than a crepe back satin. Second from the left we show a new model made of this material, calling in as its chief accomplice bands of crystal embroidery. Two of these bands form the embarking point of draperies of matching chiffon. With this is worn in the new fashion that follows the line of the hair a fillet of pearls and topazes.

Among the many printed fabrics ordained for Palm Beach polka dots seem to have asserted their claims to distinction. For the little morning frock of a honeymoon spent at southern resort we recommend therefore the smart affair of white crepes de Chine dotted in red, second from the right. Last comes more embroidery—here in an afternoon coat made of bronze Canton crepe of heavy quality. Against this bronze are placed with brilliant effect bands of worsted embroidery in various colors, among which green and coral predominate. A lining of green ribbed silk is permitted to show in collar and narrow revers, and the final thought consists of natural lynx.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

HOLIDAY COSTUMES BEST OF SEASON'S OFFERINGS.

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Paris goes a bit mad during the holidays. There is gaiety and general celebration everywhere, and even the humblest café is permeated with the holiday atmosphere of the season. They polish up the annual sign, "Ici on Réveillonne," and every true Parisian, whatever his station, goes out to celebrate. Over in Montmartre the lights are a bit more garish, the hectic merriment more feverish, and gorgeous women more bejeweled and befurred than at any other time.

In the more sedate haunts of the elegant Parisian the air of holiday happiness is just as evident. Place Vendome is scarcely spacious enough to accommodate the crowding motors which disgorge their smartly gowned passengers before the Hotel Ritz, and the pedestrian in the Rue Daunou risks his life dodging limousines and parties of descending merrymakers going to Ciro's. The fashionable Parisienne dons her newest and smartest frock, and her most sumptuous evening coat and accessories, and goes forth to do honor to the great season.

During the week in which Paris celebrates you have scarcely any use at all for your daytime clothes, for you consecrate yourself to the hours from midnight to dawn, and sleep most of the day, to be prepared for the party that occurs in the next set of wee sma' hours. This is the great hour of evening clothes, and that portion of the wardrobe is strained to its capacity to give elegance and variety to each occasion. Americans, North and South, with a sprinkling of French and Russians, pack the Ritz, and the overflow from the western hemisphere helps out the Parisians at Ciro's and the Café de Paris. The expert in fashions has the great opportunity of the year to observe styles as they are worn and the enormous variations of nationality. Of course, everybody wears Paris clothes, but it's the way they wear them that counts in analyzing the difference.

I think there is the least difference between the elegant American and her smart Parisienne sister. The general devotion of these two to the fine art of simplicity was never more apparent than during this holiday season. Certainly the general line and character of costumes worn at these gorgeous celebrations were simple and unostentatious.

At the Ritz one of our American comtesses was wearing the sumptuously simple gown you see sketched in our second offering. All white chiffon, this dress is as devoid of display as the daffodil, and has quite as much the air of having been created in perfection, with nothing you would want to add or subtract. Its sole trimming consists of the three diamond clasps that finish the flat girdle. The soft pleating of the chiffon tunic affects one as does the feathery floating cloud of white in the summer sky. Style notes are supplied by the deep yoke of plaited chiffon, the dropped shoulder, and the split tunic.

The wearer augmented her costume by one of those throat hugging necks.

We ran into our first offering as we went into Ciro's on Christmas eve. It is a fine example of the gloriousness that some of the simple frocks have achieved this season. It takes a lot of character and personality to get away with such gorgeousness, and the wearer did it beautifully.

This gown was designed by a Russian grand duchess for Myrbor, and its marvelous embroidery advertises the Russian genius for color, for it is composed of the strong and brilliant shades you have seen in the canvases of certain Russian modernists. For a background, a silver tissue is used, and the dress is little more than a straight slip, but quite the best sort of thing for such magnificent embroidery. Small odd shaped pieces of silk, of lamé, and of satin are welded into rather odd futuristic motifs, that are tremendously effective. There is nothing particularly smashing about the individuality of this frock, but it stands out with fine distinction amongst the standardized evening gowns of the season. The Russian princess who wore it carried no fan, and wore no jewels except a small string of pearls.

Our fourth offering is something new in the way of evening cloaks, and also comes from the clever hands of Myrbor, who dresses some of the most exclusive of smart European women. You don't know when you first look at it whether it has fur sleeves, or if that opulent abundance of sable across the back and over the sleeves is kind of super-collar. Actually it is both, and may be pulled up around the throat, or worn as you see it, open with a sort of elegant carelessness.

The material of the coat is velvet, and it also is embroidered with the strange, modernistic embroidery you see on the Myrbor gown, only in this case the colors have been reduced to gold, silver, and black, that balance to a nicety the brilliancy of the dahlia velvet. Naturally, carrying out the idea of balance and proportion, the gown worn with such a coat is simple.

In fact, this seems to be the rule, that for evening, either the cloak or the gown is kept to a simple harmony of one or two tones, when its companion garment is elaborately embroidered, brocaded or encrusted with jewels. You can indulge your love of glittering embroideries if you wish, but the secret of chic seems to be to confine it to one thing, and not let it run riot all over your evening wardrobe.

laces of diamonds and sapphires, alternating, and carried a huge feather fan, part white, part silvered ostrich. Her simple slippers were silver, and her hose also. This was one of the most beautiful Réveillon costumes I saw.

Our third offering, which was also worn at the Ritz, is no less potent a thesis on the art of the uncomplicated. It is made of green, a lustrous and extra heavy crêpe de chine in that bright and delicate tone of green that comes only with the first buds of April—a color that is smart in Paris just now, and not at all common. It has been cut, by Lenief, with the surplice front, giving a long and slender line that flatters almost any figure from the obese to the emaciated. It has a lot of verve, and in addition to that a real virtue, in that it can be worn as your sole evening costume, if necessary, so long as there is a thread of it, or, in other words, until it naturally dies of overwork.

The embroidery consists of lines and points done with various colored beads, so that a rich oriental color harmony is the result. With it is worn the long tulle scarf you see here, in the same green, and sprinkled all over with a sort of powder of diamonds, which a Russian noblewoman is making by a new system of batik, and which has a considerable vogue among smart Parisiennes.

For evening this season the scarf is hewing a hard course along the path of chic, unless it is a mere cloud of tulle or chiffon, the more fragile and ephemereal, the smarter it is. It is scarfs such as this one, with its genuinely novel ornamentation of infinitesimal diamonds, that are considered the final touch to the evening outfit. Shawls and massive scarfs are pretty well out of the running this winter.

Brilliant futuristic embroidery adds distinction to the simple silver slip dress.

The deep plaited yoke and split tunic of this white chiffon dress are smart details.

Surplice closings and bead embroidery in an odd design lend verve to this dinner dress.

Sable sleeves and collar distinguish an embroidered velvet cloak.

SPORT HATS AND SCARFS.

THE hat shown is a white felt to be worn with sport clothes or for semi dress. Any size may be used. Mushroom shapes are popular for summer, as they shade the eyes. For trimming a heavy grade of cretonne is used. A design with large roses is particularly good for this purpose, and those in the mulberry shades look especially well combined with white.

Cut out flowers and trim off edges neatly. Set these on the upper part of the brim, either close together or one in front, one on each side, and a small flower in the back, as the back part of the brim should be only about one inch in width. As a rule, no flower is placed there.

Pin flowers in place. Using silver or gold thread, couch all around the outline. After couching, run a thread under all the threads to give a heavier appearance. Some thread may be used on the inside of the flower, also following the design, or the entire flower can be couched in this stitch. Be careful not to stitch through, as it will show on the under side.

The side crown may be treated in the same way. Put all the way around about one-half inch from bottom of the crown. To finish off, use a ribbon one inch wide, the color of the flower. One and a half yards are required. Tie around the bottom of the crown on the right side, back, sew ends, then make a bow of the remainder of the ribbon. Sew firmly where the ends join on the bottom of the crown.

Scarfs to match are used with these hats. To make one, use two yards of white georgette. Cut in half on the fold down the length, as the full width makes the scarf too bulky. Have this hemstitched all the way around. Cut flowers from the cretonne and set in nine inches from bottom of scarf. Couch on as on hat. Stitches will show through, and care should be taken to put the knots under the cretonne on the upper side. Press well.

The second scarf shown is of two toned georgette shading from dark to light purple to orchid, for example. Two yards are required. Baste the selvedges together, also the fold down center of material, and both ends. Have this hemstitched in harmonizing color, although black hemstitching is used on all colors. Always dress the hemstitching before cutting in the middle to make a picot edge.

The third scarf shown is smart. It is of black georgette with jonquil yellow on the other side. Two yards of each cut down through fold is required. Two scarfs may be made at the same time.

Take the two half widths, place evenly on each other, baste closely all around. The width of the scarf will be twenty inches. With a pin mark one-half of this width. Measure two and one-half inches each way from this, giving a width of five inches. Starting from the bottom cut upward for five inches on each side on either the black or jonquil material as illustrated. Turn the cut taklike piece back, fold the top, and make a hem of about one-half inch wide. Hemstitch this. Then lap this up on double material, baste on both sides but not the top, as that is left open to use as a pocket. Hemstitch all the way round and around pocket as illustrated. This may be put on both ends of scarf or just one. A little feather or flower ornament may be used as a smart finish.

Two Were Surprised.

When I came to this country, a couple of years ago, I knew but little English. But my uncle, with whom I stayed, nevertheless, put me to work in a restaurant, of which he was the owner. As a majority of the customers knew my uncle, I got along pretty well, but one morning a young stranger walked in and ordered coffee, toast, and sliced onion. I thought it was an awfully queer thing to eat, especially in the morning, but I had already got used to many funny things, so I went to the kitchen, prepared the toast, and sliced up a nice fat onion, which smelled enough to make anybody cry.

I will never forget the startled expression on his face when he saw this new dish, but as I probably looked green enough to suggest the fact that I was a foreigner, he did not get sore, but laughed loudly and exclaimed, "Here, I said 'orange,' and not 'onion'!"

Whereupon he told my uncle that he surely had a smart niece, and I never heard the last of it. T. M.

Candid.

My most embarrassing moment occurred on the ice just recently, while I was skating with my friend. Everything was going along nicely when all of a sudden some one hailed him and we had to stop.

It proved to be his chum, and after I had been introduced to him I turned to my friend and said, in loud tones and without realizing what I said, "Is this all you stopped me for?"

His chum just stood still and stared at me, and I finally managed to apologize. A. Y.

Properly Indignant.

Most of the boys in my rooming house at college had pictures of girls of their choice. I did not wish to be behind at all, so I secured a picture of an attractive girl who lived in a town in which my sister had taught school.

One night while I was bragging about her one of the boys seemed to take a special interest in her.

"Where does she live?" he asked.

I unsuspectingly told him her name and address.

"I thought I knew her," he said. "It might be of interest to you to know she has been my sister-in-law since last June." H. P. T.

Then Came Light.

Dear friends whose company we highly appreciate, but who cannot call frequently, visited after Christmas. When they departed I urged, "Please do not be stingy with your presence in the future."

The lady explained with difficulty that she had made a present to my wife and to our daughter, and apologized for not having remembered me.

It dawned on me she had misunderstood the word "presence" for "presents." W. L.

On an Impulse.

A few weeks ago I contracted a slight cold, and, against the better judgment of all the relatives, who wanted me to consult the old family doctor, decided on an impulse of good will, to try out the new doctor, who had just moved in down the street.

The nice little person who answered the door seemed politely surprised when I asked to see the doctor. But no suspicion ruffled the serenity of my mind. A few seconds later I was pouring out an account concerning my ailment and symptoms to the patient man across the table.

He smiled sympathetically, interrupting my soliloquy with reluctance: "I'm sorry madam, but I'm a veterinarian." R. McI.

Baby Makes It Plain.

While letting my bobbed hair grow, I wore two side switches. One night we had company. While talking to one of the guests, my baby daughter whom I held in my arm, untied one of these switches, throwing it clear in the middle of the room. M. S.

Enough of That.

Riding home from school on a crowded street car, I stood in front of a fellow occupying a seat. I had three school books and two library books on my arm, and suddenly one dropped into the lap of this fellow.

He handed it back to me and the car lurched and another book got away from me, falling on the floor. As he bent to recover No. 2, in my confusion I dropped a third one, it falling right on his lowered head.

I was twice as embarrassed when he hollored out: "Say, girlie, I don't mind if you play nicely, but you're getting too rough." M. B.

Losing 39 lbs. In 6 Weeks Was Easy

Had Mrs. Betty Clarkson been told that in less than 6 weeks she could lose 39 lbs., she would have smiled incredulously, and then pointed to her 162 pounds as a pretty good reason for her doubt. She had tried about everything. To stand just 5 ft. 2 in. and weigh 162 lbs. made Mrs. Clarkson, as she puts it, "the despair of friends and dressmakers." Her story is interesting, for there are thousands today who have the same problem she has so happily solved, and who now have the same opportunity for free proof.

"I was so fat that I hated to look in a mirror. I was the despair of friends and dressmakers. I tried about everything to lose weight, without success, when a friend urged me to try the Wallace records. I really did it to please her, and as she told me the first lesson was free, I figured I had nothing to lose. I sent for the lesson—it came, everything free. Imagine my joy when the scales showed me 4 lbs. lighter the first week. At an incredibly low price I got all the lessons, and in just 6 weeks I lost 39 lbs. to music, nothing else. Now I am slender, wear modish gowns, look and feel better than ever, and, Mr. Wallace, I owe it all to you. What I have done others can do, and the lessons aren't 'work,' they're 'just fun'."

MILK CHOCOLATE
OVERCOAT that . . .

Oh Henry!

wears is a fine candy all by itself . . . But in Oh Henry! . . . oooh! it's good!

Good? Why, fella, that's just half-saying it! You get your teeth into that delicious combination of a rich butter cream dipped in a luscious, chewy caramel, crispy, crunchy nuts and over it all a delicious taste of that fine milk chocolate . . . why, there's no candy made that's so good!

Nearly a million people a day drop a dime and call for Oh Henry! They have made it the fastest selling candy in America. And there's just one reason . . . that wonderful, inimitable TASTE! Try a bar NOW! It only costs a dime.

THE ADVENTURES OF FUZZY WUZZY

THE INVITATIONS.

By Raymond Kelly.

CAVES are nice, even little ones like you and Buster and Billy here dug in the sand last summer. That is, of course, they're nice when they don't fall in and get you all dirty; so that you have to take an extra bath only an hour after you've had one. But the nicest caves are the ones Mother Nature makes, for she takes her time about it and makes them right. She makes great big caves, and middle sized caves, and little bitsy caves, and each is the best kind for what it's good for.

Perhaps middle sized caves are the nicest of all, because there's too much room to be crowded, and not enough to get lost.

The cave on the mountain side one mile and nine steps from Fuzzy Wuzzy's father's den is that kind of cave, and that's probably the reason they had the party there.

Patsy Porcupine delivered the invitations. He was the best one to do it, because, although he's good natured, nobody's likely to actually step on him. That's an important thing when you're going around to invite a lot of wild animals to a party.

Patsy Porcupine stopped at every den and hollow tree on the mountain, and at each place he left a neat square of birch bark on which he had written with one of his own quills the words, "Come one, come all. Midwinter cave party of mountain and meadow folk. Lay aside your grudges and forget that your neighbors are good to eat. Saturday night at the cave behind the waterfall. Music, dancing, and refreshments. Bring the little ones with you."

"O, Mother," cried Fuzzy Wuzzy, as soon as he'd read the birch bark. "Can I? May I? Won't you let me go?"

Mother Bear looked at Father Bear. "Do you think it's safe?" she asked.

"Safe enough for us," growled Father Bear, "and safe enough for the other folk, if they behave themselves, and I think they will."

"Very well, then," said Mother Bear. "We will all go, and as they're going to have refreshments, I shall bake a cake if Fuzzy will help me by licking the pan when I'm through mixing."

"Goody," cried Fuzzy Wuzzy. "I love to help make cake."

"And I," said Father Bear, "must tune my fiddle and press my blue swallow tailed coat. If we're going to have music, it ought to be really nice music, and no bear can lead an ochestra without a well tuned fiddle and neatly pressed clothes."

"As for me," said Grandma Grizzly, "I shall have to starch me a lace cap. I'm not vain, but neatness is my motto, and I'm not going to have to be ashamed of my appearance."

So Mother Bear baked cakes and made salad and other good things to eat, while Father Bear pressed his coat and shined all the shoes. Then he practiced on the speech he was going to make if any one asked him. Father Bear was pretty sure he'd be asked, too, because he could make a better speech than he could a pie, never having tried his paw at baking.

As for Grandma Grizzly, she starched her lace cap, and then mended the snagged place in Fuzzy Wuzzy's jacket, while Fuzzy Wuzzy helped everybody by getting out of the way each time he was told to do so.

What was going on at Fuzzy Wuzzy's home was going on at every home on the mountain, too, and next Sunday I'm going to tell you all about the party at the waterfall cave.

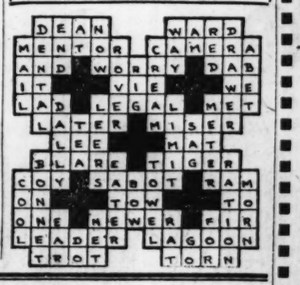
ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE



COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, a large bottle at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

ISN'T IT ODD?

By William Atherton Du Puy.

ISN'T it odd that the great blue heron, frail, slender, beautiful creature that it is, should be able successfully to defend itself against the attacks of such birds of prey as the hawks and eagles?

The heron, as is well known, hunts out swampy solitudes and stands there in the grass and shallow water, statuesque as a figure in a Japanese print. Then, presently, a fish comes idling by or a bullfrog plunges. The quiet watcher springs to life. Out shoots its head. The great, pointed beak, six inches long, its only weapon, is brought into play. It has spiked its game.

At this moment that competent huntsman, the red shouldered hawk, appears on the scene. It sees this awkward wader there in the marsh. It knows the heron's spare body affords little meat, but it is hungry and a bone is better than no food. It circles and swoops at its prospective prey.

The timid heron is much frightened. It knows, however, that it has no chance of escape in its slow and labored flight. Instead of attempting this it cowers on its haunches. It huddles down, all its plumes drawn close.

The hawk comes hurtling on. As it nears the heron it finds that the wader is sitting tight with that long, needle-like bill pointed straight at its onrushing enemy. It is as if one held a sword that his foe might rush on it.

The wary hawk appreciates this danger. He attempts to get past the protruding lance and give his talons a chance to drive home. Yet he finds himself quite unable to do this. He is forced to turn aside and forego striking.

These game birds are persistent, however, and the hawk turns, circles about, strikes again. At each approach, however, he finds the heron is watchful, its spear is so shifted that the attacker must turn aside or meet it head on.

The hawk, being bold, is likely to try a stroke, despite the danger. It is quite sure to receive a wound, though this may be but in the flesh. Feathers may fly. Blood may drip. The hovering heron is likely, however, to go unscathed. Its "Present bayonets" has been effective.

Bright Sayings of Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

James was whittling and cut himself with the knife. He began to cry, and ran to show mother what had happened.

"Don't cry, James," she contributed helpfully.

"I'm not making it hurt by crying, it's making me cry by hurting!" convincingly flared James. F. J.

My four nieces are disappointed because the new baby isn't a brother that each time I visit there they want to exchange her for my small son.

The last time I went they were insistent. Their mother reproached them for not being more fond of sister.

The youngest child said, "Well, we didn't want a sister. Ain't we enough girls?" F. G.

"Aunty, George pushed me down and skinned my knee!" complained Bobby.

"I guess it doesn't hurt you much," decided aunty.

"Much enough for me to wish it was him's knee!" viciously flung Bobby. F. J.

A young cousin visiting at our house looked rather untidy with her hair in curlers and not much attention paid to her person in the morning.

In the afternoon this same young woman looked entirely different, with hair in ringlets and her face powdered and rouged.

One morning she made her appearance in her best, as she was going out to breakfast, and Stella, seeing her thus, observed: "Why, Cousin Mattie, you got your afternoon face on, haven't you?" B. C.

Billy did not know there were callers in the living room so he went bouncing in with Laddie at his heels. Billy himself was the picture of boyish carelessness. His face was grimy, his hair stood on end, and his shoes were muddy.

He was quite nonplussed when he saw the guests and he said, stammeringly, "Well-er-well, mother, I suppose you unprouded of me now." J. R.

Don, as punishment for disobeying about crossing the street, was left behind when his mother went on some errands with the car.

He stood at the window and wept bitterly for some minutes; then he stopped and said to his aunt, who was in the room, "Aunt Bess, do you love me?" for he had been told people didn't love him when he was naughty.

"Why yes, Donnie, I love you."

"Well," said Don, "I don't love my sels." L. C. K.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $1 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one—or if you have one in your private or family possession you would like to enter the contest, send it to Love Letter Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned send copies of the ones you wish to keep.

TELLING A SECRET.

DEAREST: At our last meeting, which seems like a dream because of its sweetness, I had a secret in my heart which I longed to impart to you, but which, like a coward in love, I dared not mention.

In the days that have intervened, I have grown more brave, probably because in separation I have recognized the utter desolation of life without your presence, and dismay at a future without your smile has urged on me a little more courage. I love you; yet how I fear to speak the words lest, in my eagerness, I have misunderstood your gentle smile and overrated my own worthiness.

I beg that you reflect before you reply to my letter, and if there be aught about me deserving of your love, bestow it upon me. My heart is so full of the future as its guiding star that it is no wonder, dear one, if my pen runs riot; but if you love me you will understand that I am mad with the fever of love in spite of my efforts at calmness.

I shall await your reply with a lover's eagerness, so be merciful, adored one, and write as soon as possible. Your love will come to me like a precious gift; your indifference will be a blow which I can bear if I must, so, above all things, be absolutely sure of your heart before you answer.

Lovingly and with hope,
Your faithful, DONALD.

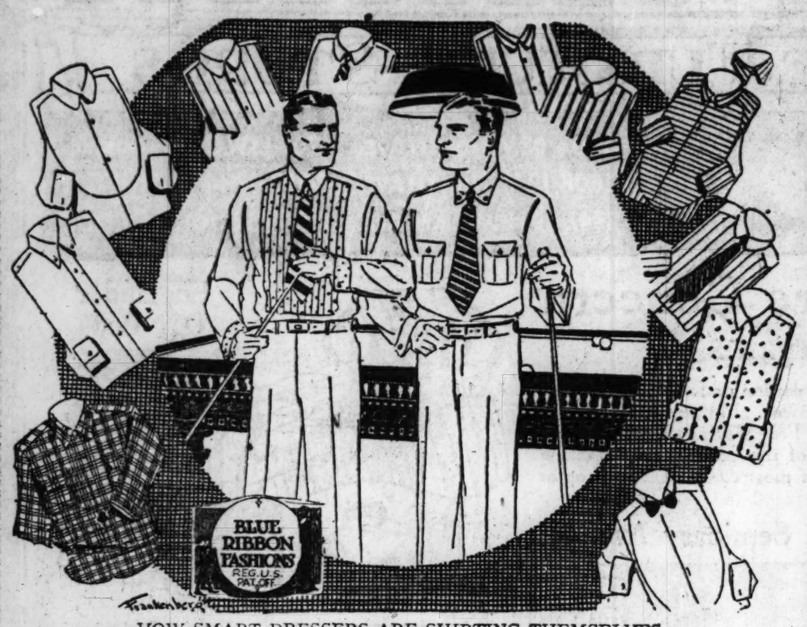
MEN'S FASHIONS



HOW SMART DRESSERS ARE SHIRTING THEMSELVES.

This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, address envelope for personal reply

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

By A. T. Gallico.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Shirts can be either necessary articles of dress which it is customary to wear between the undershirt and the coat, and which are kept in sufficient number to insure a clean one each day, or they can be an opportunity for a well dressed man to indulge his fancy for variety and smart effects.

There are some men to whom shirts are just an article of dress and not an ornament. These men will continue to wear nothing but plain white shirts, no matter how much in the limelight of fashion fancy colored shirts may be.

There are plenty of others whose shirt wardrobe, if spread out on the bed or on some convenient table, would reveal an assortment similar to that in the drawing. To them, shirts are as important as suits and ties. They must be not only clean and unfrayed, but also must have some definite place in the sartorial scheme, some color connection; some smartness. There are shirts in their wardrobes for all occasions—shirts for sport wear, shirts for business wear, shirts for formal evening and formal day attire—and all must be included in a complete well dressed man's outfit.

If you were going to throw all your shirts out and start all over again in the way that well shirted men are dressed, here are some of the shirts that you might collect. They are the styles which smart dressers are seen in these days.

For business wear the most popular, outside of the plain white, which are always correct, are the striped shirts, either vertically or horizontally striped. The colors in the striped shirts would depend upon the colors of your suits. But any of these colors are possible: Blue and white, black and white, brown and white, tan and white, lavender and white, pink and white, gray and white, or green and white. Any of these colors in a solid colored shirts is also smart. Figured shirts are also popular.

Either white collars, wing or turn over, or collars to match the colored shirts are worn with business clothes. The shirts may have plain, plaited, or stiff bosoms. But with wing collars they are always stiff or plaited, never soft.

For formal day wear, with cutaway coat and striped trousers, the shirt may be stiff or broad plaited of bosom, plain white or solid colored, with white cuffs and collar. If the short black or gray jacket is worn with striped trousers, a solid colored shirt, or one of the horizontally striped stiff bosomed shirts goes well with it. But the collar must be stiff white, either wing or turn down. A solid color blue shirt with white cuffs and wing collar is sometimes seen with this semi-formal afternoon attire.

For sport wear the shirt depends a great deal upon the temperature of the spot where the sport takes place. If you are going skating the flannel shirts are comfortable as well as fashionable. The heavy humberjack style of flannel shirt is for especial warmth. But the lightweight flannels in stripes are a smart addition to any shirt wardrobe.

White oxford, or blue or white or striped cheviots are also popular in sport shirts. They are worn either buttoned down at the collar or with long unfastened points.

For evening wear the plain bosomed evening shirt is smarter than the plaited dress shirt with dinner coat. Although the plaited shirts are worn for extremely informal tuxedo wear, the plain bosom for the average occasion is preferable.

The dress white shirt may be plain patterned, or of some modest design, such as a diamond pattern or a ribbed pique.

There may be one, two, or three studs used. The two studded shirt is most popular. But if one is the proud owner of a large single pearl, one will seek out a shirt with one studhole, so that the jewel may shine in all its glory.

Sets of studs come with three, so that if one has shirts to accommodate three studs, it isn't necessary to use a button for the third.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

LAST week's cold blasts reminded us that winter is here, didn't they? And they found plenty of those we can help, you may be sure—and help with an ease that will surprise you!

When we think of winter, we think of heat and coal. Coal is needed by many a poor family—but there are a lot of other needs we can meet, out of articles we have and can spare. For example, you should have seen the requests come in for clothing suitable for children of school age. There are hundreds of children going to school without warm coats, with broken shoes, without mufflers and warm caps. Meanwhile many of us have outgrown children's garments about the house—coats, shoes, mufflers, caps, rubbers, underwear. They are doing us no good, and every one of them can be used to relieve suffering, if only you'll let me know that you'll give them.

And there's just as big a chance to help the grownups, the infants, and the aged. You would be surprised if you could know the number of families we have on record which are practically without fuel or blankets and bedding enough to go around so they can get warm at night. Think of that—cold during the day, and unable to keep warm in bed! If you have surplus articles of this sort let us know about them, and we'll give you an opportunity to put them to work.

Again, old curtains, drapes, and rugs are wonderful helps. Many families living in basements and old wooden buildings are suffering because of the drafts and cold floors. Drapes for the walls and rugs for the floors will help a great deal. And then stoves and heaters—if you can give one of these you will be helping immensely.

In fact, when cold weather comes, almost anything will help. It's just a question of what you can spare. Won't you think it over—and write to me today, letting me know what help you can give?

Asks Religious Text Books.

"It has been long my desire to study for the ministry. The war came, and I planned to begin my study as soon as I returned to this country, but since that time financial affairs have made it impossible for me to go to school. I am eager to spend my evenings in the study of religion, and would be grateful to any one who could give me books or a correspondence course that would help me in my undertaking. E. R. W."

This call comes from outside the city. We shall be glad to supply you with the address, if you have anything to donate that will be valuable.

To Make a Child Happy.

"I have a very nice box of paints, and also a stencil set, both practically unused, to give to some child who would like to have them. There are also a few paper dolls, with pretty colored paper to be cut into dresses for them. M. F."

This gift is guarantee for happiness for some child. Nothing is more indoor winter fun than paints and paper dolls.

Help for Destitute Family.

"Dear Miss Brown, will you help us if you can? My husband has been walking the streets and looking for work for months, and we have reached the stage where we have not enough clothing to wear, and days when there is no food in the house. There are boys 12, 10, and 3, girls 6 and 4, and now a new baby. We need every kind of help there is, and we will call anything a God-send. MRS. H. H."

This is a case for immediate attention. They will be thankful for anything—a child's coat—a loaf of bread. Surely you can lend the helping hand to this family. It is one of many in Chicago and on our lists in need of the actual necessities of existence.

Need Warm Bedding.

"My two children have seen sick, and although they are better now, I want to ask you for warm blankets or comforters to keep them warm at night. I am living with my mother and we are having a hard time to make both ends meet. My little brother, 14, is going to school without an overcoat, and has only a thin sweater to keep him warm. I wonder if some one can help us? We will be happy to receive anything at all. "MRS. G."

The children have just recovered from their illness, but we fear for their future health, unless they are properly clothed and kept warm at night.

Requests a Chiffonier.

"Has any one a chiffonier or dresser to spare? I know a woman who is trying to make a pleasant home for her family in spite of the fact that her husband is ill and unable to work. Their furnishings are meager and they have no place to keep the children's clean clothing except an old suitcase. Anything she could use would make her happy. C. P. P."

If you have such an article of furniture to give you'll let us know about it soon, won't you?

Beyond Her Means.

"I wonder if some one has a warm sweater, size 40-42, to pass on to me? I am expecting a baby, and it is cold where I work, but I cannot afford to spend the money on a sweater or clothes just now. I will gladly call for it, or pay the postage, if some one has one to pass on to me. MRS. H."

Perhaps there is a heavy sweater hanging in the closet that you have not needed for a long time. The writer would be grateful for its warmth this winter.

TAKE BOTH TOGETHER

Milk of Magnesia and Mineral Oil now Combined

One of the most important medical achievements of recent years is the combination of milk of magnesia and mineral oil. Haley's Magnesia-Oil successfully combines the two, and makes them doubly effective.

The oil carries the magnesia straight to the lower bowel, the seat of most so-called stomach trouble. All of the antacid properties of the milk of magnesia are applied to correcting the trouble at its source. Poisonous acids are neutralized, clogged tracts are lubricated—at one and the same time. Action is prompt, but devoid of griping. Delightful to take; no oily taste. Can be mixed with milk and given children without their knowledge.

Haley's M-O
Just Milk of Magnesia and Pure Mineral Oil

You'll Get Rid of Blackheads Sure

There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads, that is to dissolve them.

To do this get two ounces of Calonite powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The Calonite powder and the water dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.

First—Stop Pain Don't suffer for an hour

When pain comes, stop it. Be ver ready to stop it quickly, ight or day. Don't suffer any ain which a moment of rub- ing can stop.

These include pains allied to heumatism, to soreness, to meness, to chest colds. They an be stopped at once. For 65 ears they have been stopped by ubbing with St. Jacobs Oil.

As for curing the cause of the trouble. Nature usually does that. But don't suffer while you wait. St. Jacobs Oil causes counter irritation. Then it draws the blood to the surface to relieve congestion. In a minute or two you feel that the pain has ebbed. You rejoice in relief.

Perhaps there are other ways. But this is the one way that millions have used—have proved it for 65 years. You can rely on it. Your druggist guarantees it. Why take chances when you know that nothing can be better?

Don't wait for an emergency. It may mean a night of pain. Have St. Jacobs Oil ever ready. Apply it as soon as you feel a pain, or a chest cold. Be ready to soothe it, to check it at once. There will never be a better way. Go get it now to be prepared when pain comes. It may save to you and yours many unhappy hours.

ANYWAY JUDGIE, I WAS JUST THINKING IT WAS ABOUT DINNER-TIME = YOU DON'T WANT YOUR LUNCH HOUR SPOILED THIS WAY SO LET'S GO OUT AND EAT.

CASE POSTPONED!

A SENSATION WAS SPRUNG IN THE DENVER POLICE COURT THIS WEEK WHEN FLORADORA'S "FOUR HORSEMEN" WERE BOOKED FOR STEALING A HANDCAR, AND ILLEGAL COMPETITION WITH THE RAILROADS. THE FIRST SESSION OF THE TRIAL MADE IT LOOK BAD FOR THE BOYS AS THE DISTRICT ATTORNEYS BROUGHT OUT THE FACT THAT ONE OF THE GANG ONCE STOLE THE CANDLES FROM HIS LITTLE SISTERS BIRTHDAY CAKE TO GREASE HIS SKIS WITH!

CONCERNING PEGGY! A WIRE ARRIVED AT THE JAIL SIGNED "PEGGY" AND THE POLICE ARE HOLDING IT EXPECTING SOME SENSATIONAL DISCLOSURES!

THE POSITION OF FRENCHWOMEN

Discouragement and Social Stigma Given Those Who Try to Enter Public Life

by Doris Blake

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Frenchwomen are said to wield more power than any women in the world. The advice, cherchez la femme, is given to every enterprising young politician entering public life. The indirect influence of women on national affairs is everywhere admitted. But so far there has been little success in the attempt to make that influence direct. The Frenchwoman must still make her entrance into business and political life by the back stairs, or suffer the humiliation of having her position in society automatically lowered. Thus, although a woman of wealth and position may sway a cabinet minister by means of a good dinner, the Frenchwomen generally must suffer from many little mistakes in municipal housekeeping because they may not be seen verging from the beaten paths.

Perhaps it is the French love of subtleties which makes the vote seem so indelicate. Perhaps the cause lies in the direct and militant methods of English and American suffragists during the early days of vote winning. The conventional Frenchman—and the woman, too—is equally horrified by such antics. Whatever the reason, certainly today at the suffrage headquarters, and among the business women of Paris, there are heavy clouds of gloom. Those who advocate the so-called "emancipation of women" feel they have no cause for rejoicing over the present situation.

Means Social Stigma.

A business woman here who is the publicity director for one of the largest steamship lines in the world, who manages the publicity for the whole of Europe from her Paris office, who is in addition to her journalistic ability and keen business sense a charming and gracious person, told me that three times when she had to attend business conventions in France the quarters assigned to her and other business women were those reserved for domestic servants. Fortunately this young woman possessed a sense of humor, but she could not help commenting on the national point of view which would so class the women of her kind.

I am told that a new club, the Soroptimist club, the only organization of French business women, has taken up the subject of the social stigma attached to the woman in public life, and proposes to do something about it. The club is affiliated with sister organizations in the United States and London, and operates somewhat as does the Rotary club.

There is also an attempt on the part of the younger Frenchwomen of good family to gain more of the freedom which they envy in their American sisters. The war removed some restrictions and, in many cases, actual need has forced the daughters of France into secretarial positions. The government offices have many such workers. But the steps taken by these girls along the paths so gayly followed by Americans are timid, indeed.

Old Ways Hold.

The other day I lunched with a charming French girl of the better class, who has recently become a secretary for one of the largest firms in Paris. She was bright and interesting, and asked a number of questions about American business girls. You could see she had been brought up with the greatest care, but that she was beginning to question the wisdom of her elders in placing such restrictions about her.

"They call me 'very advanced,'" she told me. "I am said to have American ideas, and some of my old friends, girls and boys I have grown up with, are horrified now because I am working in a business office, the director of which is a lifelong friend of my family."

Some questions on my part disclosed the fact that the advance of Suzanne had stopped just about there. She still, for example, abides by the rule of convention that prohibits a French girl from entering a restaurant alone even at the noon hour. An American girl may do this in Paris, but not a French one of good family. To do so, Suzanne said, would be to invite the most disagreeable attentions. Similarly is she prohibited from attending the theater with a man unless she is properly chaperoned.

"I provoked a terrible storm in my family," Suzanne told me, "when I suggested going to a play with another girl and two young men whom I have known since I was a baby. 'People outside will not know that these young men are old and trusted friends,' maman said, 'and you must not put yourself in a false position.' And then maman refused to chaperon us because she had no new dress. We are all poor since the war, you know."

Professions Aren't Cordial.

The position of the professional woman in France is said to be discouraging. This seems to be particularly true of the women lawyers who attempt to practice in the courts.

"We have no objection to their studying law if they wish to," said a rather brilliant young Frenchman, an ornament of the Palais de Justice. "Women lawyers are all right in offices, but they really should not appear in court. There is too much that is disagreeable and unfit for women's ears in some of the cross-examinations," and he paused delicately as if he were afraid of offending my delicacy in treading thus far. "That sort of thing does coarsen a woman in time," he continued, "and we Frenchmen worship her so greatly that we do not like to see her made aware of the rougher side of life. Yes, we have women lawyers, far too many of them, in my opinion, for the good of the state."

In commenting on the fact that France has not yet enfranchised her women, Premier Herriot declares it is because women do not want the vote. In a book called "Créer," published by him prior to his election, Herriot writes:

"It may well be a source of astonishment that democratic France has not yet envisaged such an important question. To be frank, we admit it is necessary to draw a difference between the French woman and the Slavic or Anglo-Saxon. The French woman has been a victim of the regard which has been shown her. It is true that in general she does not in the least demand political rights. If one may speak generally on such a subject, it seems that as a rule she prefers an enlightened protection to independence. There might be some imprudence in throwing her into the midst of the violence of our political fights. But, in spite of the arguments of professionals in the sport of politics, we believe that the country would have much to gain for the protection of infancy, for the struggle against social diseases, if woman would at least accept an interest in municipal affairs. There, we believe, woman may commence her public education in playing a useful rôle."

The suffragists say Herriot has not yet made up his mind as to whether he will stand for full suffrage or for municipal suffrage only, and has probably not given much thought to the question.

The general opinion seems to be that, if the vote is won, it will be through the work of a few suffragists, a few enlightened senators, and the active organization of business women who need it to protect their economic rights. There is at present no great popular demand for the franchise, and the woman in politics is looked upon either as a home wrecker or a masculine woman.

ANSWER TO WHAT'S WRONG HERE

A woman should never speak of any one by his surname without the prefix mister or without using his first name.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Why Not Write?

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 26 and a school teacher. I went with a young man for three years, then we parted. It was my fault, as he wanted to marry, but did not know whether I really loved him or not. Since that time five years have elapsed. He married, but his wife died some months ago. Would like to renew his friendship, as I know he cared greatly for me, and I feel much different toward him now. How could I go about this situation? PEGGY."

Write him a cheery little letter, Peggy, explaining you are doing it for old times' sake, knowing that he must be feeling lonely at this time. He no doubt will answer your letter, and in this way you may renew the old friendship.

Try to Be Sensible.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl. I was much in love with a boy two years my senior who was always telling me of his desperate love for me. I teased him, but acknowledged my love for him more than once. Then affairs took a turn. A girl, a little older than I, lured him into her meshes. I don't believe she really loves him, but is playing around with him as she is with a few other boys. He has turned an absolutely cold shoulder towards me and I have never known such torture in my life. What shall I do? BROKEN HEARTED."

If the other girl has succeeded in attracting him, Broken Hearted, the best thing for you to do is to stop thinking about him and turn your thoughts toward some other young man, don't you think? It won't help your peace of mind to brood over it, dear, nor will it bring him back to you. Try to be sensible about the affair.

She Wonders Why.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl of 17 and an old fashioned girl in the new fashioned clothes. I have not bobbed my hair. I am possible in looks. The boys treat me with the highest respect and talk good about me, but they never ask me to go out with them. Can you tell me why?

"BROWN EYES."

Brown Eyes, I think perhaps you are not friendly enough toward them, dear, for if you wish to make friends you must show a friendly spirit and a desire to be a good pal. Then do not fail to offer them some flattery in one form or another. They all like it, you know, and the girl who can dispense it gracefully is usually a popular person.

Like a Nice Girl.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl of 18 and have gone out with many fellows. The last fellow I went out with attempted to kiss me while he took me home. I do not let them and they cut off from me. The fellows say I am childish and that I do not know how to act toward them. I think they do not not care for me because they call off the date, so please tell me whether I am doing wrong.

"BROKEN HEARTED."

No, dear, you are not doing wrong, but on the contrary you are conducting yourself just as all really nice girls do, and I am sure you will never regret it. Later on you will have nothing to blame yourself for nor will you have anything to hide from the world or feel ashamed of. If the boys you have met cancel dates for such a reason they are not the kind to bother with, and are not worth the time you would spend with them, Broken Hearted.

If you would keep strong and vital—activate your diet with Scott's Emulsion.

BREAD AND FAT.

EVEN if one could write romantically, thrillingly, and sensationally of food, such an one could even then succeed none too well in focusing the right sort of attention on something that is too universally regarded as commonplace instead of the great, vital, destiny making thing it is. How to write effectively and convincingly about an essentially vital fact without preaching, as the amateur is bound to do under similar circumstances, that is a real problem. Neither preaching nor sobbing being seemly for this writer, what is the poor gospel bringer to do?

Take the highly essential matter of gospel pertaining to the getting enough fat (our dietary hard coal) into the winter diet of every person that can be reached, every person facing the February and March winds. Some one should be doing some nice cooking for those persons, and yet, after all, some superfine thinking is even more urgently required. Such thinking, too widely practiced, would be no end of influential in promoting good cooking. And every mature human being ought of his own will to be forehanded enough about his body maintenance problem to get right down to the business of doing such thinking.

Prevention Not Cure.

There is no industry that offers a complete parallel to this industry of maintaining our bodies in health and efficiency, and continuously without the slightest break. It can be done, barring accidents. In railroading the maintenance engineer is a wreck preventer. His work may not be as conspicuous as that of the engineer who cleans up after a wreck, yet there is no one who does not think it far better to preserve than to mend.

Our doctors of today are becoming more and more maintenance engineers, and some of their patients are trying to cooperate with them, yet there are no end of persons who go on to the wreck stage. They even seem to love the experience of the wreck, if they can come out of it fairly well. At any rate, they tell about what they went through in being set on their feet again, after a disaster, as though they had greatly enjoyed the wonder of it all. How fine it would be if prevention could be made to seem equally wonderful!

Keeping Fit.

Spring wrecks of humanity are numerous, and usually quite unnecessary because foresight would have prevented them. Cod liver oil is one of the tools used by the engineer who specializes on human health wrecks. It is used for building up again what should never have been torn down. Perhaps, because it is an unpleasant food, it is called a medicine, but it is not a drug. It is a true food, a building and repair food.

Let us for a minute compare butter with cod liver oil. Take a dose of butter straight into the mouth without the aid of bread or anything to help. If we had to eat all our butter in that fashion more of us would be having to take cod liver oil than do.

Hundreds do not get enough fat in their diets, and what they do get they get more by accident than plan because not all of the fats can be set up for them in nice bread and butter fashion. Here, for instance, is but one of the accidental ways in which the prosperous get enough or nearly enough fat in their diet, besides getting much butter and cream: they eat only the best beef and this best beef is tender and juicy just because it is completely marbled or blended with fat. Blended with lean it is readily eaten by those who might shudder at a solid streak of well cooked fat beef

Home-made Remedy Stops Coughs Quickly

The best cough medicine you ever used. A family supply easily and quickly made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for coughs, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant—children like it.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for healing the membranes. To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

2162—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 40 inch material with 1 yard of 18 inch contrasting.

2223—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅛ yards of 42 inch material.

1070—Girl's and child's cape. Sizes 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1¾ yards of 54 inch material.

How to Use the Patterns

DARK blue cashmere or beige would make up attractively by pattern 2162. The design is equally good for a slight or full figure, and if a gown for afternoon wear is what you wish satin or one of the beautiful crêpes would be better than the first mentioned materials. Kasha and cashmere would probably be preferred for street wear under a coat.

The back of the dress is cut in one piece, and the right and left fronts are cut separately, so that care must be used to make certain that the material is right side up for both left and right pieces. The pattern provides for long or short sleeves—the long ones being allowed to flare at the wrist. The collar is cut in two pieces, and as can be seen from the picture, the right side comes down to the waist line. This must be remembered in laying the pattern pieces on the material, else one may easily find the two sections have been cut for the same side of the dress.

It will look well to make the collar and vest of a contrasting color, and material, too, perhaps. And if short sleeves are made, they might be finished with turned back cuffs of the contrasting material.

The narrow sash is of the dress material, and would be pretty if lined with the contrasting color. Of course, the collar must be lined, preferably with the same material. Seam both upper and under parts in the middle back, and press the seams open. Then lay the two right sides together, baste carefully, and stitch on the machine. If the material fulls at all in the machine, it will be best to do the work by hand, using a fine running stitch. Then turn right side out, baste all around near the seamed edge, keeping the seam exactly at the edge, and press. Baste together near the raw edges, and then baste to the neck of the dress. The collar should be pinned on first, pinning first in the middle of the back, and from there along the entire length. Cut a true bias facing about 1 or 1½ inches wide, and baste over the seam. Then stitch on the machine. After removing the bastings, clip the seam edge all along at short intervals around the neck where the line curves the most. Baste the facing down over the seam, turning in the raw edge, and hem down by hand.

Where French seams are not advisable, the seams should be bound with silk seam binding ribbon and pressed open. This should be run on by hand, and the ribbon not held too tight in the hand—else the seam edges will pull and show from the right side.

Pattern No. 1070 is for a cape for a small or young girl. There are just three pieces in the pattern—back, front, and collar. It is a pretty and useful garment, and one that should be a pleasure to make. If one of the light weight woolen materials is chosen—say in dark blue—the lining could be a red crêpe. Or, if the child's hair is that lovely auburn or reddish color, brown for the outside and tan for the lining would be lovely. There are many other color combinations, but these two are probably the best liked. There are bound openings each side of the middle front, to slip the arms through and the collar may be rolled low to form revers, or worn closed at the neck.

There are lovely striped tub crêpes that make charming one piece dresses, and pattern No. 2223 is just the design you will need. Of course, there are also the lovely silk broadcloths, in plain colors as well as stripes, and nothing can be more cooler looking than these materials. In this pattern the back is cut in one, and the front in two pieces—the dress buttoning its entire length. There is a small inset vest, a convertible collar, inset pocket, and the sleeves may be long or short. There is an inverted plait at the under arm seams, and these may be held together at a low waist line by three buttons.

It is a good idea for a dress that buttons as this does to buy shank buttons. Then make eyelets on the left front to slip the buttons into and out of, and the buttonholes on the right front. Dresses that are to be laundered will be much more easily done if the buttons can be removed, and the buttons will always look like new and not get broken.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

which with good cooking may be exceedingly palatable and which almost any one could eat, once prejudice had been overcome. A good cook can disguise all such foods, and, if she could feel that her business was every whit as dignified as that of the doctor's, she would.

To one who knows food worths comparatively well, and realizes the need that every human being has of knowing them in order to keep thoroughly fit for living and enjoying living to the utmost, the waste of fat foods through just throwing them away, instead of finding nice ways to use them to make inadequate diets adequate, is actually horrifying.

Fat Waste Deplorable.

Here they are, the foods which yield by far the greatest returns of energy, weight for weight, of any of the food substances, and yet the fat on the slice of ham in the sandwich, the fat border to a slice of roast beef, the fat on the chop—all these and many more—are rejected. The fat waste from pork alone is colossal, while actual experiment by one brought up in the days when it was thought ungenteel to eat fat showed that a cake of sausage, home made and containing as much fat as lean, by weight, when seasoned rather highly was as agreeable as needs be.

By artifice we can do for pork what nature did for the fine beef. It is but little work to make sausage at home, and it is possible to buy fresh ham trimmings from the best butchers to put with loin or what other lean pork is chosen. Sausage has a worth as a winter viand that is not commonly mentioned, this being digestive in character.

The man or woman who will set out thoughtfully and resolutely to eat fat foods during cold weather will surely get his reward. They "stick to the ribs." They are called "protein sparers," therefore he can get on with less lean meat than he may be inclined to eat and be the better for this sort of abstinence. Let a man with such a worthy ambition keep real books on the subject. The first entries may be of butter and cream consumed. Almost anybody can eat these without half trying, as there are no end of ways of making them agreeable.

So true is this that an eater may feel himself mistreated if he does not get them. We could wish that he would feel equally wronged if he did not get a fair share of each and all of the edible fats, though if he will eat salads, as well as butter and cream and what other fats he gets accidentally, as in eating high class beef, he may get all the fats he needs in the ways most highly agreeable to him. But if he is really keeping an account with a view to ascertaining his profits, and preventing waste, he will see that he gets "all that is coming to him" in a fat way from the foods he pays his money for.

Making It Palatable.

Along comes the intelligent cook and puts the marrow on the toast or on a vegetable instead of boiling it out into what may be wasted cake of fat on the top of the cooled soup stock. She uses such fats for vegetable hashes and gravies, adding only a little butter for seasoning them. She can put a good deal of fat into gravies and sauces, and she can use gravies and sauces over vegetables, thus raising common rutabaga to a near meat dish in its satisfactoriness. She thickens soups in one way and another so that they contain much fat, and yet it will not show. We know the hungry Belgians during the great war looked always to see how deep the fat was on top of their bowl of soup, knowing that the deeper it was the better fed they would feel after eating it. To add many vegetables and even some fruit seasonings to the water in which ham or bacon is boiled is to get a palatable fat if the meat was immaculate. There is nothing that will make a fat food objectionable, from butter on through the list, like dirt.

Fats combined with flour in breads, cakes, and piecrusts are not as serviceable as they are in the ways just mentioned, but the thoughtful eater in keeping a reckoning, and he may do it automatically after a while, will remember about them.

Doubling the Calories.

The cheeses mostly contain fat and some fat, usually butter, may be used in cooking them, but in general they may be reckoned with butter and cream as foods that an eater will take without coaxing.

In cooking both meat and fish, strips of salt pork or bacon used in a sophisticated way may double the calories of what is cooked, and may increase the agreeableness no end, but it requires more or less of art to get nice effects, and a good deal to get superior effects. A great deal of butter may be brushed over fish in preparing it for the broiler, and the same is true concerning such tidbits as broiled chicken livers, but the food worth of this butter may be almost destroyed or quite if it is blackened.

Avoiding Grease.

If the members of a family which does not make good use of its fats are to be trained into good ways, fat wise, great pains both in the cooking and the keeping of foods must be taken. Butter, some warranted as fine, may become greasy in a short time and so almost hateful. Slices of bacon do not keep well but become greasy and darken, and are then too little palatable when cooked to be worth while as food. The best pork fat is not greasy but has a delicate white color and a good odor. There is no need for lard to have the odor it generally has, or one that is really unpalatable, since we determine what is palatable as surely by our noses as by our tongues in nine cases out of ten.

Getting the Fat in Device.

It is easy to get a great deal of fat into meat hashes made of raw meats, and in meat sauces of cut up meat, because the small bits of fat get so much seasoned that no one notices them, or separates them from the lean This can be done in making chop suey, and I do it in making my favorite meat sauce for macaroni, a sort of stew gravy. A little extra suet can be added and all the fat rim of a round steak—or stewing beef may be used—for the foundation of this dish.

Cut lean and fat into small bits, mix with them two or three level tablespoons of flour, so that each piece is well covered. Put into frying pan in which there are two tablespoons of hot fat, cook gently for fifteen minutes and turn. Add one onion cut fine and one-half cup of celery cut exceedingly fine and some green pepper cut the same way, if you like it. Stir and cook these slightly, add one cup or more of water, according to need, and salt to taste, stir constantly until the liquid thickens, then simmer for one hour. Curry can be added to make this something to serve with rice. A bit of cayenne pepper may give it what some eaters want. Some mushrooms may be added at the last for elegance.

Pot Roasted Bacon Squares.

Make a piece of bacon immaculate. You can pot roast as small a piece as one weighing a pound only. Have a little fat in the pot roasting kettle, and put in two or three sliced onions, two sliced carrots, some celery, a little parsley, and whatever other seasonings you choose. Cover and let the juices start with heat, then put the bacon on this bed of vegetables and from time to time baste it with the liquid from them and the small amount of fat that cooks out of the meat in a gentle process. If any liquid be used, let it be a sirup. The cooking will then have to be of the careful sort, because sugar burns easily.

You may like some prunes cooked with this and candied oranges or lemon peel dry and powdered makes an excellent seasoning for bacon. Cook a small piece slowly for about an hour. This will give delicious and high colored slices for sandwiches or to eat hot with vegetables even when the bacon is scarcely streaky.

Preparing Frying Bacon.

The hotel butcher says "trim off smoke colorings," yet the regular butcher slices bacon without doing so, and the only way the housewife can do if she is reasonably particular is to use the scissors on each slice. Nobody really likes a dirt flavor.

CONSTIPATION means SICKNESS

More human suffering, physical and mental, has resulted from constipation than from any other source. The entire future life of a child can be ruined by lack of attention to the proper daily movement of the bowels. If the bowels do not act at least twice daily it means constipation—that means the bowels are clogged up with the accumulated residue of five to fifteen meals or more with consequent pollution, poison and disease.

Dr. Caldwell's

SYRUP PEPSIN

The Family Laxative

—relieves constipation. It is a combination of Egyptian senna, pepsin and aromatics prepared in liquid form, inviting to the taste, and smooth, pleasant and easy in its action. It is the kind of a prescription a good doctor will give you. Used nationally over 30 years.

Pleasing As Honey To Take! Easy As Nature In Action!

For both baby and grandma. Syrup Pepsin quickly brings relief to the most severe cases of constipation and the doses may be gradually reduced as Nature resumes her proper functions. 10,000,000 bottles used annually prove its effectiveness.

It is sold everywhere medicine is sold—and guaranteed. Try it at our risk. Your druggist will return your money if it fails to do as promised.

AN ENGLISH COTTAGE OF STONE.

HERE is a charming little stone house whose compactness and conveniently arranged interior will delight the heart of the young bride keeping house without the aid of a maid. With its long, sloping roof, casement windows, and its red tile chimney pots it is suggestive of the picturesque little cottages that dot the countryside in England, an effect which could be pleasingly carried out both in interior decorations and in the gardening.

It is almost square, its overall size being 34 feet wide by 37 feet deep. It could easily be built on a lot 45 feet wide, leaving space for a driveway and walk on the right side, but a 50 foot frontage would be preferable. Since the house is only 37 feet deep, even though built on a small lot, there will be space left for a bit of lawn in the front and ample yard in the rear, which latter could be used as a flower garden, or be divided into a vegetable garden and playground.

With a border of perennials lining the walk, a bed of perennials in front of the house under the dining room windows, hedges and old fashioned flowers forming a garden in the rear, with a bird bath in the center, and a garden table and chairs, this little home would have a most attractive setting.

It is constructed of sawnfaced Indiana limestone of either the gray or variegated variety. The latter, including pieces of both buff and gray stone, produces walls of an interesting color effect at a surprisingly low cost. The stone walls are laid up in random ashlar style with roughly broken joints, which increase the beauty of the stonework. With the woodwork of the windows and doors painted or stained a dark warm brown, the steep shingle roof would be most effective stained a dull Venetian red, or if white woodwork is desired, a weathered gray shingle roof would be pleasing; with sage green woodwork, a bluish green slate roof would be harmonious. In any case, the walls of stone give the house a certain distinctive style, making it stand out from among others of its size.

The front porch is included under the main roof, and there is no back porch, so that the square lines of the house are not broken in the lower story, and it has a good appearance from all sides.

From the front porch one can step directly into his automobile—a great convenience, especially in bad weather. If desired, this porch may be inclosed in glass in the winter and screened in summer. It is large enough to accommodate a small table and a few chairs. The floor could be paved either with limestone slabs or a combination of red quarry tile and stone.

One enters the house through a French door directly into the living room, there being no hall, which gives the house a delightful air of informality. The living room is unusually commodious and inviting. It measures 15 feet wide and 21 feet deep, and has windows on the front and side. There is a large fireplace with mantel and hearth of Indiana limestone, simple in style, according to the best early English traditions. This forms the center of interest for an attractive and comfortable grouping of furniture.

At the end of the living room is a stairway—an arrangement which is becoming popular. A few steps up is the landing, off of which opens a convenient coat closet. Access from the kitchen or service entry to the stairway is through a closet at the end of the room nearest the stair.

The dining room, which is almost square, being 14.6x14 feet, has wide casement windows on two sides and a long French window on a third side opening on to the porch, and is so unusually light and airy. This room is equipped with a china case accessible from both the dining room and kitchen, an arrangement which will save steps and time for the housewife. The wide doorway between the living room and dining room is equipped with folding doors, enabling the two rooms to be shut off from each other when necessary.

The kitchen is small and convenient. It has a sink with double drain boards, located under a window. There is room for a kitchen cabinet and two ranges, one for coal and one for gas. In case both are not desired, the space can be utilized for a table or extra cupboard. There are two cases for dishes, one of which is available from the dining room. A built-in closet with an ironing board is also provided. All other laundry equipment is located in the basement, which extends under the entire house. Off the kitchen in the back corner of the house overlooking the garden is a breakfast alcove, with windows on two sides. This also will be a great convenience in a household where there is no servant.

The cellar stairs open into an entry close to the rear door. In this rear entry a cold closet, a broom closet, and the refrigerator are located. The refrigerator has an icing door in the outside wall of the house, making it unnecessary for the ice man to enter the kitchen.

Upstairs, there are two bedrooms and a bath, all opening off a square hall, which is large enough to contain two or three pieces of furniture. The linen closet is conveniently located in the hall.

The bedrooms are unusually roomy, bright, and airy. Each will accommodate twin beds, as well as other large pieces of furniture, and both are provided with ample closet space. The bathroom is good sized, the tub being built in a niche, and is equipped with a towel cupboard in addition to the usual medicine cabinet over the washbowl.

All the upstairs rooms are well insulated by the large air space provided by the steep roof. A folding stairway to the attic, which disappears when not in use, is built into a paneled opening in the hall ceiling.

This is an unusually compact little house, will be easy to take care of, and will be thoroughly comfortable all the year round. The rooms afford excellent opportunities for attractive furnishing. It is a solid and substantially built home, a house that one will never tire of or find irksome to look after. It is the type of small house that would sell readily at any time.

Beauty Answers
By Antoinette Donnelly

What's you: beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

E. C.: YOU ARE ABOUT TWENTY pounds underweight, as at your age, 17, 6 feet, the standard weight is 155 pounds. You have grown more quickly than the average boy, and should use measures to increase your strength proportionately. Eat good, wholesome food; get plenty of exercise in the open air, and plenty of sleep. It is essential in your case, son. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for my booklet on "How to Gain Weight."

MISS X.: I DO NOT FAVOR A course in reduction for you, as you are still a growing girl and need all your strength. You might, however, eliminate candy and pastries from your diet, and eat sparingly of bread. Yes, I have some exercises for a double chin, but you must send along a stamped, addressed envelope—repeating your request.

JANET: DO NOT ATTEMPT TO use anything on your hair to keep it blonde. Disregard what others tell you. Blonde hair turns darker as one grows older, and you cannot prevent it from doing so. Peroxide will make your hair dry, and if used persistently will make the hair look like straw.

EVELYN: THE ONLY WAY TO reduce the face is to reduce generally. If you wish also to reduce the bust, I feel that my pamphlet "How to Reduce" is just what you need. Send along a stamped, addressed envelope, and get the particulars in detail.

Women the World Over

Two out of three employes in the mining industry in India are women.

Los Angeles has a country club, the membership of which consists entirely of women and girls.

In Roumania women are employed as builders, and, with their skirts tucked up, climb ladders with pails of cement or loads of bricks just like the men.

A "screen beauty contest" held recently in China, disclosed the fact that the girls in that country are shy, only 10 per cent of the photographs received coming from girls.

Mrs. Margot Asquith, wife of the former British premier, has announced her willingness to appear on the stage, providing a suitable part can be found for her.

Mrs. Elmer Woodbury of San Francisco, who has a great genius for conceiving new designs, is known as one of the foremost American interior decorators and artists.

Sulphur Clears Skin Right Up

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation begins at once to soothe irritated skin and heal eruptions such as rash, pimples and ring worm.

It seldom fails to remove the torment and disfigurement, and you do not have to wait for relief from embarrassment. Improvement quickly shows. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

GOOD MORNING!

"One Glorious Night" is the sort of picture that takes you back to the grand old rainy days in the attic, where you curled up under the eaves with a lap full of apples and crackers and a story like—"One Glorious Night."

The best writing in the world wasn't in that story. Its plot wasn't deep or devious or any too clever. It wasn't, to be truthful, good literature at all. But it did fit in with the rain and the place, and how you DID devour it!

ELAINE HAMMERSTEIN has the heroine's role in "One Glorious Night." [Bradley Photo.]

A poor little shop girl is the heroine, Mary Stevens. She sells gowns to rich women. The dream of her life is to be one of 'em.

An accident dumps her into a piece of water on which lies a pleasure yacht. She is rescued by a wealthy young man—rather—the son of a wealthy mother, there's a difference—who with a crowd of merrymakers is spending the afternoon aboard. For an hour she basks in the surroundings she has always yearned for.

That evening in her humble boarding house the stalwart civil engineer she's been going about with doesn't look so good to her. NOT—SO—GOOD!

But Husband Is His Mamma's Boy.

The chap who's rescued her runs into her again, unexpectedly. From then on he pursues her. They are married—to the chilly disgust of a regular laura jean libbey mother-in-law who plays up to her rôle and is so perfectly dreadful that, finally, after she makes a certain statement, Mary rebels and insists that her husband shall take her away

BILL HART JUST SHADOW TO SON

By Rosalind Shaffer.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—"I wonder if you see Bill, if you'll tell him how wonderful little Bill is. I don't think he realizes——"

Winifred Westover Hart, considerably slimmer than a few months ago, and looking girlishly frail in a simple navy blue dress, was waiting for the doctor as she talked.

BILL HART JR., son of the famous two-gun hero of the films. [Pacific and Atlantic Photo.]

Young Bill's cold had kept her up all night at his bedside.

A picture of young Bill Hart, "Bill's Boy," by James Montgomery Flagg, hung on the nursery wall; near it were several of big Bill in westerns, all within easy eyesight of the crib. Young Bill lay with his picture books strewn over the coverlet.

Just a little over 2 years old, little Bill weighs over 40 pounds and wears 5 year old size rompers and shoes. He can recite all his nursery rhymes, which he does with a slight narrowing of the eyes when he looks at you and a firm set to his jaw, like his father.

Dr. Carter of Hollywood, who takes care of William S. Hart Jr., swears there was never a boy like young Bill—he takes the doctor's orders gravely and swells out the baby chest at the order to "breathe deep."

Outside in the hall a hand tooled leather saddle, one of the several extravagant Christmas gifts from his daddy, stood on an Indian blanket. Young Bill yells, "Send it back," declaiming he wants it returned to him with a pony under it.

In the living room is a miniature projecting machine on which young Bill sees all his daddy's films, to the accompaniment of "The Cowboy's Lullaby," which is, so Winifred declares, exactly like Bill Hart's own voice. "A shadow on the wall—a voice from the phonograph—and that's Bill Hart to his boy," this last with a decided catch in the mother's voice.

Celebrating Broken Resolutions.

A group of lonesome looking celebrities lent a solemn masculine background to Broken Resolutions night at the Montmartre on Wednesday, but took no part in the merry popping of the toy balloons, whose bursting under the heels of satin slippers and lighted cigarets represented, each time, another New Year's oath gone flooey.

While the saxes shrilled their cacophonious invitations to hilarity, Rockliffe Fellows of border legion fame was staging it. So also, at other tables, were Frank Borzage and Marshal Neilan, and we espied Syd Chaplin, three-quarters hidden behind a newspaper, where the dancers brushed his unnoticing coat tails as they swirled past.

Ena Gregory, new crop of Wampas baby stars, in an orchid and gold ruffled chiffon, with purple and gold brocaded wrap, was the chief representative of the younger set. Vola Vale and her husband, Al Russell, seemed to have fixed their estrangement. Vola, in a snug fitting black velvet dress and large picture hat, danced with Al most of the evening.

Louise Lorraine and Art Acord, just back from location in South America, were another devoted couple we saw. As

"Don Quixote" Is Told in Two Ways

By Edward Moore.

IT was undoubtedly by coincidence and not at all by consultation that Mme. Pavlowa should have begun her Chicago engagement with a ballet version of "Don Quixote" and that Mr. Stock should plan this week the orchestra version of the same tale in Richard Strauss' music.

"In the end," says Thomas Skelton in his seventeenth century translation of Cervantes, "through his little sleep and much reading he dried up his brains in such sort that he lost wholly his judgment. His fantasy was filled with those things that he read, of enchantments, quarrels, battles, challenges, wounds, wooing, loves, tempests, and other impossible follies."

This is the character to be presented by pantomime and dance on Wednesday night and Saturday afternoon, by symphony orchestra on Friday afternoon and Saturday night. It is almost exactly eight years since the orchestra version was last heard here; the ballet production was new until last Monday night.

Needless to say, there is considerable contrast of manner between the two. Minkus' music in the Pavlowa attraction is little more than straightforward, unimaginative ballet tunes of a half century ago, while the dancing, stage pictures, and art scheme generally are magnificent. Strauss' music, of course, depends entirely on itself for its effect, with the pictures left entirely to the imagination.

A Theme of Knightly Character.

After a lapse of years' silence for the "Fantastic Variations on a Theme of Knightly Character," as Strauss calls his work, the chief recollection is of the second variation, that of the knight's battle with the sheep and the way that the brass section bleats during the charge. But orchestra and ballet finally join in presenting an identical episode, in the tenth variation of the one and the final scene of the other. Here Skelton's words are again the most vivid of all. Conquered, beaten down, helpless, the don is thus addressed by the Knight of the White Moon:

"'You are vanquished, knight, and a dead man if you confess not according to the conditions of our combat.' Don Quixote, all bruised and amazed, without heaving up his visor, as if he had spoken out of a tomb, said, 'Dulcinea del Toboso is the fairest woman in the world, and I the unfortunatest knight on earth; and it is not fit that my weakness defraud this trust; thrust your lance into me, knight, and kill me, since you have bereaved me of my honor.' 'Not so, truly,' quoth he of the White Moon, 'let the fame of my Lady Dulcinea's beauty live in her entireness; I am only contented that the grand Don Quixote retire home for a year, or till such time as I please, as we agreed, before we began the battle.'"

In whichever way it is presented, "Don Quixote" takes an important place on the program, all of it with the exception of divertissements in the ballet version. Mr. Stock

PLAY READING WITH A REVIEWER'S EYES

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—I can think of many things I had rather be than a play reader. And yet the job has its fascinations. I have just finished a half hundred manuscripts sent in for the John Golden contest, the 300 judges of which were selected from the play reviewers of the country, and while I have wasted a lot of time and energy on the blessed things, the experience has been interesting.

JOHN GOLDEN, Producer whose contest is the first of its kind. [H. A. Atwell Photo.]

There are a lot of folks in this country who can write. And most of them want to write plays. You remember the standard joke of the theater, the one about the milkman who explained at different times to Maurice Barrymore, the late Charles Frohman, David Belasco, or whoever happened to be telling it, that he would not have been late with the milk if he had not become so engrossed with his second act.

It is a pleasant exaggeration, but there really are a lot of writers with the play urge, in this growing country. Their trouble when they try to write plays, as I see it, is that they have little knowledge of the theater or the qualities an actable play must possess. They have story sense and often good plot sense. But when their play is finished, it usually is nothing more than a neat little collection of dialogue, often smart, but seldom active.

This Golden contest was the first of the kind. It swept the country and dragged in something like 300 reviewers as play readers. It was the producer's idea to bring as many American plays as possible to the attention of persons with some practical knowledge of theater. And the drama critics, giving written columns about the poor quality of stage offerings, were in no position reasonably to refuse to help better the output.

There were, according to the figures of those having the mechanics of the contest in charge, approximately 2,500 manuscripts submitted. These 2,500 were read by the 300 newspapermen, each of whom was to select the most promising of the scripts sent in to him. Less than 100 found plays they considered worth submitting to a second committee.

Thirty reported they had read many plays, but none was worth the cost of forwarding. Among these was Heywood Broun of the New York World. Opposed to Broun are two editors of the Philadelphia Record. Both acted on the committee of judges, and each found a play he thought good enough to resubmit.

Bliss Isely of the Wichita, Kas., Beacon reports the receipt of 110 manuscripts. Which speaks well for the employment of the long winter evenings in Kansas. Ralph Jones of the Atlanta Constitution took in fifty. Percy Hammond of the New York Herald-Tribune is still wading through 140, having been granted an extra fortnight's time in which to look them over.

Ninety-six scripts were sent to the Los Angeles Illustrated News, most of them, I suspect, from Hollywood. Carleton Miles, a good judge of plays at the edge of the northwest,

Assorted Notions About the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

MRS. FISKE'S coming with her entourage of somebodies in "The Rivals" gives to a lazy man at the week's end an excuse for easy filling without doing more than making a catalogue from data of the play, itself, and of its performers. . . . And, what's the use? There's the play for those who care to read it; and the best that the black-type players have done is within easy memory of most adult theater-goers. Mr. Clayton Hamilton is about-town, talking of Sheridan to the club-ladies and the avid gatherings in the week's agenda of what's going on in Chicago. And, most important of all the considerations, there's an advance-sale indicating that Mrs. Fiske and her associates will do well here in their fortnight, and that the Illinois will be as populous a retreat as at any time in the visit of the Music-Box Revue, taken out ere its fair reward was taken in at the box-office.

JAMES T POWERS He's the Bob Acres with Mrs. Fiske in "The Rivals."

As to Mrs. Fiske, herself, I expect her to be good as Mrs. Malaprop: of all the ventures she has made in recent seasons, this seems to be by far the most logical. As I may have observed in earlier notes, the part is broad or "eccentric" enough to absorb the numerous tricks and foibles and whims that have been liabilities for the actress in other rôles; and she should traverse with ease and fun the three or four scenes of the farce regarded as being especially Mrs. Malaprop's. . . . There will be those in the audience with fond remembrance of Mrs. John Drew in the part, which she played until shortly before her death; and it is a remembrance for which they may be envied. I, in my boyhood, saw her frequently as Mrs. Malaprop; and, when I think of her in the part, I still insist that, if there has been in my time a better comic actress, it was her daughter, Mrs. Barrymore, mother of Ethel and Lionel and John. . . . And, when I say that I expect Mrs. Fiske to be good, I mean that I expect her to be as good as Mrs. Drew was.

Others Who Have Been in It.

There will be more in each audience who remember Joseph Jefferson as Bob Acres: this was one of the three parts he used in his final years. When I was first taken by the hand and led to see Jefferson as Acres, I was bidden by earnest and wise elders to mark the date with rubrics in the diary of my theater-going. I made the effort, and failed; and I failed many times thereafter: he may have been as wonderful in the part as I have ever been told and ever have read that he was; and I have never believed it. It wasn't that I didn't try to believe it by taking every opportunity to see him play Acres: I defied him to show me by buying a seat whenever he was acting Acres within reach. I made on one occasion a trip of more than three hundred miles from Princeton and back to pick up a performance of his that would not in that season be nearer to where I expected to be; and my reward was to find therein the best Sir Lucius O'Trigger of the twenty or more I've seen. He was Wilton Lackaye, now here in "High Stakes." As I

New Playbills

OPENING TONIGHT.

Chariot's Revue in the Garrick.—Belated showing in Chicago of an entertainment imported from London, where its impresario, André Chariot, is a specialist in what are called "intimate revues." This one, made up from odds-and-ends of his London successes, was a hit in New-York last season. . . . Miss Beatrice Lillie, Miss Joyce Barbour, Herbert Mundin, Sam B. Hardy, and Miss Jessie Matthews are now the principal performers.

TOMORROW NIGHT.

"The Rivals" in the Illinois.—Revival of Sheridan's farce with Mrs. Fiske, Miss Lola Fisher, James T. Powers, Chauncey Olcott, and Thomas A. Wise in the respective rôles of Mrs. Malaprop, Lydia Languish, Bob Acres, Sir Lucius O'Trigger, and Sir Anthony Absolute.

Miss Fay Bainter in "The Dream-Girl" in the Studebaker. The star of "East Is West" in an operetta with music by the late Victor Herbert to a libretto based by Mrs. Rida Johnson Young on the play known as "The Road to Yesterday." . . . Walter Woolf is vis-à-vis with Miss Bainter; and others are Miss Maude Odell, Robert Woolsey, Miss Clara Palmer, and John Clarke.

De Wolf Hopper in "The Chocolate Soldier" in the Great Northern.—The star's first appearance in Chicago as Colonel Popoff in the operetta by Oscar Straus to be a libretto based on Shaw's "Arms and the Man." . . . Forrest Huff is engaged to sing the title-rôle.

NEXT SUNDAY NIGHT.

"Rose-Marie" in the Woods.—An operetta now in immense vogue in New-York, where it has been running since September. . . . Miss Myrtle Schaaf and Richard Gallagher are to head the Chicago cast.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 9.

Artists and Models in the Auditorium.—Return of the revue which was so popular in the Apollo last year. . . . Bard and Pearl are still in it.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 15.

Hassard Short's Ritz Revue in the Apollo.—What is said to be the first issue of an addition to the long list of annuals: it is named for the director who staged the three issues of the Music-Box Revue known in Chicago. . . . Miss Charlotte Greenwood, the lady with the legs and arms, is at the head of the company.

FEBRUARY 16.

"Minick" in the Princess.—The play made by Miss Edna Ferber and George S. Kaufman from the former's novel named "Old Man Minick." The comedy has had some of the season's best "notices" in New-York, where it was acted from September 24 until last night.

BURTON HOLMES' FINAL LECTURE: "Czechoslovakia," fifth and last in the new series, will be seen and heard Wednesday and Friday night and Saturday afternoon, in Orchestra Hall.

Assorted Notions About the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

watched him acting the Irish fire-eater and Otis Skinner playing Jack Absolute, I had the impression that they knew far more about Sheridan's farce than Jefferson knew. . . .

And this, doubtless, is the place to say that the best Bob Acres I've yet seen was Stuart Robson—unless it was William Collier. Some of the other actors encountered in the part were Sol Smith Russell, Sidney Drew, and N. C. Goodwin.

There will be in each audience adults to tell of the wonder and the glory of a cast that made a circus'd tournée with "The Rivals" in 1896; and that was my idea of a bad performance. Mrs. Drew was in it, and was adorable. (Also, I have always suspected, she was miserably underpaid when what she did in it was compared with what the others did.) Jefferson was in it. Goodwin was the Sir Lucius, and a depressive. Crane was Sir Anthony, and a mistake. Miss Julia Marlowe was Lydia, and just fair; and her husband of the time, Robert Taber, was Jack, and just dire. Miss Fanny Rice was in it, and so also was Francis Wilson; and they didn't matter. What was good in the hippodrome after Mrs. Drew's playing was that of E. M. Holland and his brother, Joseph J.: they knew how; but they were regarded at the box-office as harmless, necessary make-weight. . . . The farce, which will be rightly focused in the Illinois, was acted in the largest auditoriums; the public bought all the seats and cried for more—at five dollars; and the profits were the sum of a gunman's ransom.

Some Who Were Good.

The best of the Mrs. Malaprops after Mrs. Drew was an actress from abroad, Miss Pfolliott Paget, who acted with Jefferson in his later uses of the piece. . . . On that far-off night when I first saw Jefferson as Acres, the O'Trigger was the celebrated W. J. Florence; and he was colorless and flat in the part. But no other Lydia I have yet seen has been so good as was the Lydia of that occasion—Miss Viola Allen; and I've yet to find another Jack Absolute so able as Frederick Paulding, also in the cast. . . .

It was as Julia in "The Rivals" I first saw Miss Barrymore on the stage: she was with a sort of an it's-all-in-the-family venture with her grandmother, her father, Sidney Drew, the gifted and luckless Gladys Rankin, and other kin, direct and collateral. . . . And the mention above of William Collier as Acres should be explained. He took part in a makeshift enterprise with other comic players, all identified at the time with the light musical shows, to trade upon the hurrah of the 1896 cast of stars. The expectation was that these clowns would horseplay "The Rivals"; and they didn't. Most of them were as bad as well could be; but all of them undertook a performance of the farce for what it is, and Collier came out of the mess with distinction. . . .

And, while the foregoing isn't nearly all I seem to know about "The Rivals," it is enough, I guess.

Miss Barrymore is reported to be doing well in the Blackstone in her revival of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray"; and that is good news. . . . Says Mr. Wappler, the house-manager: "It is like old times: that is, the engagements of Miss Maude Adams. The mail-orders are heavy, and have largely to do with the balcony and gallery—an excellent sign! And they cover the entire engagement, and are not concentrated on the first two weeks. Down-stairs always takes care of itself in the Blackstone: when orders come for the galleries, we know we have both a hit and a success."

News in Manhattan.

Novelties bulletined for the week in the New-York theaters are:

"She Had to Know," by Paul Géraldy, with Miss Grace George, Miss Charlotte Ives, Bruce McRae, and Frederick Worlock. . . . This is the comedy named in French "Si Je Voulais!" and for a time called by Miss George "She Wanted to Know": the change of American title was made to avoid confusion with the piece named "They Wanted to Know," a success in New-York. . . . Géraldy wrote "To Love," wherein Miss George acted two years ago in Chicago.

Puzzles of 1925, by Miss Elsie Janis, with James Hussey as her principal associate in the performance. This is the revue of her own designing which was at first called "intimate," but is said to have been amplified as to mise-en-scène and such.

"Don't Bother Mother!" by E. B. D. Ewing and Courtenay Savage, with Miss Margaret Mower and Albert Bruning.

"The Undercurrent," by William H. McMasters, with Harry Beresford, Miss Lee Patrick, Frank Shannon, and Grant Stewart. The play is capital-labor stuff. . . . Mr. McMasters is a Boston newspaper-man who won high repute with a "scoop" that resulted in the exposé and conviction of Ponzi, the swindler. . . . Mr. Shannon was the actor of the boastful, profane Irish giant in "Anna Christie" when Miss Pauline Lord acted in that piece in the Cort.

"Episode," by Gilbert Emery, with Miss Kathlene MacDonell, William Courtleigh, and the author. . . . Mr. Emery is the author of "Tarnish," acted here early in the season, and "The Hero," a good play not known in Chicago.

One Thing and Another.

"Lightnin'" is reported to be a success in London, where Horace Hodges has the title-part. . . . He is a playwright as well as an actor, and is known here as part-author of "Sunday," in which Miss Barrymore acted twenty years ago, and "Grumpy," wherein Cyril Maude first appeared in Chicago.

Miss Jane Cowl has had her way with "The Depths," and has tried it in New-York; and the reporters there think it about as bad as they make 'em in kind.

Ernest Truex, made available by last night's closing of Miss Billie Burke in "Annie Dear," is going into the part in "The Fall-Guy" which Frank Craven acted last Summer in Milwaukee. The play is by James Gleason, part-author of "Is Zat So?" (soon to be seen here), and George Abbott, also an actor. . . . Ralph Sipperly and Miss Dorothy Peterson also will be in "The Fall-Guy."

Miss Julia Hoyt, who seemed to know so little of the business of being an actress when she was here in the Autumn in "Expressing Willie," is again mentioned for the title-part of Henri Bernstein's "Judith"; she had the rôle in a try-out of the piece some time ago. . . . McKay Morris also is to be in it.

"The Good Bad-Woman" is a play by William J. McNally to be tried with a view of cashing in on the vogue of "Ladies of the Evening," which is said to be a success in New-York. . . . William Anthony Maguire had a play acted some time ago by the name of "The Bad Good-Woman."

Henry Miller, said by the New-York reporters to have announced his retirement in a curtain-speech at the sad première of "The Man in Evening-Clothes," is going to act in a piece named "After Love?" A. E. Thomas has made it over from a French original.

Jefferson De Angelis, a veteran of the operettas, is going into the two-a-day with a comic sketch named "Wanderlust." He and De Wolf Hopper were co-comedians in the days of the famed McCaull troupe, and took part in Smith and De Koven's first piece, "The Begum."

Larry Semon, a comic of the films, is headlining for a week or two in the varieties. . . . Gareth Hughes, who has been a long time in the films, also seeks the varieties. He acted in Chicago as a member of the little Welsh troupe which about ten years ago gave "Change" in what is now the Playhouse, and later was in the cast, in Powers', of "Moloch," one of the early plays about the war.

Harry Fox is at law in an effort to obtain $4,500 from Sir Alfred Butt, the overlord of the theatrical business in England. Sir Alfred, it seems, engaged the cut-up for a London appearance in one of his theaters, the famous Empire, and then changed the policy of the house, leaving Fox idle.

And Miss Trixie Friganza, of the two-a-day, is turning to the films, and is to try her bulk in a comic.

Two nieces of Jacques Offenbach are reported to have attended the New-York première of "The Love-Song," the imported operetta with a score made up of his melodies and a libretto dealing with apochryphal incidents in his career. It seems that two of Offenbach's sisters came to this country in the first half of the Nineteenth Century. One became the wife of a man named Jones; and the nieces of a distinguished uncle are the Misses Jones.

Holbrook Blinn, William Harrigan, Miss Judith Anderson, and Sidney Toler are to be under Mr. Belasco in "The Dove." . . . Miss Anderson is the actress who stirred 'em up in "Peter Weston," two years ago, in the Harris. She was here last season for a brief period in a Playhouse waif named "Patches."

"Are Parents People?" is the good title of a play by Mrs. Alice Duer Miller wherein, it is said, Miss Betty Bronson, who is Peter Pan in the film, is to act with language.

STARS OF THE NEW MUSIC-SHOWS

MISS BEATRICE LILLIE

MISS FAY BAINTER

MISS LILLIE is from over-seas as a celebrity, although a native of a place so near as Toronto. She has been for the last decade a somebody of the revues and the lighter pieces with music in London, and in that time has put into circulation her fair share of comic songs. . . . She will make her Chicago bow tonight in Charlot's Revue, whereof she has been a star since its importation, little more than a year ago. . . . Advice from the theater-man of The Tribune is to remain at least until Miss Lillie shall have sung "March with Me!"

Miss Bainter, who had an immense vogue in the play named "East Is West," is returning in the capacity in which she first won attention in Chicago—that of a singing-and-dancing performer: she may be recalled by some for her graceful contributions to "The Rose of Panama," a piece which in 1912 the cat dragged into what is now the Eighth-Street Theater. . . . She is now in "The Dream-Girl," with some of Victor Herbert's last tunes to sing.

POPULAR

TOM PATRICOLA

He is in Chicago again in George White's Scandals; he was with the 1923 issue of the annual when it was shown last year in the Colonial. . . . Mr. Patricola is a brother of the cantatrice who, known to us merely as Miss Patricola, helped to make gay nights gayer what time Rector's had the best cabaret-show in town.

Bill Hart Just Shadow to Son

By Rosalind Shaffer.

soon as Art's decree becomes final, in April, the wedding date is to be announced. Louise had a contract to make pictures in South America and all was going beautifully, we were told. She was fêted, and danced with the president of Panama at one party in her honor. Then she proceeded to Brazil, but a revolution popped—and while she did plenty of acting, it was to the click of bullets and not a camera. She was held in a hotel in the interior for a week—escaped in a Ford to Rio, and took the next boat to the United States.

Diet Changes Nita.

Nita Naldi, a perfect product of the well known pineapple-and-lambchop diet, is affecting all black, or Egyptian princess effects, these days, always to the accompaniment of long earrings and no makeup but deftly done scarlet lips, which are arresting in her pale, ivory white face.

Mildred Davis seems fairly well after her accident in the studio fire and appeared at the dansant on Saturday at the Montmartre with Constance Bennett, Virginia Fox, and Laura Laplante. Virginia danced frequently with Jack Daugherty, Barbara La Marr's last husband, thereby swiping Marion Davies' latest one-stepping steady. Charlie Chaplin and Marion have been sighted from afar, driving, but their orbit has not crossed the writer's this week.

Lefty Seems Involved.

Every one is wondering what Viola Dana thinks; no sooner does she set off for parts east than her Lefty Maurice Flynn, the Yale football man, gets himself all involved in an engagement rumor. Grace Darmond appeared at a party sporting a dazzling ring.

"Yes," she sez, "Lefty and I are to be married. Yes, I betcha you're surprised. So is everybody else."

Frantic phoning located Lefty. "Naw," said he, "nothin' to it." Now Grace allows the engagement is off if Lefty says so, but that it certainly was on. Meanwhile every one is wondering how many lengthy wires Lefty may have rushed to New York trying to square himself with Viola.

Keeping Leatrice Busy.

They're having a terrible time with Leatrice Joy over at Lasky's, where she's doing her return picture, "The Dressmaker from Paris." Seems that the 5 months old Leatrice Jr. eats one of her numerous meals at 4 o'clock—and presto—at a quarter of 4, models, mannequins, flashlights, directors, extras and all, are left flat, for come what may, Leatrice Sr. makes one mad dash for the waiting car.

Play Reading with a Reviewer's Eyes

By Burns Mantle.

in Minneapolis, picked one out of sixteen; Pierre De Rohan of the New Haven Register got eleven, and Edward Hipp of the Newark Sunday Call, fifteen.

Arthur Pollock, over in Brooklyn, on the Eagle, read twenty-four; Helen De Motte of the Richmond, Va., News Leader, went through fourteen; John Hope, the Mobile Register man, got eleven, and another Kansan, R. E. Lewis of the Topeka Journal, read twelve.

The others averaged from five to ten, and probably not more than fifty out of the 300 escaped without having to read at least two.

One crafty young man, Richard P. Leahy of Bay City, Mich., had his two plays printed and a photograph of himself inserted in each. He then sent both plays to every member of the play reading committee he heard of. These plays were called "Snobs" and "The Center of Everything." They were both pretty bad, I thought, but four other readers submitted "The Center of Everything" as the best of their collection, and "Snobs" was sent in by one.

From Near and Far.

I received forty-two plays and four moving picture scenarios. Most of these came from the metropolitan district, but several were from afar. Some were bound in boards and some in morocco. Nearly all of them had good plot foundations, but they were largely collections of interesting dialogue, written by authors with a good story and character sense, but with little knowledge of, and less experience with, the needs of an acted play.

The one I selected as the most promising of my batch came all the way from Lake Port, Cal., but was written by an eastern newspaperman, now happily retired to the bungalow country.

The second choice came from Louisville, Ky., and there were several third choices nearer home. My experience in this matter of the distant contributor, it appears, was not unique. The Topeka State Journal's entry came to that paper from Chickasha, Okla., and the Richmond News Leader sent in one that had been sent all the way to Virginia from a young woman living in Bank street, New York.

Herman L. Dieck of the Philadelplays—that we could get true southern character plays from the south, real, honest to store clothes cowboy plays from the country the movies cover with chapps, and so on.

From some of the titles I have seen, a number of these apparently have been submitted. There is one called "Pork" from Ottumwa, Ia., a "Short Grass" piece from Dallas, Tex., and at least one "Mammy" play from Atlanta, Ga. Why "The Hope of Israel" should come from an author who lives in Salt Lake City by way of Boise, Idaho, it is a little difficult to figure, but so it did. And there is one from Indianapolis called "The Lady of the Bad Lands" that suggests Herrin rather than the Tarkington country.

Here are some of the other titles that sound as though their authors knew what they were trying to write about, at least: "Adventure for Two," "Old Mother Hudson," "The Husband Hunter," "A Hard Pair," "In the Name of God," "Whether She Did," "Twenty-four Hours," "I Don't Want the Money," "Brother, phia Record submitted as his best bet a play called "Herman's Harem," which might be accepted as suggesting something or other.

Titles Sound Promising.

I had hoped the district readings would inspire the writing of many folk They're All Alike," "Their Own Lives," "Charities, Ltd.," "The Islanders," "The Minister Cuts Loose," "The Butter Scotch." "All in the Family," "What'll You Have?" "This Age," "It Happened in Bearcat," "Helen Takes a Hand," "It Happened at Cassidy's," "Candy and Flowers," "Camouflage," "Peter Good-For-Nothing."

There is one prize play in the lot. A drama called "This Age," written by Jane Trenholm Bradley of Columbia, S. C., won a state prize in 1923 and was played by a Little theater group associated with the Columbia State society. It was chosen as the best of the five plays sent to L. Latimer of the Columbia State society.

They took the contest seriously in Nebraska, too. The play submitted by the State Journal was read by that daily's managing editor, Will Owen Jones, and also by Adrian Newens, director of the University School of Music; Alice Howell, professor of dramatic arts at the university, and Elsie Cather, a sister of Willa Cather, the novelist, who is director of the department of English in the Lincoln High school.

The plays submitted by the readers are still under seal. Only their titles and the names of their authors are known. The committee of original readers who have submitted plays will now be cut in two, and each of those selected will read two of the accepted manuscripts and reject one of them.

CANTATRICE

MISS HELEN HUDSON

She carries the soprano's burden of the sentimental songs in George White's Scandals, and, so, gives the cues for more than one of the parades, tableaux, and pictorial stunts of that costly-looking show. . . . Miss Hudson was with last season's Scandals in a like capacity.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

What is the best joke you ever heard? If you'll write it out and it is published, $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned. Address Best Jokes Editor, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

Meeting the Scale.

This was one of the impromptu jokes of the comedian Peter F. Dailey.

Dailey was leaving a restaurant where the prices were excessively high. Accidentally he stepped on something and started to fall. Being an extremely heavy man, there was actual danger. The other players sprang to catch him and the audience gasped. But he righted himself and then in silence stooped down and picked up a tiny object on which he had slipped.

The play stopped. In an expectant silence, Dailey drew out a pocketbook, counted the money in it, and then deposited the total sum in the head waiter's hands.

"Here," he said, "is twelve dollars. I stepped on a bean." L. F.

Answering the Description.

A woman who took great interest in her servants and their welfare recently engaged a new maid.

"Have you any special interest, Mary?" she asked, in her kind way. "Anything you are taking up or that you care about?"

"Well, mum," replied the simple Mary, "I 'ave been taking up with the baker's boy, but I don't know as 'ow I cares for 'im much!" J. W.

Fine Picture, if You Like Melodrama

By Mae Tinee.

from the maternal roof under which they've been living. The remark is:

"There'll be NO GRANDCHILDREN in THIS house!"

(And it seems, my dears, there's to BE a grandchild.)

Well, Mary's husband is his mamma's boy. He's a lawyer, but nobody seems to know it but himself. He makes about enough money to pay for his cigarets, which ISN'T enough to support a wife and pay his club dues. He becomes bored and goes back home, deserting and at last divorcing his beautiful wife. (Elaine Hammerstein IS beautiful, isn't she!)

The baby is born in the charity ward of the city hospital, and Mary has agreed that it shall be adopted at birth. Who is to adopt it she will never know. All she is assured of is that her baby will be placed in a comfortable home and in loving hands. (Pretty tough!)

In the meantime, the stalwart engineer has gone out where the west begins—Kansas, to be exact, or is that where it ends?—made a fortune in oil, and returned to avenge his broken heart.

He hears of Mary's sad plight and, unknown to her, adopts the baby. She, poor darling, drifts about in holey shoes, thin old clothes, and a cough, peering through restaurant windows where she sees fat men enjoying porterhouse steaks.

"Please, I'm hungry!" she croaks to a man she spies paying a taxi driver from one of those rolls of bills that cows are supposed to choke on.

"Sorry—got another date, kid!" he replies. "Whoo-oo," goes the wind. The rain beats against the attic window. You take another bite of apple, cuddle down deeper into the old moth eaten sofa—and read on.)

Machaevellian are the works of the adopted father. He engages the real dad as his legal adviser, and the latter becomes much attached to the beautiful, golden haired child whom he never dreams is his own——!

Haven't space to tell much more, but the glorious night is one Christmas eve when, having rescued Mary from a faint in a snowdrift, he brings her home and, when the father comes to call, flaunts mother and child in his face and says—or words to that effect, "HA! See what I have! Mine! Who's sorry NOW!"

Isn't that the old time romance for you?

See you tomorrow!

KICK KORNER

[Please write your "Kicks" on one side of the paper only.]

Enough Is Enough.

Dear Miss Tinee: I am forced to the melancholy conclusion that our heretofore much admired Griffith is an insatiate glutton for human misery, and nothing less than telling you about it will ease me. Ever since "The Birth of a Nation" all I needed was to hear or read that there was a new picture by Griffith and I was there, at my earliest convenience.

And now comes, "Isn't Life Wonderful?" So I went—as above. But, Mae, ye gods! Why pay 60 cents and sit through two mortal hours of dull, drab, unrelieved human misery, starvation, sickness, woe, wretchedness, etc., etc., ad infinitum? I am asking, asking you.

Griffith has given us sad stories before, but with scenes of relieving beauty mixed in, as in "Broken Blossoms." The few attempts at comedy relief in this last picture are too feeble to register. And somehow the heartache doesn't get over.

Neither do I believe there is a human being in the world who would live such a life of killing misery and now and then say, in sickly, Pollyannish hopefulness, "Isn't life wonderful?" It didn't ring true. If the people on the four end seats hadn't been so grudging about letting me climb over them I would have left after about the first one-third.

You tellum, Mae, that if they think they are doing any good in the world by watching slow starvation for two hours that seem like four, to go see this picture. If they don't, to spend the money for peanuts and have some fun. L. F. W.

Ina Takes the Floor.

Dear Miss Tiny: I don't agree with you—absolutely not!

The above vehement denunciation has to do with your review of Edna Ferber's "So Big." Heretofore our reactions seem to coincide so agreeably that I took sheer delight in reading your criticisms. And so this—all this and more marks my initiation into your column.

You must have been in "so-so a mood" when you went to see the film, weren't you, Miss Tiny? Probably went without your lunch. Horrid feeling. So sorry you could not have waited until 1:30.

Miss Talmadge—never! never! And I am exceedingly fond of this cinema artist.

If you contend Miss Moore was too young, then I contend Miss Talmadge would be too old.

IRATE INA.

[Editor's note: Sorry I couldn't print all of your letetr, but it was long, Ina.]

promises a Handel concerto and some Wagner excerpts to go with his. These will be the "Siegfried Idyl" and the "Ascent of Brunnhilde's Rock" and the finale from "Siegfried."

Some of the promised revivals appear to have been left out of the schedule for Pavlowa's second and final week. There are, however, announcements of "Amarilla," "Oriental Impressions," "Magic Flute," "Snowflakes," "Chopiniana," and "Autumn Leaves," enough to fill out a most interesting and apparently a highly prosperous engagement.

What Comes Next?

Every time a new issue of the League of Composers' review reaches this desk—the January copy is just at hand—it is likely to delay writing the musical column because it always starts a train of thought about the present trend of music. Whither are we drifting? Does any one know? This department may have hopes, but the hopes have not much evidence upon which to base themselves.

This review concerns itself with the output of the present day living composers, and as such, it is the best of its kind. It deals understandingly, if at times with too much propaganda. It proclaims Schönberg's "Erwartung," statistically and esthetically, thus: "This whole piece is written in 426 measures and lasts about twenty-five minutes. It rushes over its audience with the force of a torrent, of a wild beast. It is pure ecstasy, but as an ecstatic masterpiece it has such individuality and greatness as to compel belief."

Which, in the words of the gentleman in the Bab Ballad, is pretty, but I don't know what it means. Or of one Hector Villa-Lobos, a Brazilian composer, whose message is as yet unknown in this hinterland: "He is a creator of ambiances, of spiritual vistas. Intellectually and emotionally he is alive to the world. In his nature the qualities of savage races and of exquisitely civilized peoples meet, and this union is the determining cause of a rare sensibility. With unusual, powerful imagery he combines the ridiculous and the pathetic." And so on.

Ordinarily when one confronts a mess of rhetorical verbiage like that, one files it carefully in the waste basket and turns to something else. The present example is quoted merely as a symptom of the present condition of music.

Without too much trouble, one can find in all schools of music their logical and chronological counterpart in literature, and probably in the other arts as well. In "Pelleas and Melisande," a luminuous mist of Maeterlinck's words combined with a luminous mist of Debussy's music, and the result was an opera, also luminous and certainly misty. The blood-and-bones "verismo" of the well known operatic twins, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci," was pretty well reflected in the Kipling fiction of the same period. You can, if you like, find the Charles Dickens of music; you can certainly locate Byron in half a dozen composers.

The trouble with music at present is that it has fallen behind literature. After Debussy and Ravel there were and are many who practice the musical counterparts of vorticism, of vorticianism, of various other isms. Just now the general theory, roughly speaking, would seem to be that the composer who writes in two keys at the same time is twice as good a composer as he who is contented with one. If he can accomplish three keys simultaneously, he forthwith by geometrical progression becomes eight times as good.

This may be the correct answer on music of the future, and it may not. But up to date there is no Michael Arlen of music, no composer who is satisfied with being merely clear, witty, light of touch, and with no particular concern about his standing as a serious artist. That is where literature has gone ahead.

The greatest hope for the future depends not so much on the art of music as its economics. Opera writing has gone pretty well into the discard, and one great reason is that it costs too much to assemble the enormous instrumental and vocal organization that opera productions demand. Opera companies will go ahead on the impetus of the past as long as deficits can be met, but the chance of their being progressive or even up to date grows less each year. Operetta and ballet, or a combination of both, have the call in Europe just now. Small organizations have the best, almost the only chance of being progressive. Moreover, it is difficult to be misty or thunderous in the music of a small organization.

Mostly About Music.

Heralded as possessing all the attributes of a musical sensation, with a name satisfactory to those who delight in tongue twisters, and with the choice of a date which will satisfy those who believe the ordinary man's hoodoo brings good luck to the exceptionally talented, Eduard Zathureczky, Czech violinist, is announced for a recital at Orchestra hall on Friday evening, Feb. 13.

None of the impending musical events would seem to have aroused as much interest as the fiftieth anniversary of Mrs. Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler's debut as a concert pianist, which will take place at Orchestra hall on Feb. 25. They say at the hall that all the boxes have been sold and nearly half the money value of the seat subscriptions. All this has been done by mail, since the seat sale will not open until Feb. 9. The proceeds of the concert will be given to the United Charities of Chicago to be used as a permanent fund for the relief of incapacitated worthy musicians.

Frederic Freemantel, tenor, will give the most highly specialized song recital of the season this afternoon at the Blackstone theater, consisting entirely of the lyric works of Ludwig von Beethoven. The program is arranged chronologically, with a group of works composed before 1800 and in 1802, another from "The Mount of Olives," Beethoven's only oratorio, a third from the years 1806 and 1810, and a final collection from the later years. For another reason the recital ought to be notable. Close examination of the program reveals no mention of "Adelaide."

In promotion of the perfectly sane and credible idea that the organ is a good concert instrument, the National Association of Organists will join forces with Mr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra tomorrow night at Orchestra hall. The program is intended to demonstrate the resources of the organ both for solo purposes and in collaboration with the orchestra. Clarence Dickinson will play his "Storm King" Symphony for orchestra and organ. Robert R. Birch will be heard in the Guilmant Concerto No. 1 for organ and orchestra, Edwin Stanley Seder will present a group of organ solos, including Seth Bingham's Fugue in C minor, Jos. W. Clokey's "Mountain Sketches," Charles H. Marsh's "A Young Girl in the Wind," and the finale from Edward Shippen Barnes' Second Symphony. A feature of the program will be a demonstration of the use of the organ in accompaniments for motion pictures by Mildred Fitzpatrick.

Josef Lhevinne, who has not given a piano recital here in two years, will do so this afternoon in a program of classics and moderns. At the same hour William Bachaus at the Playhouse will play a program of something the same character though of different works. Likewise Marie Sundelius, the soprano, will give a recital of songs at the Studebaker running from George Frederick Handel to John Alden Carpenter. Miss Sundelius, a Metropolitan and Ravinia artist, appeared at the Royal Opera of Stockholm last season, with the result that the King of Sweden conferred the Litteris et Artibus medal upon her, the highest Swedish honor that can be given a musician.

Roland Hayes, colored tenor, is announced for a recital at Orchestra hall on Tuesday night. He is a notable artist, well versed in the ancient and modern songs of various lands and tongues, and because he is a fine singer in these he is exceptionally fine in spirituals.

If you would hear Irish songs as well as others this afternoon, Fiske O'Hara, star of "The Big Mogul," will sing them for you at the Arcadia auditorium this afternoon. He will be assisted by Miss Pat Clary, his leading woman, also by Sara Ann McCabe, soprano, and Catherine Downey, pianist, of the same company. It will be a busy day for Miss McCabe. In addition to her duties in the play and her operatic arias with Mr. O'Hara, she will sing this noon at the Chicago theater during the organ recital by the Crawfords.

—go Hand in Hand

Have you ever bent over to pick up a pin, and as you arose, felt the blood pounding in your head, and felt a slight dizziness?

Is your sleep unrefreshing and disturbed by dreams? Do you suffer with gastric disturbances after meals?

Are you nervous—have headaches—and do you feel that you lack vitality? These are but a few of the more common symptoms of high blood pressure.

Statistics shows that one out of every three persons with High Blood Pressure dies within a year.

Dr. R. C. Cabot gives it as "the most common cause of death." Dr. T. B. Scott says it "destroys life far more than cancer."

A big life insurance company says, "The person with high blood pressure is slated to die before his time."

Yet, in spite of this, the person with every symptom of high blood pressure will continue to drift along until one of the arteries of the brain bursts—which, says Dr. Scott, "is the frequent end."

If you even suspect you have High Blood Pressure, you should investigate the Witter Water Treatment that has relieved thousands of sufferers and restored them to perfect health. Call at our office for FREE BLOOD PRESSURE TEST, or mail the coupon for FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and valuable FREE BOOKLET.

DISTANCE THRILL GRIPS LISTENERS THE WORLD OVER

Paris Program Prompts Letters to Chicago.

BY STEPHEN GILCHRIST.
[Radio Editor.]

However enthusiastic we may become over the clear sweetness of our nearby radio programs, which strum lightly and pleasantly the strings of our emotions, we find it hard to weigh this enthusiasm against the thrill that comes with distant call letters, mushed, almost garbled, though they may be.

The crystal set owner who hears a station 200 miles away will remember and tell of that always, while the gala local program of the night before is forgotten almost with the morning. The tube set owner is the crystal listener's seven league booted brother.

Hope for Far Signals.

Talk to either of these as little or as much as you will of the worth while qualities of the local program and he will agree with you heartily, unemotionally. But tell him that tomorrow KOA should be heard by crystal and one tube sets in Chicago territory because of some transmission improvement and you will find him all attention. Tell him also that this new turn will bring KOA — or even WOAW — through every sort of local interference, and he will demand of you every shred of information of which you may be possessed.

That is the hold distance reception has upon the owner of every radio receiver that ever was advertised as being able to go beyond the accustomed crystal pale; it is the hold that will continue so long as broadcasting continues.

"Distance" will shift its boundaries farther and farther on, as the power of the broadcasters goes up, and it may be that before the year 1925 is half through the calendar, the logger of a 50 watt station 3,000 miles away will be able to command more attention in a group of radio owners than the man who can show detailed reception of 3,000 watt stations thrice as far.

Always Seek Verification.

Moreover, when the call letters are doubtful or when the distance is in question the mystified member of the radio audience who has listened in is never going to get back into a peaceful state of mind until he has these details. If call letters and city escape him, he is going to grab at any straw in that program and hurl a letter forth in the hope that it will bring to him the coveted details of that far broadcaster.

And herein is a litlte moral that will do no harm for broadcast announcers, British as well as American, Canadian as well as Mexican, to learn by heart: clear enunciation of call letters, repeated if need be, and location means everything to the far listener.

Very few announcers are adept in this respect, but the few who do "get over" well always. Whoever failed to get KFI?

KFKX [Bill Hay's consistent clarity, rolled along in pure Scotch, never scores a miss], KGW, KGO, WSB, or WMC, failed also to get anything on the preceding number of the program. Those call letters always get over; the cities, too.

Kay an Example.

Lamdin Kay, by his sing-song, has made "At-a-lan-ta, Gawga," understood in myriad receiving stations where the numbers probably had a distinct musical relation to a carpet sweeper with worn brushes. Others have done the same thing. WOAW, with its "The city surrounded by the United States," is better than it used to be, although it never had been obscured by poor announcing. "Henry Field speaking" is another we failed to list. You may miss KFNF, but you don't miss Henry, and that is a definite clew, at least.

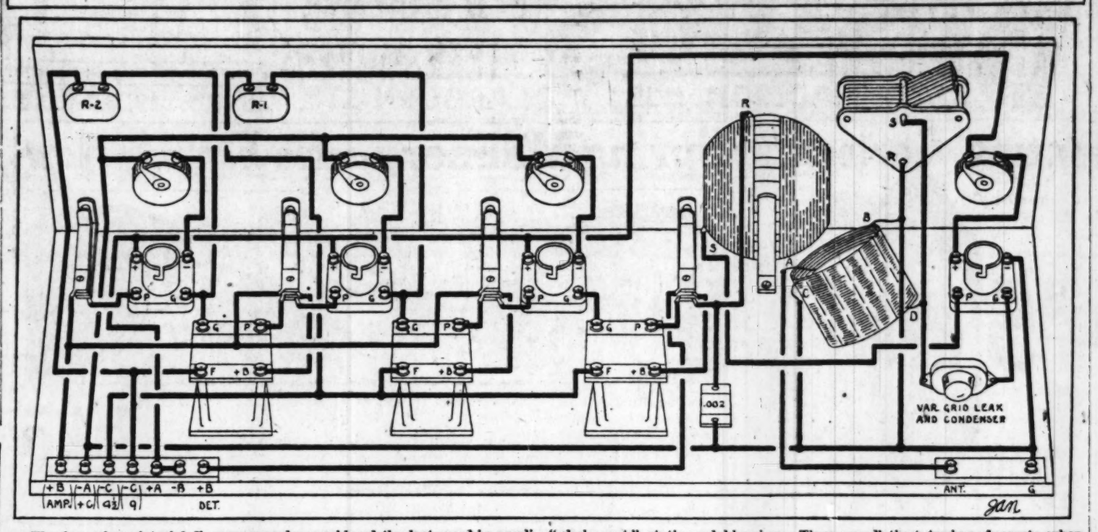
On the night of Jan. 12, the Paris editions of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and the New York Herald coöperated in putting on the air the first All-American program. It was broadcast from the Paris station of the Petit Parisien. A great event, for the American colony. Yet here was another case of the announcer failing to grasp the fact that in far flung regions—and some not so very far flung, at that—a clear, incisive statement now and then of call signal, and of the city of broadcasting, would have carried a lot of weight.

Much of Value Lost.

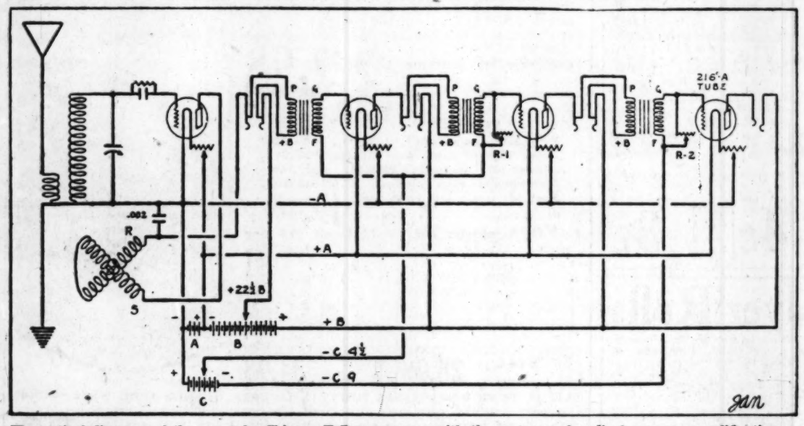
Evidently he—or it may even have been she—got over all right the fact that it was being broadcast by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and the New York Herald, but there was such a lack of explicitness that the home office of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE has received numerous letters asking for confirmations in the British isles, when the announcer meant that reports of reception were desired at the Paris office. He took too much for granted. Listeners are pretty shrewd guessers, generally, but they can't all be expected to know "all about" everything.

If "indirect advertising" is the aim of most broadcasting, half announcing certainly takes much of the "pay" out of it.

One-Tube Ranger with Three Stages Audio



The foregoing pictorial diagram may be considered the last word in amplifying the one tube set, the resistance across the secondaries of the last two audio transformers supplying a control of tone and volume that, when transformers of radios not more than 3½ to 1 are employed, make for a clarity which will concede nothing to resistance coupled audio circuits. Moreover, these controls, which must be of the panel mounting type, and of the order of 10,000 to 100,000 ohms, play a big rôle in helping the ranger in its ability to "choke out" static and blooping. They are distinct tuning elements when reception is noisy. In the diagram R and S indicate rotor and stator, respectively. On the coil, A indicates the terminal of the primary that is nearest the grid end of the coil, while B indicates the outer terminal of the primary. C is the low potential or filament terminal of the coil, while D is the high potential, or grid, terminal. The primary coil invariably is at the filament end of the coil.



Theoretical diagram of the one tube Chicago Tribune ranger with three stages of audio frequency amplification.

"Midnight Frolics" Makes Hit with Thousands

Omaha, Neb., Jan. 31.—WAAW, operated by the Omaha Grain Exchange, recently broadcast a midnight frolic, a feature of which was the christening of an imaginary airship "The Omaha." The affair brought WAAW an avalanche of letters not only fro mthis country, but Canada, Mexico, and Hawaii.

Signals Across U. S. on Mere 21 Meters

That daylight conditions do not have as great an effect on short wave lengths as they do on long ones is shown by the experience of John L. Reinartz of South Manchester, Conn., who has just succeeded in transmitting across the continent signals on a wave length of only 21 meters.

WTAM, at Cleveland, Changes Its Wave Length

The wave length of WTAM at Cleveland has been changed from 390 meters to 364 meters. WEAR, formerly WJAX, made the change a few days previous to WTAM. These two Cleveland stations have always been on the same wave length, dividing the time on the air. They will continue to do so.

ENGLAND MAKES GENERAL CUT IN PRICE OF TUBES

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 31.—An announcement of a general cut in the prices of all British radio tubes was made today. The reduction goes into effect on Monday, and covers the entire range of tubes from the cheapest to the most expensive. The move was made at the initiative of three of the largest radio supply firms in England as a stimulus to purchasers, many of whom hitherto have contented themselves with crystal reception instead of tube amplifiers and tube sets.

WEAF Goes to 2,000 Watts on Experimental Basis

WEAF, New York, has increased its power to 2,000 watts on an experimental basis. This is the first station to use 2,000 watts under the test plan.

Have You Heard the New Overtone-Reproducing Pfanstiehl?

Internal Noises Completely Eliminated

Tone Supremely Pure and Sweet

RADIO authorities will tell you that the most important stride forward this year is Pfanstiehl's complete elimination of internal noises without the use of any neutralizing devices. At one stroke he has made radio a much simpler and more enjoyable instrument. You get REAL music from a distance, and the full, rich resonance of the singing or speaking voice.

There is no enjoyment in picking up distant points if all that you hear is weird noises and distorted speech. These are due to the stray oscillations. The radio energy is not properly controlled.

Radio engineers did not know how to control it. They could not prevent the generation of stray oscillations in the set, which cause squeals and chatter, and interfere with a pure, sweet tone. All they could do was to absorb them with neutralizing devices—devices which do not work unless perfectly adjusted, and whether they work or not, they never can restore the delicate overtones which are blurred or lost by feedback of stray energy. This stray energy enters the preceding circuit like an intruder. The two are out of phase; do not mesh together. Hence the conflict which ruins the minute overtones of voice or music. Tone beauty is thus lost.

What Pfanstiehl did was to find out the real causes of these stray oscillations. They had never been separately known before. Then he designed an entirely new system, which keeps them out. It does not merely offset or neutralize, as had been done hitherto with complicated devices. It gets rid of all internal interference.

The technical means employed are a scientific story of great importance to radio engineers. The average user does not care about that. He wants the result. In the new Pfanstiehl he gets clear tone from a distance. And he gets much more than that; he gets tonal charm—real music—the full, rich resonance of voice or instrument.

A Unique "Station Finder"—Takes the Guesswork Out of Tuning

A unique feature of the Pfanstiehl Overtone Receiver is a "Station Finder," which takes the guesswork out of tuning and enables even the inexperienced to tune this receiving set quickly and without difficulty. From the radio program in the daily newspaper or radio magazine, ascertain the "wave length" of the station you want to hear and also the time at which it is scheduled to broadcast. 1. Find this "wave length" or number on the lower scale. 2. Read the number directly above it on the upper scale, and set each of the three large dials to this reading. 3. Tuning may now be sharpened by adjusting the large dials slightly, one at a time, with the small vernier knobs below. Adjustment of the large dials to a fraction of a degree, enables you to secure the sharper tuning needed for maximum results from distant stations.

An Appeal to Radio Users: Every owner of a fine radio receiver should agitate for the suppression of regenerative interference in the air and undesirable radio transmission. They spoil the enjoyable possibilities of pure tone reception. Do not be a radio nuisance yourself by using a set which radiates or transmits noises to your neighbor.

RANGER RANGING FAR IN INTEREST OF LISTENERS

Calls for Diagrams from Nearly Every State.

BY EXPERIMENTER.

When the radio department gets a letter from Florida and one from Alaska, calling for diagrams or explanations regarding The Chicago Tribune Ranger, it will have to be conceded that this receiver has been heard from in every state in the union. Next we hope it will be heard over in as many.

Perhaps we may be allowed, unless some Alaskan friend comes across with an inquiry, to substitute a letter which was received this week from Craik, Saskatchewan, in which was enclosed 35 cents in Canadian paper money for which the writer asked its value in diagrams. The writer will receive The Tribune Radio Book, and 15 cents to boot, just as soon as the book is off the press.

Book to Be Complete.

Speaking of the radio book, it already has a subscription list that augurs well for its future. It is going to be a much more thorough volume than at first contemplated, because of realization of the need of a book that will take the inexperienced and lead them up, through a simple exposition of radio technique, to that point where they will be able to sit down all by themselves and draw off their own circuit diagrams, with any fancy techings they may care to add thereto.

Everything pertaining to the Ranger circuit, and its variations, will be set down in picture and explanation in such manner that none should find difficulty in preparing for construction at home of some type of radio, whether it be the Ranger or some other circuit.

Gets Speedy Response.

Frank H. McDonald, president of the Broadcast Listeners of America, on the air Wednesday evening at WBCN, the Southtown Economist station, said a lot of nice things about the Ranger, and immediately New Jersey scored again in the letters received column, S. M. Nixon of Penn Grove writing, in part, to the radio editor:

"While listening to the orchestra from station WCBN, Chicago, last evening, I heard a talk by Mr. McDonald . . . and his praise for the receiving circuit known as The Tribune Ranger."

The writer went on to express belief that, from what he had heard Mr. McDonald say, the Ranger might prove to be just the set he is in quest of, and asks for descriptive matter. Another candidate for the radio book!

It's "Book" Now.

By the way, did you notice that it's book now—not booklet. But those awaiting it will have to curb their impatience, for probably three weeks. So elaborate is the art work involved that it is not a mere question of type setting and makeup, but one entailing many careful drawings, with the engraving, makeup, etc., all entering in.

The Ranger series of articles, with picture lessons in construction, alone will make a book of 50 pages.

And it will be something altogether different.

Keep it in mind, but don't lose patience. It will be worth the waiting.

The price, as heretofore stated, will be 10 cents, to cover cost of paper and printing.

British Guiana Lifts Ban on Radio Goods

The British Guiana prohibition of the use of radio sets was removed recently, Goston Smith, American consul at Georgetown, reports to the department of commerce. Receiving sets are licensed by the government at $3 a year.

HALLS BACK FROM LONG TRIP

Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Hall have just returned to their home in Chicago after making a 50,000 mile radio tour of all the broadcasting stations of the United States, Canada, Hawaii, Mexico, and Cuba. Their homecoming recalls their radio wedding last June in New York.

Hermanus T. Baer to Be Regular W-G-N Feature

Hermanus T. Baer, baritone, who was heard last Thursday during the recital of German Lieder provided by Mabel Sharp Herdien from W-G-N, will be a regular feature of the station's programs. Mr. Baer has had wide concert experience.

RECORD CROWD LAVISH IN GIFTS AT FREE EVENT

Yet Could Have Gotten It All by Radio.

Commenting on the fear expressed by certain New York theatrical managers that the radio threatens the ruin of theaters, Clara E. Randall, in charge of publicity for the Sunday Evening club, declared yesterday that the experience of that organization does not bear out the theater managers' contention.

"By this time," she said, "it is well known that the services are broadcast by KYW, yet last Sunday at the meeting at which Harry Fosdick spoke the crowd began to gather at 4:30 in the afternoon in such numbers that the officials at Orchestra hall were obliged to push them aside, almost by force, to allow room for the audience of the afternoon concert to file out.

Nearly Swamp Police.

"By 6:20, ten minutes before the doors were opened, the corridors were jammed, and it was with great effort that the police captain and his eleven assistants kept in orderly line the overflow which extended north and south on Michigan avenue.

Record Collection.

"Another interesting point is the fact that the collection was larger than it has ever been in the history of the club, though they have often had a packed house such as that of Sunday night. No unusual solicitation for funds was made, just the usual announcement of the collection.

"This does not seem to bear out the contention of some that people stay home to listen in because the entertainment is free."

They Find Radio Helps in Teaching English Language

3 CITIES OPEN NEW POWERFUL TRANSMITTERS

WLW, Cincinnati, opened its five kilowatt transmitter last Tuesday night at 9 o'clock with an elaborate dedication program. WOC, Davenport, is now using a new 5,000 watt transmitter, and WCBD, Zion, Ill., will open its five kilowatt station tomorrow night.

The transmitting apparatus of WLW'S five kilowatt station is located at Harrison, O., about twenty-five miles from the Cincinnati studios. Pressing a button sets in operation the various motor generators, lights the vacuum tubes, and starts the water cooling system which keeps the high power vacuum tubes at a suitable temperature.

This rapid system is equaled in the WLW studios in Cincinnati, where it is possible to switch from the microphone in the solo studio to the microphone in the ensemble studio without the loss of a second.

Iowa Station Places More Microphones

Shenandoah, Ia., Jan. 31.—KFNF, located here, has recently installed microphones in the local armory and the Methodist church. This station is now broadcasting every Monday night, on a wave length of 266 meters, as well as every other night in the week.

THE LIMIT of MAN'S SKILL

The GREBE SYNCHROPHASE

There is a limit beyond which the hand of the craftsman and the skill of the engineer cannot go. When that limit has been reached, perfection, as we understand it, has been attained.

In the walnut cabinet there is preserved an air of solidity and dignity. And that essential mechanism which operates within, unseen, represents the highest achievement in tuned radio frequency amplification of America's oldest manufacturer of radio equipment.

Whether you wish to hear a symphony broadcast from a nearby station, or experience the thrill of hearing some far distant call letters, the GREBE SYNCHROPHASE will satisfy your desire—will respond to your most exacting demands.

WEAKER SIGNALS THAN IN 1924, SCIENCE NOTES

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.] — Signals from California and European broadcasting stations are not coming through as strong as a year ago, Dr. J. H. Dellinger, chief of the radio section of the bureau of standards, stated today in a report on the recent meeting of the American Section of International Union of Scientific Radio Telegraphy.

Measurements were made by Dr. L. W. Austin, chairman of the committee on radio wave transmission phenomena. In measurements on the strength of signals from European stations a drop was found just after the time of sunset in Europe.

Dr. Austin stated that he could not explain this variation in intensity of signal from the Pacific coast and trans-Atlantic stations, but announced that his committee would continue scientific investigation of the phenomena presented in radio wave transmission.

Balkite "B" perfects the operation of the "B" circuit

Supplies plate current from the light socket—Gives results unattainable with "B" Batteries—Makes your set far clearer, more selective and more powerful

There used to be no help for it. No matter what kind of a radio set you owned you could not escape "B" batteries and their variation in plate current.

Now comes Balkite "B"—one of the outstanding developments in radio. It finally perfects the operation of the "B" circuit. It does away with "B" batteries entirely and supplies plate current from the light socket. It radically increases clarity, selectivity and power. The experience of 5,000 users shows it to be the greatest improvement you can make in your set. One owner says: "There is so much difference between operating my set with Balkite "B" and without it you would hardly recognize it as the same. It has improved my set 100%."

Fits any set

Balkite "B" replaces "B" batteries of all types. It furnishes uniform current to the "B" circuit, with unlimited voltage for both amplifier and detector tubes. It fits any set of 1 to 10 tubes or more without changes or additions. Once adjusted to the needs of your set it needs no attention and can be put in use at any time by merely connecting it to the light socket. Besides greatly improving the performance of your set, Balkite "B" saves tubes, for with its use they are not overworked.

In many cases Balkite "B" also makes it possible to operate your set without an aerial, with improved results.

No tubes or bulbs

Balkite "B" is based on the same principles as the Balkite Battery Charger—the accepted leader in its field. It is entirely noiseless, has no tubes or bulbs to burn out, and nothing to break, wear, or get out of order. It is a permanent piece of equipment that will outlive your set. Its current consumption is less than 1/2¢ per hour.

Have your dealer demonstrate

You will not know how much difference Balkite "B" will make in the operation of your set till you have seen it at work. Your dealer will not only demonstrate it for you, but guarantee it to give satisfaction with your set or refund your money.

Operates from 110-120 AC current
Models for both 50 and 60 cycles. Price $55

BALKITE BATTERY CHARGER

For charging "A" batteries. Noiseless in operation. Has nothing to adjust, break or get out of order, and no moving parts or bulbs. Can be used while the set is in operation. Many owners leave it connected to the battery permanently, and merely turn on the light current when they wish to operate the set. The ideal power supply for your set is a good "A" battery, a Balkite Charger and Balkite "B."

ECLIPSE SHOWS SUNLIGHT MAY AID LOW WAVE

Signals Flash Through Light to Australia.

New York, Jan. 31.—Radio research engineers hoped that the delicate instruments in tune with the ether during the eclipse would solve some of their problems, but instead new complications have arisen. During the eclipse, from 8:45 to 9:51 a. m., the seventy-five meter signals broadcast by 2XI, Schenectady, faded to inaudibility in the laboratory of the Radio Corporation of America in Van Cortlandt park. An examination of the charge made of the incoming signals seemed to show that the low waves traveling 160 miles from Schenectady to New York are entirely dependent upon sunlight.

Three days after the eclipse the short wave transmitter of KDKA, Pittsburgh, flashed sixty three meter signals through bands of daylight and darkness over 9,000 miles to Australia. This would make it appear that the low waves are not entirely dependent upon daylight.

Further tests will be made, and it is understood that attempts will be made to determine from which direction the short waves traveled from Pittsburgh to the other side of the globe. It is explained that they may have followed an indirect route in which daylight predominated.

FIRST HOLLYWOOD IS BOUGHT BY A RADIO CONCERN

Betzwood, at Norristown, Pa., the original and first Hollywood of the motion picture industry, where the Lubin thrillers were staged back years and years—the home of the Toonerville Trolley has been purchased by the Music Master corporation.

This site where many triumphs were made by Lubin will be the home of a new and powerful radio station. Just how soon the change will be made or how soon the station will be established is not stated. The Music Master Radio corporation will use part of the site for wood working activities necessary in its business.

MANUFACTURERS ASK HEARING ON RAILROAD RATES

Washington, D. C., Jan. 30.—The Radio Manufacturers' Association of the United States and Canada has asked the interstate commerce commission for a suspension of freight rate increases which railroads throughout the country propose to put into effect Feb. 10, Maj. Herbert H. Frost, president of the association, has announced. The suspension is asked pending a hearing before the commission, he said, on the ground that the increases would force users to pay more for radio sets and apparatus.

N. Y. RADIO SHOW DATE FIXED FOR EARLY SEPTEMBER

New York, Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Official announcement is made that the fourth annual radio show will open early in September at Grand Central palace.

The demand for space this year, it is declared, has led the show management to lease another floor of Grand Central palace, so that the exhibits this year will cover the ground floor as well as the mezzanine and third floors.

The demonstrations by radio which featured last year's exposition will be repeated this year on a much larger scale.

Guess Work

When the first B-T Tuner ad was written "Radio Pages" were unknown.

Where the "ad" would appear was a matter of chance.

But THEN, as now, there was no guess work about the product.

THEN, the B-T was the only Tuner—

TODAY there are Tuners galore—with the B-T Low Loss as far ahead as ever.

Don't start another set until you read "Better Tuning." 48 pages of Diagrams, Hook-ups and Tuning information. At your dealers, or sent for 10c.

BUILD your one, two, three or four-tube set with the B-T Tuner and Condenser, and eliminate GUESS WORK.

INDIANS WILL ADOPT WHITE AT B. L. A. AFFAIR

The Broadcast Listeners' association has an unusually attractive program ready for its meeting Wednesday night at Hamilton park field house, when it is expected there will be a record attendance.

The entertainment program will be in the nature of an "All American night. A company of full blooded Indians will give a characteristic event in the form of an adoption ceremony—the adoption of a "white" into an Indian tribe. There will be war dances, "Dance of Joy," and other tribal dances, songs and chants, depicting the real life and customs of the "first" Americans. The "white" to be adopted into the tribe will be named later.

Others on the entertainment program will include Miss Grace Wilson, who made the song, "Bringing Home the Bacon," famous; Harvey G. Larson, vocalist; Belden Brisco, violinist; Miss Gail, Mort Green, and Ralph J. Norris of the Duncan Sisters.

The technical discussions will include talks by a member of the radio department of THE TRIBUNE on "The Tribune Ranger," and by Dr. Ralph S. Piper and F. L. Dameron.

VIENNA EXPECTS TO GET LONDON ON CRYSTAL SETS

VIENNA, Jan. 31.—Radio amateurs in this city expect soon to hear Lonsets. Negotiations are now under way between a local broadcasting company and the British Broadcasting company for permission to relay the most important London numbers.

U. S. AND LONDON SWAP PROGRAMS DURING ECLIPSE

Philadelphia, Jan. 31.—For the first time in radio history American broadcasting stations are heard in Europe in daytime. The feat that heretofore was considered impossible by radio experts of both continents was accomplished during the total eclipse of the sun.

One of those heard abroad was WIP, Philadelphia, which had made arrangements with station 2LO, at London, and station 2BD, at Aberdeen, Scotland, to stage a trans-Atlantic test during the eclipse period. Station WIP began its broadcasts promptly at 7 a. m., eastern standard time, as arranged. At 7:45 a. m. WIP began a program of orchestral music, and continued to broadcast it until 8:39 a. m.

About 9:30 a. m. a cablegram was received from 2LO saying that WIP'S signals had been distinctly heard in London at 3:12 a. m., eastern standard time. This was before the eclipse was noticeable at Philadelphia.

A telegram to WIP from Howard Adams Jr. of Baltimore, Md., reported hearing 2LO's broadcast at 9:09 a. m. James Capiozio of Philadelphia distinctly heard 2BD, at Aberdeen, Scotland, and held their signals for three minutes. Rossmore Thatcher of Asbury Park, N. J., wired WIP that he had heard 2LO clearly.

This was the first daylight trans-Atlantic test ever attempted, and the first time that two way broadcasting was heard in daylight between the two continents.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Holding Mirror of Manners Up Before Society

By Mme. X.

WELL, here we are on the threshold of February, the shortest and, say some, most uninteresting month of the twelve. The winter, socially speaking, is over. A large number of the folk who make the season lively and interesting by entertaining at luncheons, teas, dinners, balls, and other similar functions have departed for balmier climes and more picturesque stage settings. Some have gone west, some to southern winter resorts, some have crossed the briny deep and are junketing about the old world whence came our ancestors.

It is the moment to look over the landscape and give a cursory thought to what it's all about. I'm not going to moralize on society or to ponder on its whys and wherefores. But a few little observations, a question or two, arising from certain incidents which occurred during the winter, are not out of the way at this time and place.

At the risk of making this column disliked by many readers the writer ventures again to comment on the bad manners of some elements in what is called society. This boorish contingent is not confined entirely to the young, though it is youth that errs chiefly in matters social. For instance, among this latter the habit is still deeply ingrained of wearing informal garb at formal parties. At balls and large and expensive dinner parties the older men almost without exception appear in full dress "swallow tail" coats, white waistcoats, and white ties, while the majority of the younger element continue to sport dinner jackets, black waistcoats, and black ties.

Invitations Mean Nothing.

But this is far from being the worst crime. If various hosts and hostesses are to be credited, not only does this crowd of youths come in unrespectful attire to parties to which they have been invited, but they not infrequently appear at parties to which they have not been bidden at all. This is a custom which seems to be increasing. Nor is it confined to wild and headstrong young men. It is even becoming prevalent among the quite young boys and girls, those in their early teens, who, when they find that their playmates are going to what promises to be a "good party," turn up there themselves without any such trifling preliminaries as an invitation.

This is not an advisable precedent to establish nor a good habit to form. A man's home is still his castle even in these days of kitchenette apartments and family hotels, and to invade it uninvited is to court trouble. Of course the same kind of person who would go uninvited to a party would omit any such ceremony as answering an invitation which he or she (most often he) might receive.

This habit of neglecting to respond to invitations, either promptly or at all, is not confined to the young. A friend of mine gave a luncheon to forty recently and asked me what he should do the day before the party because twenty of those whom he had asked had failed to respond to the invitation, and he wanted to know for how many he should provide. Many a hostess has to telephone some of those whom she has invited either by written note or by telephone message, to ask whether they are accepting or declining an invitation which they have neglected to acknowledge in any way.

The same people who are late in responding to invitations are apt to be late in arriving at parties. A young couple who visited here lately and, for various reasons, excited quite a good deal of comment, arrived at a dinner to which they had been bidden an hour after the time set for the feast. They completed their quota of thoughtlessness by departing before the dinner, delayed by their tardiness, was over, to go to another party.

Such inconsiderateness is not common, but the habit of arriving late at luncheons or dinners is shared by many otherwise fairly courteous folk. It is not a graceful or endearing habit. To do so once or even twice is permissible, but to make it such a customary thing that the hostess says, "so-and-so is always late, don't let's wait," is to take a liberty with social life, which has its rules and regulations as any other complicated orderly system has.

Almost without exception, those who break these commonest rules of courtesy are not those who are most accustomed to or familiar with good society. They have not been brought up to the small currency of everyday social life and are, therefore, new and poor at the game. They generally belong to the sizable element that receives and never returns such courtesies. Those who entertain most are the most considerate of other would-be hosts, and always answer their invitations expeditiously and arrive punctually at the party.

There is no one more punctilious in this direction than that queen among hostesses, Mrs. Marshall Field of Washington, formerly of Chicago. No one accepts or declines an invitation more promptly than Mrs. Field, the most generous and constant of hostesses. As some mortals have a genius for music, art, or writing, she has a genius for entertaining. One is never received beneath her roof without feeling especially welcome and having what is called "a good time." Her luncheons, dinners, and balls are famous in Washington and, as Washington swarms with foreigners who go from there all over the world, her renown is carried around the globe.

Just a Suggestion.

To return to Chicago's beau monde: it has been sugested that it might be advisable to have in Chicago what was once instituted in New York (whether it still exists or not, I don't know); and that is, a more or less official reception committee composed of the city's representative citizens, whose job it should be to look out for the many notabilities who come our way, and see that they get the right kind of reception and have the opportunity to see, understand, and enjoy Chicago.

More and more are we Americans being discovered by foreign and touring celebrities. People, who before 1918 were wont to look on us as provincial and unimportant from any but a business point of view, now batter at our doors in a way to make us self-conscious, if not puffed up and vain.

This reception committee could see to it that all of the notabilities who

MISS MARY GARDNER

Chicago social sun having set for this winter, the debutantes turn their faces toward various parts of the globe, some seeking new gayeties and pleasures, and others rest after the strenuous activities of the season.

Miss Martha Morse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Morse of 60 Scott street, departed the other day to attend Dartmouth's annual carnival, a three day session of outdoor sports and indoor parties. While she is in the east she will visit Mrs. William Bradford Adams of Springfield, Mass., who was a member of the bridal party of her sister, Mrs. William S. Covington, in the fall. Miss Morse and her parents are to sail on March 7 for a trip abroad.

Miss Smith, who is engaged to Arthur Wallace Jerrems Jr. of Highland Park, an dwho made her debut in December, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Edward Smith of Highland Park. Mrs. Smith has departed for the west, and Mr. Smith and his daughter will go on Wednesday to join her in California, to stay away until spring. Miss Smith's wedding probably will take place soon after their return.

Miss Mary Gardner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Gardner of New York, was introduced to Chicago society by her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Albert S. Gardner, and has been included in the affairs for the younger set here. She and Miss Leslie Thorne, deb daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Thorne of 2344 Lincoln park West, sailed yesterday from San Francisco for a trip to Honolulu. Mrs. Gardner and her daughter have occupied an apartment at 2910 Pine Grove avenue for the winter.

land on the shores of the U. S. A. should get at least as far as Cook county. Not even a Russian grand duchess out of a job should escape us. It could give a semi-official air to the visit of some of the genuinely great and noted that come our way. Some of them are left in a hit or miss fashion to the accidents of travel. Some even escape us entirely and glide through town escorted only by a chatty cabman.

The suggestion is not my own, but I give it for what it is worth.

More Balls than Ever.

The winter has been, socially speaking, one of the liveliest in the history of the city. More balls than ever before on the social calendar is the record, and a corresponding number of dinners and associated entertainments. It seems like painting the lily to have the custom—now firmly established here—of preceding every big ball with a lot of dinner dances, so that the followers of Terpsichore start dancing early in the evening and continue until the early milkman is on his rounds. It means that the ball, the main fact of the evening, does not begin until about midnight, which also means that the host and hostess have to stand and receive from 11, or even earlier, until 1 in the morning. This is a hardship, and one that has to be smilingly endured, worse luck! It's hard enough to have to endure discomfort, without having to smile while enduring it.

Meteorologically speaking, the winter has been an interesting one, even if the eclipse did not prove a social success.

By the way, a north side matron asked her cook if she had arisen and gone forth to view the eclipse.

"No'm, I didn't. That weather man makes so many mistakes that I knew he'd get this one wrong, and he did."

The weather has invaded society and is responsible for at least three serious accidents to socially prominent folk. Mrs. William Waller slipped on an icy sidewalk several weeks ago and broke her shoulder, an accident from which she has not yet recovered. John H. Winterbotham had a similar disaster a fortnight or so ago and smashed a rib, from which he is slowly recovering. He is out and about again, but he looks askance at every glistening patch of icy sidewalk.

On the Road to Recovery.

Tiffany Blake, who, on his way in a motor to catch a morning train at the Lake Forest station, was run into by a North Shore electric which dashed out of a thick bank of fog, is on the road to recovery. It will, however, be many a week before he will be able to use the right arm, which suffered a compound fracture and which, after being three times set, seems reluctant to do its own knitting.

The latest accident of social note, though not due to weather conditions, was that of John V. Farwell, who was run into, or who, according to bystanders, ran into a taxicab last week on Wabash avenue. He, too, is making a good recovery. In fact, the doctors are amazed at the speed with which nature is repairing the damage inflicted by that collision. His forehead was deeply cut by a blow which gave him a slight concussion of the brain. His jaw was broken and two teeth were knocked out, while his face, especially about the eyes, was much battered and bruised. Yet he has already left the hospital and returned to his home, at 229 Lake Shore drive, and has from the beginning exhibited much pluck and spirit, in spite of the seriousness of the accident.

More and more are motors and motor disasters invading the privacy and safety of our domestic life. To cross one of Chicago's crowded thoroughfares is more dangerous than to visit central Africa; for, in spite of all that is written about them, lions do not dart suddenly around corners, and they are sure to blow their horns or give a premonitory roar before leaping on their prey. The same cannot be said of Chicago motorists. Until the prison sentence is more common for those who are responsible for serious accidents, the latter will continue to increase in number and seriousness. Fines are easily paid, but a term in jail is not easily endured. It leaves a mark and a stench which all the spices of Araby cannot wipe out nor dispel. Meanwhile, Chicago illustrates the "quick or the dead" dictum: if you're not quick, you're dead.

Pavlowa, the Swan.

Chicagoans have today in their midst one of the greatest artists of this or any other time, Anna Pavlowa, the Russian dancer. To watch her dance is to experience one of the most exquisite sensations possible to the imaginative, emotional sides of our human nature.

The universe is a thing of rhythmic pulsation. From the tiniest atom to the vastest constellation everything thrills with metrical vibration.

Pavlowa is the impersonation of this life principle, the essence of it, conveyed to us with a perfection unequaled in any other art by any other person.

In private life she is Mme. Dandré, and when one meets Mme. Dandré in no way does she mar or dim the impression made by Anna Pavlowa.

The Arts club gave a luncheon in her honor last Thursday, when a numerous company paid its respects to her. Augustus Peabody presided, and at the official table were Mrs. John A. Carpenter, the club's president, and her husband, John A. Carpenter, the Adolph Bolms, the Remiseffs, Mrs. A. S. Peabody, M. Dandré, Mrs. Walter Brewster, Mrs. William R. Linn, Mrs. Joseph Long, and M. Antonin Barthelemy.

By the way, Mme. Pavlowa's company is in every way a brilliant adjunct and setting for her matchless art. Be sure to go to see her show.

Praise the Institute.

A party of Cambridge notables, who were the guests of Mrs. Waller Borden a few weeks ago, were much struck with the scope and management of our Art institute. The fact that it is largely supported by the annual dues of a membership of some 14,000 struck them as amazing. Neither the Boston Art museum nor the New York Metropolitan museum is maintained in such a civic fashion. Then the nature and variety of our exhibits struck them as being unusual and interesting. It is true we have embarked on many a side line of art that is not in the scope of other similar museums.

If you have not visited the new section of the institute which bears the name of its great president, the late Charles L. Hutchinson and is called the Hutchinson wing, you should do so promptly. It is most illuminating and full of valuable suggestions. In it is housed the valuable auxiliary of the institute, the Antiquarian society, an association of women whose mission it is to enrich the institute with rare tapestries, embroideries, old silver, furniture, laces, fabrics of all kinds and many other treasures that were not particularly in line with the paintings and sculpture which were originally the main concern of the museum. Other departments have been added to the museum since the Antiquarians became an ally, departments which might never have been assembled had it not been for the Antiquarians. These include furniture, old porcelain and glass, and other adornments incidental to equipping a house.

In the Hutchinson wing are several charming rooms illustrating different periods in adornment and furnishing. The designing and equipping of houses illustrates the history of the human race as distinctly as any parchment or written record. From the times when our ancestors stopped hanging by their tails from the trees and began to make shelters for themselves, we have gradually been telling our story by houses, pottery, chairs, tables, beds, and other furniture.

The bow legs of the chairs in the time of Louis XV. spoke the language of that luxury loving, licentious monarch as distinctly as any historian. The straight legs of the chairs and tables of the time of Louis XVI. tell wordlessly of the change in social rule from that of his notorious ancestor to the gentle, quiet, entirely virtuous king. In the same way the social life of England is told in the gradually changing forms and shapes of the furniture used by householders. The florid Jacobean beds, chairs, couches, and tables gradually gave way to the severe and classic lines of the Sheraton and Adam period.

Illustrations of all these things can be found in the Art institute and are well worth a study, especially in a town so definitely in the process of creating homes and domestic interiors as Chicago is today.

Enlightenment will in time prevent those who are evolving new and attractive interiors, from so mixing their furniture as to make a chaotic effect when with the same attention and money they could produce the delightful harmony which is achieved in a room consistently of the French or Queen Anne or colonial periods. To put together colonial and Italian chairs and tables is like setting ice cream on a bed of French salad. It creates a mental or esthetic indigestion which makes the head ache merely to contemplate.

Mine of Treasures.

That Hutchinson wing is as original as anything we have done in Chicago. In the first place, it is almost subterranean, thanks to the late Montgomery Ward's industrious guardianship of the lake front and Grant park. This guardianship enabled a law to pass forever prohibiting any further building on that stretch of land which should in any way interfere with the view of the lake from Michigan avenue. The wing includes the charming rooms of the Antiquarians and also various gift rooms, each of which is an example of some form of artistic and period furnishing and decoration.

Among the givers of these rooms are Mrs. Henry Dangler, Mrs. Waller Borden, the William G. Hibbard family and Miss Kate Buckingham. In these charming enclosures are illustrated French, Italian, Georgian, Queen Anne and Gothic periods, including the different styles of woodwork and wall treatment of those periods.

Recently the Antiquarians gave the public an opportunity of seeing an extremely rare collection of Louis XVI. tapestries, furniture, rugs, bronzes and ormulu candelabra. It was brought here from the east and had come over the water from ancient and historic chateaux and palaces. To illustrate just one item, there were two little work tables, exquisite marquetry creations, which cost in New York $3,000 each. One of the most precious things was a portrait of Louis XVI. by Drolling, painted in 1772, when the storm clouds were just beginning to gather on the distant horizon. An even more valuable picture was a picture by Louis XV.'s court painter, Herbert Drouais. I merely mention these things to show what a mine of treasures is to be found in the institute, by the constant visitor.

Notable Guests Depart.

Gen. and Mrs. Spears, who departed on Friday for Washington, left a definite void in social circles by their going. Mrs. Spears, who was a daughter of the late William Borden of Chicago and was born and raised here, had not been back to her native town for several years, and found many changes and improvements here. She made a delightful impression on all who met her. She is extremely clever and what the French call "mondaine," which is a subtly different word from our word worldly, literal translation. She knows Paris and London socially as well as historically and in a literary and artistic way.

She is working on her fourth novel and has dramatized her second one, "Jane, Our Stranger," which is now submitted to an American producer. This brilliant piece of fiction achieved a great renown in England and France, though here, for some unexplained reason, it failed to register either with the critics or the reading public. Yet it is doubtful if any American writer has created such a masterly work in the last two or three years. In style, material, and point of view it even ranks with the best that England has done in literature lately. The Spearses may come again to Chicago before returning to their home in England. They have made many friends here and been much entertained by the hospitable element in Chicago society.

Still other visitors from abroad, the Count and Countess Pierre de Jumilhac, departed lately and are now on their way motoring to California, after having dispersed all or most of the countess' household possessions, which had been stored since she and her former husband, Roy Atherton, lived here a decade or so ago. The latter is now attaché or secretary at the American embassy in London, having abandoned his original profession, architecture, for diplomacy. The Jumilhacs plan to make their main French home in the country near Soissons, where the count has an old family château and where he delights to live, raising pigs, chickens, cattle, and horses, especially race horses, of which he has a noted stable.

Speaking of raising pigs, chickens, etc., reminds me of a story the residents in Westchester county, New York, used to tell of the famous Bessie McCoy after she married the late Richard Harding Davis and settled down in that domestic and cheerful neighborhood. A Westchester county dame gave a luncheon for the new or somewhat new Mrs. Davis. The guest of honor maintained for most of the luncheon a definite silence. Finally one of the guests asked her if she liked living in the country.

She replied: "Not especially. I guess I'm a sort of failure. I was expected to raise children, chickens, and hell here, and I've done none of these things."

To Play the Princess.

Many of those who met or already knew charming Miss Carolyn Walker, who visited her sister, Mrs. Paul Welling, here last Christmas will be interested to know she has been offered and has accepted the rôle of the princess in the lovely pantomime scene in that now famous play, "Beggar on Horseback," produced by Winthrop Ames, in which Roland Young made such a hit here last autumn. She has for several years been studying dancing and dramatic expression in New York, and for her to make her debut in such an excellent company and such a classic piece is a great triumph for a young and comparatively untried young woman. The troupe is to play in Brooklyn and Boston before returning to New York.

Perhaps some of my readers may not have heard of the incident which happened to Roland Young during his Chicago engagement. He was weekending with one of the most popular and hospitable of hostesses in a well known summer resort a couple of hours' train ride from here. She arranged for him to take a late afternoon train that should have landed him in the city in ample time to appear in his rôle in the play. Having other guests, she left him on the rural platform, as the train was billed as being late. There he waited vainly. The wretched train was over two hours behind time, and those at the station were as ignorant as he as to when it would turn up and continually reassured him as to its approach.

He reached the theater too late to go on the stage, and the story runs that he had to pay $500 fine for nonappearance without due notice. The tale further is that he was going to sue the railroad for bad service. Whether he did or not I never heard, but he certainly had reason for a grouch against week-ending and suburban rail service. Five hundred dollars is rather expensive for a night in the country.

"St. Anne" Success.

Just at this moment in the erection of this Sunday p. p. p. I received word that Mrs. Arthur Aldis' play, "St. Anne," which was produced at the Lenox theater in New York last week, was a great success and that New York managers were, as it was phrased, "falling over each other and themselves" to procure the rights to produce it. She has been working hard at playwriting for the last two winters in Gotham, maintaining that the atmosphere there is more inspiring and sympathetic for this kind of work than that of Chicago. If she proves herself right as to the more advantageous air in New York many of our other would-be literati may move on, which would be a damage to Chicago.

Among the rising possibilities in our local writing fraternity is Carlos Drake. In the latest issue of the American Short Story series, "The Best Short Stories for 1924," is a capital little narrative by this young son of Chicago. It is called "The Last Dive" and was first published in the Transatlantic Review. It is little more than a sketch, but in the two and a half pages of text he paints a picture of the sensations of a public diver so vividly that long after reading it the picture of the sunshine, the blue sky, the idle, unthinking crowd, the man high up above the little shallow tank and his haunting thoughts, remains clear and definite. These American stories, studied as a whole, give a favorable impression of our contemporary short fiction and should be studied by young aspirants to this sort of literature.

In Honor of Mrs. Beyea.

Tomorrow evening at the Hotel La Salle the Chicago branch of the English Speaking union is giving a dinner in honor of Mrs. D. Pirie Beyea, who will speak after dinner on "The League of Neighbors," an interesting title and one that should produce a more than commonly interesting talk and discussion.

She is some connection of the well known Chicago family of Piries. The name is, I believe, a Scotch one. Mrs. Beyea herself is an American. She was a Red Cross nurse and nursed wounded in eighteen different countries. She was at the military hospital at Meaux at the time that Floyd Gibbons was brought there with the wound that cost him the sight of one eye.

The echoes of the world war continue to reverberate and will for many, many years throughout the civilized world. It will only become remote tradition to the children's children of today.

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Chicago Woman's Club to Gather Historical Data

By Kate Webber.

ANY departure or innovation, especially as concerns one of the foremost women's organizations in the city, is of sufficient interest to claim a special paragraph. This one has to do with the newly organized commmittee on historical research, of the Chicago Woman's club.

Realizing that valuable historical information relating to the history of Chicago and of Illinois is preserved by letters, documents, and tradition in the archives of our pioneer families, the committee was formed to collect and preserve this data while there is opportunity to procure information and collections at first hand from old settlers who are still living.

The committee gave a luncheon the latter part of January, when poems by northern and southern authors were part of the program. Slides illustrating the program had been made from old prints and magazines in possession of the commmittee, and never had been shown previously. The interest stimulated at this luncheon no doubt will lead to the establishment of the rarest and most interesting state and local collection in the community.

Mrs. John F. Gilchrist is chairman of the committee, and the other members are Mrs. John H. Buckingham, Mrs. George B. Carpenter, Mrs. John H. Coulter, Mrs. William H. Dawes, Mrs. G. Herbert Jones, and Mrs. Alice Bradford Wiles. The members will be grateful for any information about pioneer days, including family experiences lending color, as well as historic facts.

MRS. W. FREEMAN BROWN [Maizene Photo]

A card party for the benefit of the philanthropy fund of the Lake City Woman's club will be given on Wednesday at 2 o'clock at the Morrison hotel. A luncheon will precede the card party. Mrs. W. Freeman Brown is president of the club.

MRS. CARL C. BULLOCK [Moffett Photo]

Mrs. Carl C. Bullock was elected president of the Young Women's Christian association at its annual meeting on Thursday evening, when reports showed an increase of 4,000 girls who were aided by the association during the last year over previous years. Mrs. William C. Boyden, Mrs. N. W. Campbell, Mrs. Robert E. Ross, Miss Mary Newberry, and Miss M. Elizabeth True are the other officers for 1925.

MISS MARIAN LEONARD.

Miss Marian Leonard, dean of women at the University of Illinois, will speak at the annual luncheon of the Illinois Alumnae association of Chicago, to be held on Saturday at 1 o'clock at the Blackstone. Other guests will include President Kinley, Mrs. Wilmarth Ickes, and Mrs. Mary E. Busey.

MRS. FRANK F. HUMMEL [Drake Photo]

The Daughters of Indiana will sponsor the presentation of a play, "The Minerva Club," to be given on Tuesday afternoon in Recital hall, Fine Arts building. The play, to be given by the Philicon players, depicts the origin of the first woman's club ever formed in this country, and which had its beginnings at New Harmony, Ind. Mrs. Frank F. Hummel has charge of the program.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

At the general meeting of the Chicago Woman's club on Wednesday, Mlle. Berthe des Combes will speak. The week's schedule includes these department and committee sessions: Tomorrow at 10 o'clock, child welfare committee, also the family limitation committee. At 11 o'clock the social hygiene study class. At 12:15 luncheon by the education and philosophy department study class; at 1:30, bulletin committee. On Tuesday at 10 o'clock, parliamentary law class; at 10:30, house committee, also book review. Luncheon of committee on friendly cooperation to prevent war at 12 o'clock. On Wednesday at 10:30, view day at the Art institute, with Miss Lena McCauley as the speaker. At 11 o'clock, executive committee of the home and public welfare department, also motion picture committee. At 1 o'clock, municipal recreation committee, and intermediate French class. At 4 o'clock advanced French class. On Thursday at 10 o'clock, English study class, when Dr. Edwin H. Lewis will speak, meeting to be followed by luncheon. The revision committee meets on Friday at 11 o'clock. On Saturday at the same hour the better American speech committee, will hear Mrs. Harriet Taylor Treadwell and Clayton Hamilton speak. A musical program will be given at today's open door.

A meeting of the board of directors and committee chairmen of the Woman's City club will be held tomorrow at 10:30 o'clock. At 6:30 the business and professional women's unit will have its lesson in parliamentary law. On Tuesday motion pictures will be discussed at the citizenship class at 10:30 o'clock, and at 11:30 Clayton Hamilton will speak on Sheridan's "The Rivals." The food and markets committee will have a luncheon at 12:30 o'clock, with Dr. H. C. Becker as speaker. On Wednesday at 10:30 o'clock the class in parliamentary law will convene. CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans

"I FEEL mad enough to bite nails," announced the decided member, as she took a seat at the club lunch table. "Those who are always prattling about club women neglecting their families make me tired. If they'd only take the trouble to find out before they started talking——"

"All their talking points would be gone if they did," interposed the librarian.

"That's practically what I told the woman—a slight acquaintance who sat in the same seat with me coming down on the Central. She was reading an article in a local paper about a high school student who was in trouble with the school authorities, and she started in to tell me about it, and ended by blaming the whole affair on the fact that the lad's mother was a club woman.

"'If she'd spent more time with her family and less at her club, the boy would probably have turned out better,' she claimed.

"But her children are practically grown, and if she stayed at home, she'd stay alone,' I informed her. 'And, what's more,' I added, 'I happen to know that this particular woman did not join a club until her youngest child entered high school and was away from home all day.'"

"That should have jarred her views a little," voiced the librarian.

"O, I didn't stop there. I told her it was undoubtedly in spite of the fact that his mother was a club woman, and not because of it, that the lad got into trouble, for all of the women's clubs of which I know are doing their best to emphasize the ideal American home, by study and comparison, and by discussion of methods and problems, as well as by mutual help and understanding."

"That's the side of the woman's club the prattlers never seem to be able to glimpse," remarked the librarian, "especially if anything happens to go wrong in the home of a club member."

INSTALLMENT I A HINT OF ADVENTURE

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

IT was in the bleak December, that the fed gods began their insistent calling through our austere, sedate law offices, and Mr. Plummer, our senior partner, cocked his ear and listened a moment too long. The result was that he had an immediate revelation, that he must "go, go, go away from here."

He was an archeology hound, so, of course, the spots on the other side of the world at which he was overdue included Egypt, the plains of Ur—wherever there were diggings and discoveries. He had been plodding along so many years, that he felt criminal about starting off to enjoy himself without orders from a physician, or even a hovering on the verge of a nervous breakdown excuse; but, with Mr. Schlessing, myself and his own inclinations all pushing him, he gave in and made his preparations to start.

Mr. Schlessing was up to his ears in a big corporation muddle; so most of Plummer's work would devolve on me, the junior partner, and in the fortnight before he left I was kept busy going over papers and getting the hang of the various interests he represented. I had also to meet a number of his clients, who for the most part politely expressed themselves quite willing to accept me as his understudy.

Plummer came up to my desk and clapped a bony hand on my shoulder about twelve o'clock on the last morning of the old year.

"Dandridge, I've just been talking over the wire with Jerome Fosdick, and he tells me he and his granddaughter will be at the Plaza tonight to see the New Year in. He thought, if we could arrange to stop there after the show, it would be a good opportunity to meet you."

I told Plummer I was at his disposal. If the door into the unknown 1924 had swung open a little, I might not have had that pleasantly exhilarated feeling which came at the prospect of becoming the confidential adviser of Jerome Fosdick. Instead, I might have risen up and tied Plummer and bound him in a chair to keep him at home.

But the door remaining locked, I dined with him at his club, and together we attended a musical comedy. When it was over, we went on to the Plaza.

I nodded to an acquaintance or two about the dining room, and recognized Atchison, the famous criminal lawyer, who was entertaining a typically Atchisonian group. He never drops the grand manner, and he composes a supper party in a restaurant as a popular musician might compose a symphony, partly to please himself, and partly to intrigue the public. It pays to advertise.

"There's Fosdick coming in," said Plummer suddenly.

Jerome Fosdick was, like Atchison, one of New York's characters, pointed out to visitors, and ranking with the Metropolitan tower, Chauncey Depew, and the Woolworth building. He was said to be over eighty; and as he did not now go about much, I had never seen him before. I recognized his granddaughter from the pictures of her I had seen in the newspapers.

His granddaughter leaned over to say something to him. She was a slender girl, with blue black, shining hair; black lashes on an olive cheek. They swept up, and I felt an electric tingle go over me. The eyes were a light, clear gray, her grandfather's eyes. But I don't know how to describe her; I'm no word juggler. She was nothing like so pretty as some of the other women in the room; but she had individuality, a sort of a—O, well, she kept me guessing.

"Fosdick's given his order," said Plummer; "and now before it's served, you had better come over and be introduced." He got up and I followed him.

Old Jerome was genial.

He was visually stripping off all my outer habiliments, even my ease of manner, and inspecting the mechanism of my brain, psychology and emotions. A leisurely, cool and rather cruel process.

"I'm not sure that inexperience is not a better qualification for my purpose than either of your partners has to offer," he said reflectively. "You are not case hardened, in caution yet. Ah!" bowing across the room. "There is Atchison. Know him? No? I remember once, when I was coming over from the other side, he put an interesting question to a group of us in the smoking room.

"'What is the most impelling phrase in the world?' he asked. 'The one to which all hearts vibrate?' One man answered this, another that; but he shook his head, until he finally gave the answer to his own riddle. 'The most impelling phrase in the world,' he said, 'is: How would you like an adventure, with a bit of money on the side?' And, by George, he was right! How does that appeal to you, Mr. Dandridge? Adventure with a nice pot in it? Or the day's steady work, and the sure rewards of the conscientious plodder? Which?"

"I like a full meal," I said. "Work for the meat, adventure for the salad, and romance for the souffle."

Jerome Fosdick drew me down, so that Plummer couldn't hear what he said.

"Come to my house about noon day after tomorrow, and stay for luncheon. There'll be salad."

He said it so whimsically and yet pointedly, that I went back to our table with a feeling that he was seeking something more of me than purely professional advice.

(Copyright: 1925: By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow).

Dandridge rushed in, fearful that the girl he loved would be another murder victim before he could reach her . . . .

"HOW WOULD YOU like an adventure with a bit of money on the side?" One of the characters in this new daily serial of mystery and crime says that this is the most impelling phrase in the world.

SUCH, at any rate, is the keynote of Mrs. Woodrow's new novel—plenty of adventure with a pot of money in the balance. It is the most thrilling mystery story Mrs. Woodrow ever has written. A woman crook—a remarkable character of the underworld, dealing in blackmail and murder—puzzles the best skill of detectives, reporters and lawyers.

WEALTH, murder, courage and skill, detective work, reporting, police, attorneys, criminals, confessions, double-crossing, poison and torture, safe-cracking, missing jewels, romance, action and mystery make up this great tale of metropolitan life. There is a hint of adventure in the opening chapter and the action grows as the story continues. Read the start now, and you'll soon get so interested that breakfast will have to wait until you have finished the day's installment.

ART AND ARTISTS

Annual Exhibit by Artists of Chicago Is Striking Array

By Eleanor Jewett.

THERE opened last Friday at the Art institute the twenty-ninth annual exhibition by artists of Chicago and vicinity. It is a good show. The fleetest of visits will tell you that—even a visit where only snatches of pictures may be seen between and among the rotating backs of hundreds of other visitors. The artists of Chicago have done themselves proud. The present exhibit strikes as high an average in original and masterful work as any that has preceded it in these galleries.

In the first room John E. Phillips has a striking harbor scene, "Atlantic Fisher Village." The color is pure, with depth to it and quality; the composition is good; the feeling for space and beauty and yet that, too, for snugness and safety are blended together in this sunlit village on the shores of a sunlit sea.

Pauline Palmer is represented in this first room also, and Lee Hutton. Irving K. Manoir shows a beautiful landscape from the fairy tale land of New Mexico, "Aspens and Snow." Frederic M. Grant has a painting in this room, but a much more lovely one in a farther gallery, entitled "Laurie's Elephant," one of the most beautiful still lifes in the entire exhibition.

John A. Spelman has a heavenly misty landscape, "In the Smokies." It is a canvas filled with beauty and shadows and mist and blue mountains and a pink tree. Another painting by him is overflowing with the gorgeous, rich lavishness of summer, a summer of forest and stream, of birds singing and silver moons shining softly, softly on yellow stretches of forgotten sand. He calls it "On the Hudson Bay Trail."

Indiana Gyberson is represented by an exquisite, exotic little canvas, dark and intriguing as a Turkish maiden escaped from a strict harem to kneel in private splendor on a prayer mat, thanking Allah as the incense wraps thicker clouds around her. E. Martin Hennings has one of several splendid paintings in the first room. Hennings is a Chicago painter who has found his mission and himself in the Taos region and paints from year to year more beautifully and more surely.

"His Majesty," by Stark Davis, is a splendid canvas instinct with life and pride, which we come upon in a further gallery. "The Bather," by Frederick V. Poole, has lovely quality. It hints in its olive green coloring of Italy and days along the Arno. Edward B. Butler has a beautiful picture in this room, and in a far corner is one of the most perfect gems that has ever come from Wallace De Wolf's brush. It is called "Mojave Desert" and is a misty, lavender, lonely, poetic picture of the grandeur of the desert.

Gerald Frank has a rich and decorative "Floral Panel." A garden in summer captured and snared by a palette quick to see and appreciate the nuances and harmonies of blossoming plants and snatch their thousand differing shades and make of them one triumphant ode to beauty, this is the story of that most perfect floral panel.

An unusual painting illustrating the fact that all has not been discovered yet of subject matter for artists is found in "Goldfish" by Roy H. Colens. A torrent of these glittering, gay creatures stream by, their black eyes shining, their sides gleaming with red and silver and gold, perfect fish—and a perfect painting.

Charles P. Kilgore reminds one immensely of Frederic M. Grant's touch with pictures in his exquisite "Flower Market, Mexico," one of the most beautiful paintings in the exhibition. Svoboda has a stunning portrait in "Madame C." William P. Henderson deserts the loveliness of his familiar paintings with an effort toward extreme modernism in "The Cowboys and the Ladies." There is strength in this canvas and a certain quality of vigorous quality, but—it seems one can lose a great deal of good in a straining for something new.

"Nocturne," by Carl Krafft, which was awarded one of the most important prizes, is a splendid canvas. Another gorgeous thing is "Gloriously Sets the Sun," by Rudolph Ingerle. Oliver Dennett Grover has a fine piece of painting in "Going to Sun Mountain." A. J. Motley Jr. shows an amusing, decorative, agitated picture in "Syncopation." Gustave Baumann has two unusual and fascinating conceptions of events and toys of New Mexico Indian life. G. B. Sinclair has a lovely, gray, melancholy canvas in "Spring Afternoon."

Two still lifes that are remarkable for their originality and beauty are "The Hornbill and the Turtle," by Adolph Heinz, and a canvas by Constance Harley.

The most stunning piece of sculpture in the exhibition, almost the most perfect conception in either oil or sculpture, is "Forest Idyl" by Albin Polasek. Study the perfect poise of the timid deer that nuzzles its young in the cherishing arms of the woodland dryad. The feeling of sweetness, faith, fear, comradeship among wild things—the beauty of limb and muscle—this little group is a revelation of the romance of the chisel.

Prize awards in the exhibition were made as follows:

The Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal and $500 awarded to Carl R. Krafft for "Nocturne."

The Fine Arts Building Purchase prize of $500 awarded to Harry A. De Young for "In Winter."

The William Randolph Hearst prize of $300 to Mary Stafford for "Mrs. Gordon Copeland."

The Mr. and Mrs. Jule F. Brewer prize of $300 awarded to Karl A. Buehr for "Sunday Afternoon."

The Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal and $200 to A. J. Motley Jr. for "A Mulatress."

The Edward B. Butler Purchase fund of $200 to Cora B. Taylor for "August."

The Mrs. Julius Rosenwald Purchase fund of $200 to Charles A. Wilimovsky for "Lakeside Trees."

The Joseph N. Eisendrath prize of $200 to A. J. Motley Jr. for "Syncopation."

The Harry A. Frank prize of $150 to Carl R. Krafft for "Summertime."

The Municipal Art league prize of $100 to Leopold Seyffert for "Portrait of Percy B. Eckhart."

The Mrs. John C. Shaffer prize of $100 for an ideal conception in sculpture to Emory P. Seidel for "Youth."

The Business Men's Art club prize of $200 to Anthony Angeroia for "Norwegian Village."

The Englewood Woman's club prize of $100 to Jean C. Adams for "Collioure, France."

The Marshall Fuller Holmes prize of $100 to Constantino Pougiales for "The Plaster Head."

The Rogers Park Woman's club prize of $100 to Eleanor McFadden for "Head."

The Mrs. William Ormonde Thompson prize of $100 to William Owen Jr. for "Siesta."

The Chicago Woman's Aid prize of $50 to Cora Bliss Taylor for "August."

The Robert Jenkins prize of $50 to James Gilbert for "Mexican Morning."

There also opened last Friday the Chicago Society of Etchers' exhibition in the print rooms of the Art institute. This will be taken up at length next Sunday.

The thirty-eighth annual architectural exhibition will open tomorrow in Blackstone hall of the Art institute.

During the whole of this week, Feb. 1 to Feb. 7, the Art institute will be open free each day.

At the Arts club there is now an exhibition of paintings and drawings of stage settings by Nicolas Remisoff. Remisoff is a Russian and one of the prominent group of artists which includes Anisfeld, Bakst, and Roerich. His work for the Chauve-Souris is well known. He designed, too, the remarkable front drop which was used in the first program of the Bolm-Delamater Ballet Intime. His work is unusual, forceful, and colorful. Possibly the best canvas in his Arts club exhibit is "Windy Days," a remarkable thing of wind whipped clouds and trees, against a dark sky, touched with humor by the loss of a masculine hat in the foreground, and the clutch of a female hand to secure its owner's headdress.

Robert B. Harshe, director of the Art institute, has been awarded the decoration of the Cross of the Knight of the Legion of Honor by the French government for his interest in matters artistic.

Two lectures to be given in Fullerton hall of the Art institute this week are, tomorrow, "Practical Problems in the Modern Home—The Floor," by Dudley Crafts Watson, and "The Making of a Garden," by Mrs. Linn White, on Tuesday.

"Nocturne," by Karl R. Krafft, won the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal and $500 in the exhibition by artists of Chicago and vicinity, which opened last Friday at the Art institute. The institute will be open free every day this week in honor of the Chicago show. The exhibition will remain on view until March 10.

Commercially, at Least, Chicago Is the World's Music Center

IF you want to buy anything musical, from a ukulele to a set of cathedral chimes, try Chicago. This is on the authority of a radio talk by Charles H. Byrne, vice president of Stager & Sons Piano Manufacturing company. In telling of Chicago's supremacy in musical lines Mr. Byrne said:

"Chicago's 'piano row,' which has for its center the four great piano buildings on the corners of Wabash avenue and Jackson boulevard, is the world's greatest piano market.

"Chicago has the largest individual piano factories in the world, with a capacity of 180,000 pianos and player pianos per year.

"Chicago has twenty-four piano manufacturing companies, with factories in the city limits and seven companies, whose main offices are in Chicago, with factories in adjacent territory.

"Chicago built pianos have received the highest awards in this country and abroad.

"Chicago leads in the world in the manufacture of piano stools and benches.

"Chicago leads the world in the production of player rolls. Chicago made harps, violins, and brass instruments are recognized the world over for their quality and tonal superiority.

"This leadership has been accomplished in a little over half a century—a comparatively short time. Today the Chicago district comprising territory in and around Chicago is the largest musical instrument manufacturing center in the world. In it are located the largest band instrument plants, the largest stringed instrument plants, the largest drum factories, and the largest piano factories in the world.

"More banjos are made in Chicago than in any other city. The costliest banjos are produced here. Scarcely a vaudeville act of a musical kind travels that does not use instruments made in the Chicago district. Leading orchestras of the country use Chicago made equipment. The largest maker of cathedral and tower chimes in the world is located in Chicago. These chimes sell the world over. Chicago leads the country in harp production and in the quality of its harps. The modern player-piano mechanism had its birth in Chicago. Almost everything in the musical line from pianos to ukuleles is made in Chicago."

Word from Lucien Muratore tells that he has been singing at Madrid and is now at Monte Carlo, also with a hint that he may make some operatic appearances in this country, not, however, with the Chicago Civic Opera company. During the spring he will appear at the Paris Opera in a new work, "La Naissance de la Lyre," by Albert Roussel.

Nadia Boulanger, pianist, organist, and composer of Paris, will speak in English at the Chicago Woman's club rooms on Tuesday night. Her subject will be modern music and its evolution, and she will give illustrations at the piano. The Chicago Woman's club and the Musical guild are her sponsors.

Activities of Women.

During the last ten years applications by women for insurance have tripled.

In California a wife's salary is immune from her husband's use, and is legal grounds for divorce.

Maid servants in Japan are paid on an average of $5 to $6 monthly, with board, lodging and part of their wardrobe.

As financial head of the California state board of control, Mrs. Nellie B. Pierce has cut the state budget to the extent of $12,000,000.

As United States commissioner, 22-year-old Celia Cook of Clarksdale, Miss., is boss over her father, who is United States marshal.

Miss Isabel Darlington has been made receiver of a closed national bank at Parkersburg, Pa. She is an aunt of Gen. Butler, director of public safety in Philadelphia.

THE OUTLINE OF SCIENCE

EDITED BY Professor J. ARTHUR THOMSON

BY SIR OLIVER LODGE.

IF instances or samples of each or of some of the things which are said to occur are quoted in this article, it can only be by way of illustration, not as evidence of fact. For to give anything like real evidence, all manner of details of time and place must be supplied, together with confirmatory testimony and extracts from any relevant documents that may be available. So the samples here and there cited below, though based upon actual statements, may be taken as mere assertions, or at best as illustrations or types of what has to be substantiated, or else criticized and demolished elsewhere.

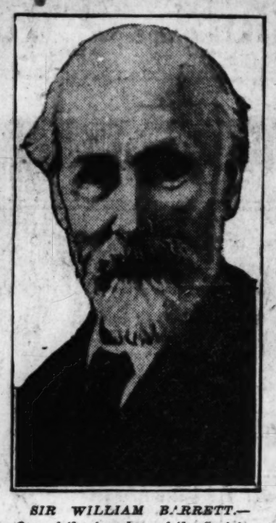
Hallucinations or Apparitions.

After experimental telepathy was fairly established, a spontaneous variety, such as had long been suspected and was the basis for innumerable stories, in history as well as in fiction, was examined and brought to book. This spontaneous kind of telepathy—analogous to spontaneous radioactivity as contrasted with the experimental excitation of X-rays—is held responsible for many apparitions or hallucinations or phantoms, whether of the living or of the dead, especially the appearance of persons then being subjected to a strong emotion, or some calamity or accident, or in imminent prospect of death. The difference between this and the experimental form of thought transference is that, whereas in an experiment the conscious attention and will power of the agent is riveted on achievement of the result—though it has hardly been proved that conscious effort is really effective—in the spontaneous class it is the unconscious mind which must be assumed to be operative, for the impression is transmitted without conscious intention and without knowledge of the supposed agent that it has been done.

Thus, let one whom we may tentatively and hypothetically regard as the agent be suffering shipwreck, or be in danger from fire; his mental constitution may be supposed so upheaved that any latent power of telepathic or sympathetic communication is evoked, and translates itself into an impression in the mind of some distant relative or friend, with such vividness that the circumstances of the person in danger are presented to the friend's imagination as if they had veritably been conveyed through the sense of sight or of hearing. A phantom in dripping clothes, or a voice in tones of distress, are as it were "seen" or "heard" by the one whom we may regard as the percipient; not with the bodily eyes or ears, but with the mind: though the mental impression may readily be interpreted as an objective reality, not as of a person at a distance but as of a person close by, so as to be accepted as within reasonable reach of the organs of sense.

As when a boy killed by a crash from the air is both seen and heard, almost immediately afterwards, by another officer sitting in the camp, and hailed and spoken to; surprise being expressed that his long journey was so soon over. The figure, which exhibited identifying details of costume, responds and goes out. In the evening the officer learns that this same youth, whom he knew intimately, had been killed by an accident on the way to his destination, at just about the time of his appearance. A much fuller account of this occurrence is in the Journal of the S. P. R. for June, 1919. But really instances of this kind are innumerable, and are often narrated in biographies.

The voice of Rochester heard by



SIR WILLIAM BARRETT.—One of the founders of the Society of Psychical Research and observer of many of the facts which have established telepathy.
[Photo: Elliott & Fry, Ltd.]

Jane Eyre at an impossible distance could not be attributed to a hyperacute sense of hearing; if it occurred in reality it would have to be attributed to a telepathic or sympathetic connection between, shall we say, kindred souls; for it is represented as a reciprocal and not a one-sided experience. Mrs. Gaskell, heard Charlotte Brontë say that it was based on an incident which had really happened.

Few families are without some such story in their archives; and all difficulties about the physical appearance of any real phantom, the dripping clothes for instance, the accompanying horse, or any wild scene generally—which cannot be thought of as an objective present reality, even if the phantom itself could so be regarded—all difficulties of this kind vanish or are reduced to insignificance when once it is realized that the whole impression is a mental one, and that the surprised percipient has automatically constructed not only the phantom itself, but a number of accessory features too, as mental imagery appropriate to and aroused by the purely mental shock or stimulus which, through his unsuspected receptive power, he has been privileged to receive.

Such cases are far too numerous for chance coincidences to explain—a fact which a most carefully conducted and hypercritical census of inquiry has established. The sensible thing for those who are out for unprejudiced truth is to accept the demonstrated fact and see if they can devise some line of explanation better than the telepathic one. For because telepathy of some kind is a plausible explanation, it does not follow that it is the true one in every case. Our aim is not to rest satisfied with what may superficially seem probable, but to ascertain what is true.

As an example of a phantasm of the living, we may take the case of a mother with a sailor son at work in the Pacific. She dreams or has a vision of him standing by her bedside in dripping clothes, accepts the omen, and subsequently mourns him as dead. Six months later he turns up alive and well, but, gradually, in response to inquiries, admits that he had run the risk of being drowned, for he had fallen from a mast into the water, and had only with difficulty been rescued. And it is maintained that the date of the accident agrees well enough with the phantasmal appearance.

Mrs. Arthur Severn being awakened by an imaginary blow on the mouth, at the same time as her husband sailing on Lake Coniston before breakfast is struck in the mouth by the swing round of the tiller, is a well authenticated case of spontaneous and unconscious telepathy.

Visions or Apparitions of the Dead.

A further step may have ultimately to be taken. Not only are phantasms of the living experienced, we find also clear records of phantoms of the dead. The two classes merge into one another, for the moment of death may be uncertain, and some latitude for delayed impression must be allowed; but undoubtedly appearances of dead people have occurred, and whether these also are to be attributed to a telepathic impression, received from a discarnate agent, remains an open question. On the whole the hypothesis of telepathy from the dead is regarded favorably by some of those competent to judge.

The standard classical instance of such an occurrence, as narrated by the poets, is the appearance of the drowned Ceyx to his beloved wife, Alcyone, and her consequent veridical conviction of his fate. The story is beautifully told, with full circumstance and vividness, in the eleventh book of Ovid's "Metamorphoses." But it is noticeable that in this instance Ceyx had been dead for some days when the phantom appears, and the poet takes it to be a messenger from the gods, assuming the form and voice of the dead man in order to convince Alcyone of the truth.

And yet telepathy, though wide in its range, does not cover all the ground. It has to be stretched considerably in order to account for many apparitions, and especially for what is called the "fixed local" ghost, that is to say, an apparition said to be encountered in association with certain houses or places with the reputation of being haunted; any stranger being said to be able to see the apparition at suitable times, even if he were ignorant of the legend and unacquainted with the traditional haunting.

The first thing is to make sure that the facts are as described, and that such persistent haunting is a reality. It seems wisest to preserve an open mind on that subject; for the evidence, though noteworthy, is not yet considered as crucial as that for the other class of phantasms—the class more readily conceived of as due to transmitted mental impression. There appears to be a certain objectivity about this fixed local ghost: there seems no obvious agent to whom to attribute a telepathic impulse; and besides, the things the ghost is sometimes said to do are hardly consistent with a mere mental impression—though certainly the hypothesis of a vivid dream on the part of the percipient must be allowed all the benefit of any doubt there may be, and the burden of proof that there is anything objective in the experience must rest upon the narrator. No need to adduce any examples; ghost stories of this class are almost too well known; they are difficult to remember in detail, though absurdly easy to invent.

Is there any rational hypothesis that can be thrown out for the explication of such phantoms as these, provided they establish themselves as facts? Does the possible independence of or unusual connection between mind and matter—the occasional freedom of the mind from the body—at all assist in such explication? On the whole, and tentatively, it does, along one or two channels.

Clairvoyance or Lucidity.

First, along the line of clairvoyance or lucidity. A critical examination of mediumistic powers has shown that occasionally they can extract information, not only from people's minds, by what we assume to be a process of telepathy—whatever that is—but also occasionally from commonplace objects. What they can decipher, for example, what is in a sealed letter or packet or read part of a page of a closed book. This "reading with the pit of the stomach," as it was long ago called, or reading with the top of the head, or with the fingers or some other part of the body, has sometimes been attributed to hyperesthesia, as if parts of the skin not usually sensitive to vital impression become so under exceptional conditions, or as if the sense of sight became incredibly penetrating and efficient. The difficulties about such a semi-physical theory are insuperable and it is better to affix the term clairvoyance or lucidity to the phenomenon without any attempt at explanation in the first instance, and continue to scrutinize intelligently the facts.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Episcopalians to Hold Convention Here This Week

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE Chicago diocesan convention of the Episcopal church, with clergy and laity and visitors present from a wide area, will be held this week in the Church of the Epiphany, Adams street and Ashland boulevard. A pre-convention dinner will be given at the Hamilton club tomorrow evening. The Rt. Rev. Sheldon M. Griswold, suffragan bishop of Chicago, and the Rev. Middleton S. Barnwell of New York, field secretary of the national church council, will be speakers. The Rt. Rev. Charles P. Anderson, bishop of Chicago, will preside.

On Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock there will be corporate communion at the Church of the Epiphany, followed by breakfast. At 10 o'clock Bishop Anderson will deliver his charge to the diocese, and business will begin. On Tuesday evening the Young People's association will be addressed by the Rt. Rev. Herman Page, bishop of Michigan, and Miss Allen M. Miller. The latter will speak about questions involved in moving picture censorship.

On Wednesday there will be the elections. Clergy and lay deputies will be elected to the general convention, which meets in New Orleans next fall and has to do with revision of the prayer book, marriage and divorce, and other subjects of national and international significance. The Girls Friendly society, the Church Mission of Help, and the Women's auxiliary will all have a place in the convention.

A movement for a closer affiliation of Jews and Christians has been indorsed by the federal council of the churches of Christ in America and approved by the Chicago Church federation. There is to be an exchange of professors in Christian and Jewish theological seminaries, and an exchange of articles on religious subjects in Christian and Jewish religious journals. The purpose is stated to be a desire to understand each other better and to learn to coöperate in religious and reform activities where there is found to be a working agreement.

Dr. A. S. C. Clarke, former pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, Evanston, has taken charge of the stewardship campaign of the Presbyterian denomination, with headquarters in the Chicago temple. He has agreed to serve as executive secretary until March 31.

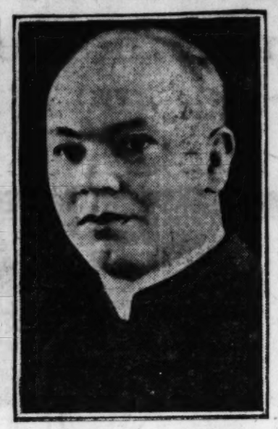
THE RT. REV. HERMAN PAGE, D. D.

The Rt. Rev. Herman Page, bishop of Michigan of the Episcopal church, will be the chief speaker among the visitors outside the diocese in attendance upon the Chicago diocesan annual convention, which will be held beginning Tuesday morning at the Church of the Epiphany, Adams street and Ashland boulevard. Bishop Page is well known in Chicago as the rector for fourteen years of St. Paul's church, 1906-1914. He is a graduate of Harvard university, '88; Episcopal Theological school, Cambridge, Mass., '91, and received the degree of doctor of divinity from the University of Pittsburgh, '06. He was consecrated bishop of Spokane, Wash., in January, 1914, and bishop of Michigan in 1923. His home is in Detroit.

Jubilee services in connection with the payment of all indebtedness on the Washington boulevard Methodist Episcopal church, Washington and Austin boulevards, Oak Park, will be concluded today with a sermon at 11 o'clock by the pastor, the Rev. Bertram G. Swaney, and at 7:30 p. m. with a sermon by Dr. Horace G. Smith, district superintendent.

At the First Lutheran church, Fullerton avenue and Ballou street, Mrs. Mildred Romsdahl-Bruns will give a sacred concert this evening at 8 o'clock. It is to be a decidedly unique and unusual musical production.

Next Thursday will be the eighty-eighth anniversary of the world famous evangelist, the late Dwight L. Moody, who died twenty-five years ago. The Moody Bible institute and the Moody church will recognize the anniversary with services.



THE REV. JAMES J. HORSBURGH.
[Lavecchia Photo.]

The Rev. James J. Horsburgh, whose appointment was announced on Tuesday by his eminence, Cardinal Mundelein, is the archdiocesan director of the Confraternity for the Propagation of the Faith. Father Horsburgh was born in Westport, County Mayo, Ireland. He received his education in the Chicago parish schools and graduated with the first class from the Cathedral college, the forerunner of Quigley Preparatory seminary. Since his ordination in 1916 he has been serving at Holy Name cathedral as assistant to the Rt. Rev. Mgr. M. J. FitzSimmons, V. G. E. His friends predict for him an unusually successful career as the archdiocesan director of the Confraternity for the Propagation of the Faith, as Father Horsburgh is a most energetic and active young man with distinct abilities of organization and direction.

Bishop Edwin H. Hughes of the Chicago area of the Methodist Episcopal church will be the principal speaker at the fifth annual banquet of the Embassy club of the Methodist book concern at the Parkway inn next Friday evening. Irving Kelly, president of the club, will preside. Other speakers will be the Rev. W. F. J. Gratz, the Rev. J. H. Race, and O. G. Markam.

Contracts have been let for the construction of the St. James Methodist Episcopal church at 46th street and Ellis avenue. The new church will replace the one destroyed by fire and will cost $500,000. It will be built of stone with all facilities for carrying on the work of a modern church. Dr. W. R. Wedderspoon is pastor, Dr. A. H. Andrews, chairman of the building committee, and Albert W. Harris president of the board of trustees. Until the new church is ready the St. James congregation will continue to worship in the former Oakland church, Oakwood boulevard and Langley avenue. The Oakland congregation has merged with St. James. The contracts call for the completion of the new building by April, 1926.

His eminence, Cardinal Mundelein, presided at a noteworthy gathering on Tuesday at the Quigley Preparatory seminary. It was the occasion of his announcement to more than 300 pastors of the archdiocese of a practical plan to unify all the forces working in America for the cause of missions, home and abroad. His eminence, Cardinal Mundelein, secured the approval of the holy father last spring, who graciously granted certain spiritual favors to its benefactors. The announcement was the establishment in the archdiocese of a Confraternity for the Propagation of the Faith, the director, the Rev. James J. Horsburgh, who will give all his time to the work of mission explanation, organization, and direction, with offices and helpers, plans yet to be developed.

The archdiocesan director will report directly to the Mission Board of America, consisting of his eminence, Cardinal Mundelein; Cardinal Hayes of New York, Cardinal Dougherty of Philadelphia, Archbishop Harty of Omaha, and Bishop Boyle of Pittsburgh. This committee will send contributions for foreign missions direct to the Congregation of the Propaganda Fidei, Rome, while the Catholic Church Extension society will care for the distribution of funds for home missions. Both home and foreign missions will be provided for out of the one general fund.

An annual feast day is to be arranged, to be called "Mission Sunday," on which there will be the only collection of the year for the missions, and thus Mission Sunday will be an event in Catholic churches in the future. Both adults and children are to be organized, branches are to be established in each parish with local directors and parish promoters in this progressive plan for the aid of missions.

The American Unitarian association is preparing to celebrate its centennial in May. Five British Unitarian ministers are coming to America to assist in the celebration. Sir Rabindranath Tagore, Hindu poet and lecturer, is expected to attend as a representative of the Brahmo Samaj of India.

The twenty-second annual convention of the Religious Education association with a national membership, founded in Chicago and with its headquarters here at 308 North Michigan avenue, will be held in Milwaukee, Wis., April 22-25. The general subject will be "Religious Education and Religious Experience."

Relief
For pain—quick

The worst pains people suffer can be relieved at once. Rheumatic pains, soreness, backache, cold in chest, etc.

Rub the sore spot with red pepper. Nothing else supplies such concentrated, such penetrating heat. And heat that doesn't hurt.

You feel it instantly. In three minutes that heat penetrates to the depths. Circulation starts, congestion is relieved. The pain and the soreness depart.

People used to use plasters, mustard and liniments. But modern science has found a better way, a quicker, more efficient way, a way without objections.

Don't suffer pains which Red Pepper Rub relieves almost at once. Don't let cold in the chest go neglected. Have this rub at hand—get it now. The time will come when its quick relief will mean much to someone in your home.

Red Pepper is saving millions of painful hours. Let it save them for you and yours.

THE NEW MORRISON HOTEL

To Be the Largest and Most Reasonably Priced on Earth

The New Morrison, when completed, will be the world's largest and tallest hotel, with 3,400 rooms

THE 850 new rooms to be added to the Morrison on the Clark St. frontage—400 in the tower, all practically without ground rent—will give a far wider range to the hotel's traditional policy of renting rooms for $3 to $5 that would cost $5 to $8 elsewhere. The Morrison's new "sky lease," therefore, will greatly extend the advantage derived by travelers from the valuable store subleases which pay all the rent.

There are at present 1,054 outside rooms, each with bath, but ultimately there will be 3,400, making the Morrison the largest and tallest hotel on earth.

The Morrison is the home of the Terrace Garden, "Chicago's Wonder Restaurant," famous internationally for sparkling entertainments and perfect cuisine and service. Among the artists engaged for the week beginning Monday, February 2, are the following:

The February Sale of Silks

This, our 50th February sale of silks by the yard, introduces all the standard fabrics as well as the colorful new printed crepes and corded silks at prices well below the usual markings.

12,500 yards of newest silks, special at 2.90

Here is variety
—variety in fabrics that are offered at this extremely low price: bengalines, failles, Bayadere stripes, radiums, charmeuse, Jacquard brocades, crepe de chines, and satin, canton, flat, or novelty plaided crepes.

Here are colors
—a blaze of all the gayest, softest colors as well as black or white. The 40-inch widths and the varied weaves of these all-silks recommend them for gowns of every type; colorful scarfs, new tunics, and ensemble costumes.

Tropical wash crepe, 2.65 is one of the most successful of sports fabrics, because it is so pliable and because its bright, broad-line stripes wash perfectly. Width 32 inches.

40-in. faille bengaline, 3.15
This is an unusual quality with a distinctly corded weave and a worsted filling which adds weight and strength. In all of spring's new colors and black.

32-in. washable silks, 1.65

Real estate holds a fascination for many men who would enjoy a chance to put their finances to maintain themselves until they produced.

Realizing that we have lost many men of exceptional ability, due to this reason, we have evolved a financing plan whereby EVERY salesman in our employ will receive a cash remuneration from time to time upon a bonus arrangement, REGARDLESS OF WHETHER HE PRODUCES SALES OR NOT, this money not to be charged against future earnings. NO STRINGS TO THIS OFFER EXCEPT we will be more than ordinarily particular as to the type of man we will employ. The inexperienced man will be given complete schooling and training. We also desire to avail ourselves of the services of experienced men who realize the advantage of this financing plan in connection. A SPECIAL INDUCEMENT WILL BE MADE TO MEN WITH THEIR OWN CARS. Hupmobile Confidence

Our record of 12 years' standing for fair dealing has firmly established this concern in the CONFIDENCE of Chicago's used car buying public.

Our policy in selling used cars has been the nucleus of our success in gaining such CONFIDENCE.

OUR POLICY

TRUTH, just a plain, candid statement of facts, is required of every member of our organization.

We will not exchange our honor for your money.

CONFIDENCE is the basis of all trade, with mutual satisfaction to both buyer and seller.

How foolish, then, it would be to destroy that confidence by urging you to buy a car that is not right!

Buy now!—with CONFIDENCE.

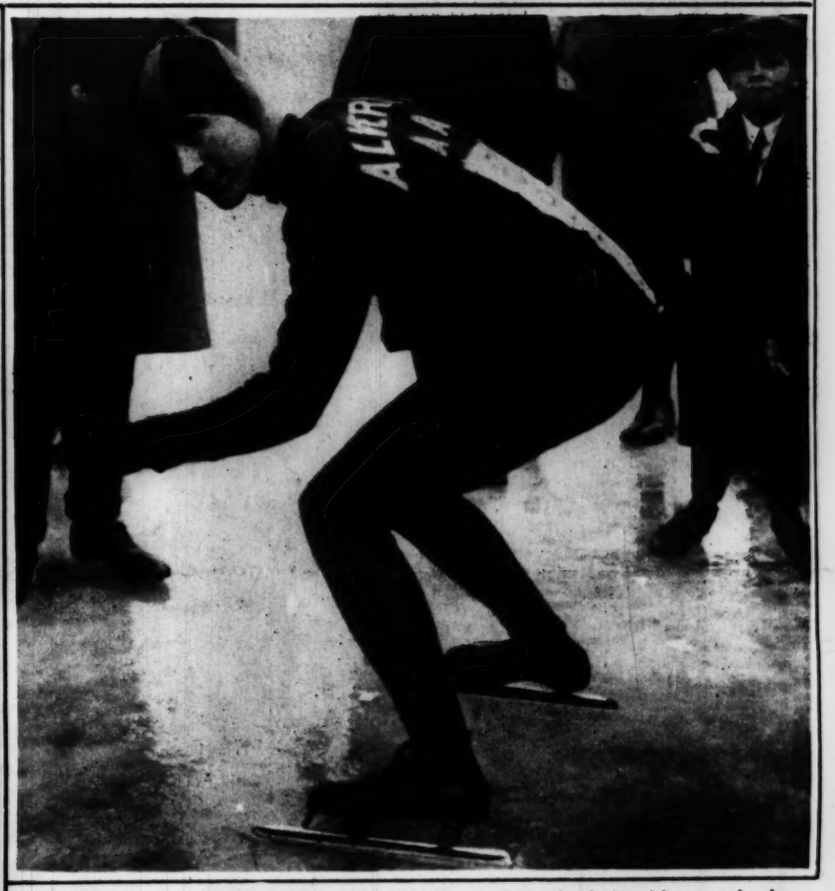
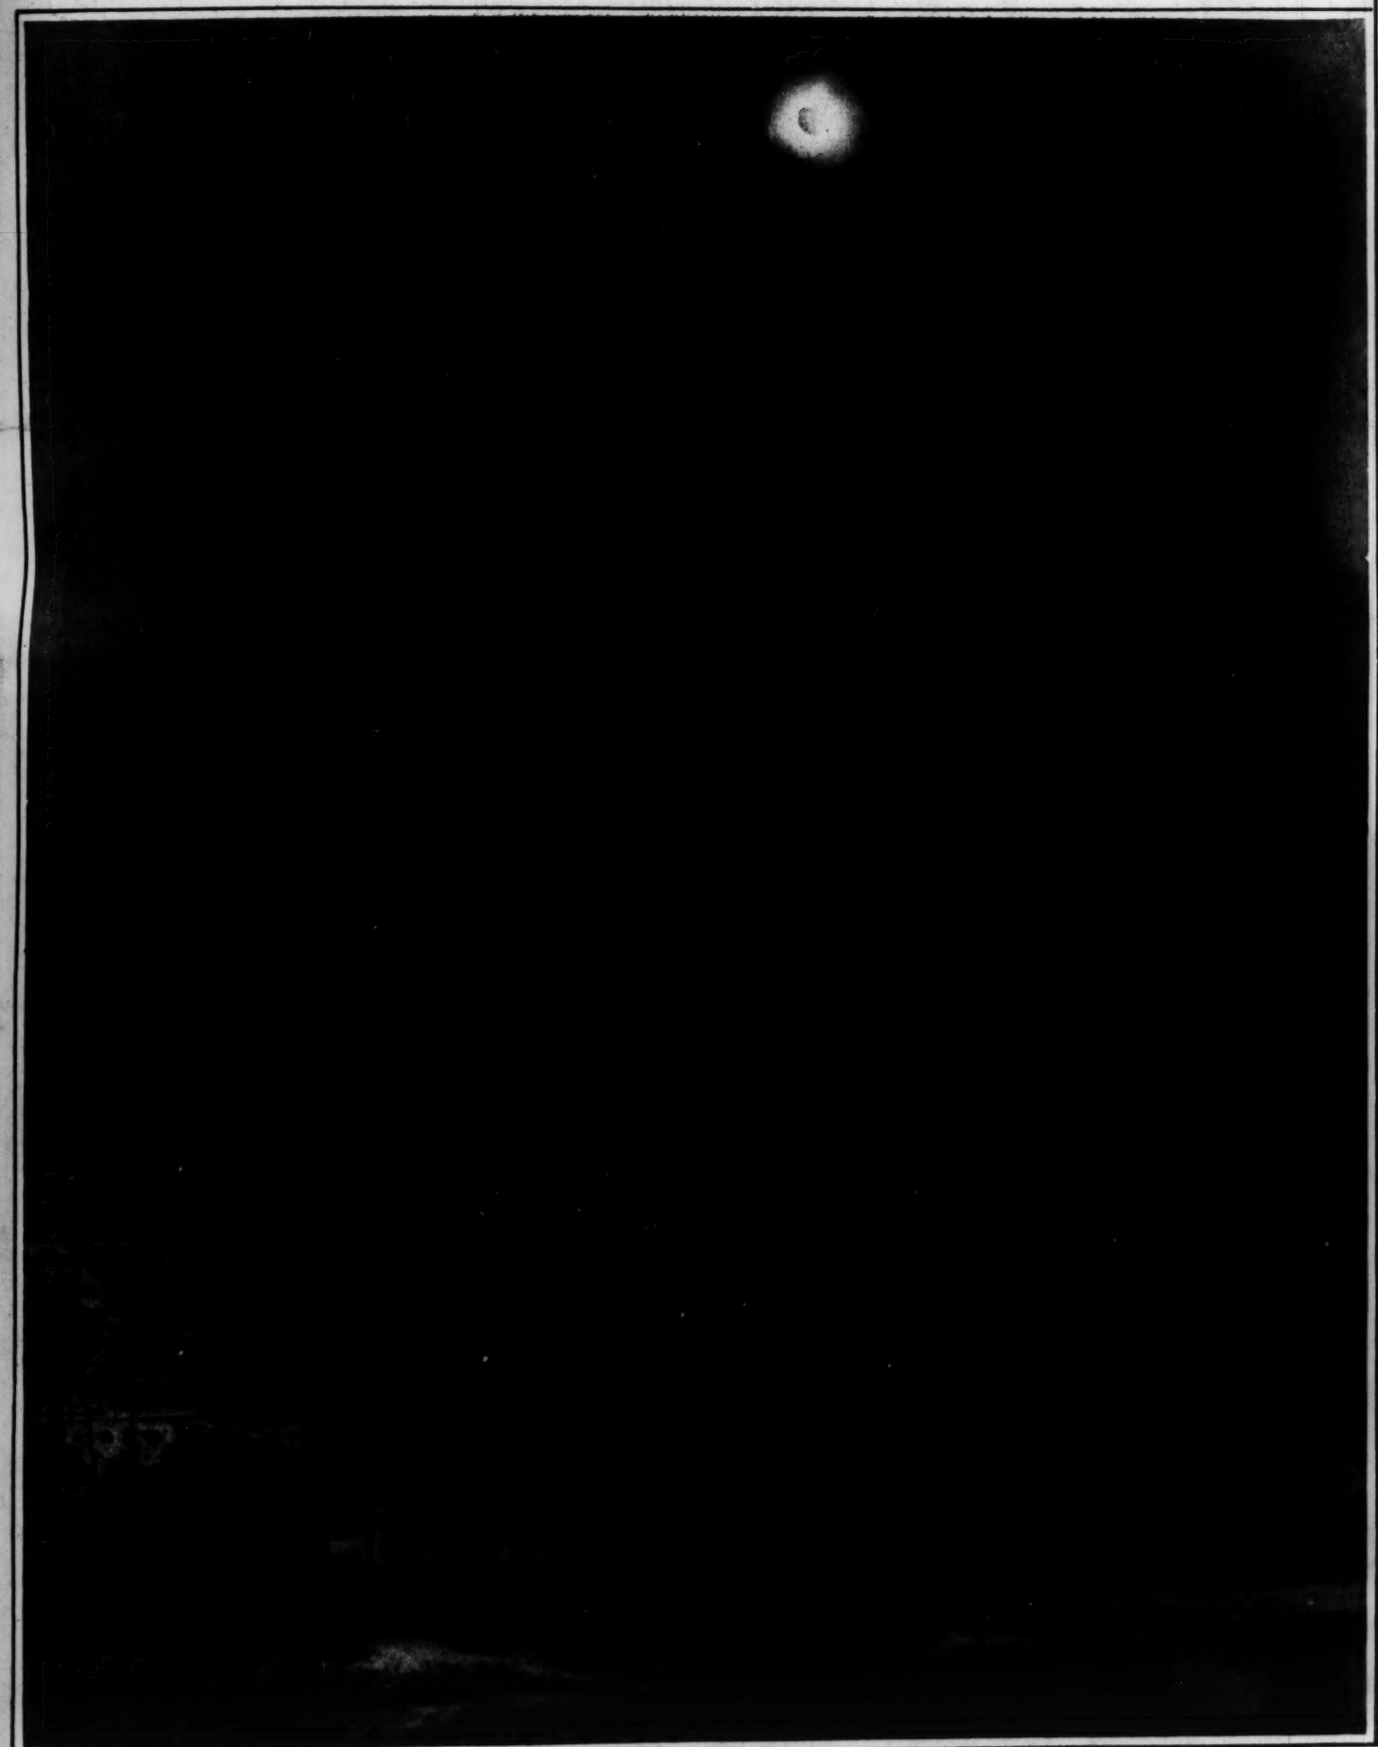
45,000 SPECTATORS WATCH THE SILVER SKATES DERBY at Garfield park. The Tribune's annual ice carnival last Sunday attracted the greatest sports gathering of years in Chicago. The crowd was packed many deep all around the great lagoon of the west side park. Far back from the track the late comers were scattered, seeking any vantage point from which to catch even a fleeting glimpse of the ice flyers. Some of the best skaters of this country and Canada were among the contestants, for The Tribune's tournament has grown to be one of the greatest of skating events. (TRIBUNE photograph.)



SILVER SKATES CHAMPION, Oneil Farrell of the Alverno A. A. of Chicago. Farrell won the famous trophy by skating the two mile final at Garfield park last Sunday in 7:06 1-5. (TRIBUNE photograph.)



NEW YORK'S VIEW OF THE ECLIPSE was all but perfect, as photographs of the phenomenon will attest. This one was taken from the Manhattan side of the high bridge, looking southeast. Clear skies gave the cameras a wonderful chance to record the rush of the moon across the sun's path. Through the darkness which shrouded the city myriads of lights blazed forth like twinkling stars, lending a fairyland aspect to the awed metropolis. (Photograph from Wide World.)

THE ECLIPSE ON THE WATER, with a ship riding in New York bay. The obscured sun cast an eerie glow upon the waters, painting a picture that would serve perfectly as a master artist's conception of a moonlit night at sea. Here the camera caught in uncanny detail the clouding of the sun's surface. (Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)

MRS. MALAPROP IS BACK—You'll find her tomorrow night at the Illinois theater in the person of Mrs. Fiske. The famous actress is coming with a notable cast in an anniversary revival of Sheridan's comedy of eighteenth century manners, "The Rivals." The play seems well on the way to immortality, for it is now one hundred and fifty years back since it was introduced to the stage. Our scene shows Mrs. Fiske disturbing Sir Anthony Absolute (Thomas A. Wise) with her oddly humorous misuse of the king's English. (Photograph from White studio)

ZERO IN SKATING COSTUMES, we'd call this, but Miss Ida Schnall says it's the ideal outfit for winter sports. Miss Ida believes that the more air and sunshine the body gets while one is exercising, the better it is for one's health. If that's true, she ought to be the healthiest girl in the world, one would judge from her garb here. Miss Schnall has won some fame as an all-around athlete, and she seems as much at home on the steel ice blades as she is on the running track or in the water. (Photograph from International)

THE PRESIDENT'S NEW SECRETARY, Congressman Everett Sanders. The Indiana representative will succeed the immortal C. Bascom Slemp when the latter retires on March 4. Mr. Sanders has been in congress since 1917. He refused to seek another term at the last election, planning to return to private law practice, but Mr. Coolidge has persuaded him to continue in public service. INDOOR POLO CHAMPIONS—These Cincinnati riders won the intercity tournament which dedicated Chicago's new Riding club at Erie street and McClurg court. At the left is A. G. Grannis, referee of the tourney. The players are O. De Gray Vanderbilt, C. R. Farmer, and T. B. Manuel. The Ohio horsemen rode off with the title by defeating the Chicago trio in a hard-fought final, 14 goals to 9½. Six cities besides Cincinnati sent teams here for the games, the others being Brooklyn, New York, Detroit, Newark, Cleveland, and Philadelphia. (TRIBUNE photograph)

A GRAND DUKE OF OLD RUSSIA, the famous Boris, comes to the United States with his wife to play a bit at our winter resorts. Boris is a brother of Grand Duke Cyril, who has proclaimed himself Czar of Russia, and whose wife, the Grand Duchess Victoria Feodorovna, was a recent visitor in America. Immigration officials delayed the landing of Boris and his grand duchess, but our picture proves they greeted New York with a smile despite the inconvenience.

CHICAGO'S RADIO SISTERS at Palm Beach with their mother, Mrs. Charles Erbstein. Their daddy named his two radio stations in honor of his daughters. Olivia probably gets a thrill out of listening in to WTAS, her own Villa Olivia station; and Charlene undoubtedly is quite proud when the announcer proclaims: "This is WCEE, the Charlene station." Mr. Erbstein likes to do the announcing himself, and we'll bet his family has a lot of fun down in Florida just tuning in and hearing papa's voice boom out on them from the loud speaker. Gosh, when one thinks of it, radio surely is wonderful, isn't it?

THIS IS THE DAY OF PREVENTION. Today, danger is marked wherever it exists—on railroads and highways, on land and on sea. Civil officials, as well as medical and dental authorities, are designating Danger Lines that demand our constant respect and attention.

Sensitive teeth warn of Acid Decay at THE DANGER LINE

SENSITIVE teeth are a warning. Be careful. Use every means to prevent decay and infection, especially at that vital point, The Danger Line.

It is at The Danger Line, in the tiny V-shaped crevices where teeth meet gums, that food particles lodge and ferment. Acids form which sooner or later destroy the tooth structure. Decay gradually begins. The gums frequently become irritated and sore. Conditions favorable to Pyorrhea may develop. Serious disease, such as rheumatism, heart and kidney trouble, often results from the infection due to Acid Decay. Even very weak acid conditions at The Danger Line will cause trouble if neglected.

Your dentist will tell you that Milk of Magnesia is a safe, scientific means of counteracting acids which attack the teeth and irritate the gums. Squibb's Dental Cream is made with Squibb's Milk of Magnesia.

Cross-section of a tooth showing decay at The Danger Line.

Use it regularly . . . morning and night . . . and you can prevent Acid Decay, allay sensitiveness and lessen the peril of Pyorrhea. You can strengthen tender gums and promote a hygienic condition of the entire mouth. You can keep your teeth clean—safely. No dental cream can do more.

You will like Squibb's Dental Cream because it is pleasant to use. It is a wonderful dentifrice for children. They like it. It will help mother teach them the habit of brushing their teeth regularly. Buy Squibb's Dental Cream, made with Squibb's Milk of Magnesia—today. At druggists everywere.

The Little Widow

By W. E. Hill

Half mourning. When she says, "O, I did see such a good looking traffic policeman today—there are such fine looking men around these days!" it will soon be half mourning no longer. The little widow is beginning to take notice again.

You've all heard of the golf widow, haven't you? Well, then, meet the golf widower. He has the misfortune to live near the links, and his wife, who needed to drop a few pounds, has taken up golf. O, the sad, sad life of these indoor men who marry outdoor girls.

The helpless widow. Met with on the ocean liners and Cook's tours in the Holy Land. Hates to look at a view alone. Needs a big, strong man to point things out for her. The helpless widow is particularly helpless about checking baggage.

And this is the widow's mite. "Mother, please get a lipstick, and pull your hair out at the sides—" cries the widow's only daughter. Keeping up with an only daughter is a hard job in these modern times.

The placid widow is contented with her lot; no more husbands! She's buried two, thank you. The first had neurasthenia, and the second used to eat crackers in bed.

The grass widow from Hollywood with five husbands in the background. "Never again," she tells the reporters, but we know better.

The business widow. Some go in for tea rooms, others for interior decorating, and those who are especially intrepid open gift shops and sell Italian antiques at triple the factory prices.

The slight estrangement. Some sort of legal separation, but no divorce makes her a widow at heart only. Very popular with college boys and not so popular with their careful mammas.

The little widow who looks so well in black. Mourning weeds will be permanent in her case.

A CHICAGOAN AT THE COURT OF ST. JAMES—J. G. Masaryk, son of the president of Czecho-Slovakia and newly appointed minister from his country to England, with Mrs. Masaryk, formerly Frances Crane Leatherbee, daughter of Charles R. Crane of Chicago. They were sailing from New York after a visit to America when this farewell picture was taken.

MORE DIPLOMATS—Edgar A. Bancroft of Chicago, the new ambassador from the United States to Japan, at the embassy in Tokio with Ambassador Matsudaira, the recently appointed envoy of Japan to Washington. The Japanese ambassador will sail next month to assume his new post.

Pyorrhea is a disease of the gums—not the teeth

That's one outstanding fact everybody should know. And if everybody did know it, the number of Pyorrhea's victims would soon be greatly reduced.

You may take splendid care of your teeth—brush them several times a day—and still get Pyorrhea. Once Pyorrhea secures a firm hold, pus pockets form, gums become weak and flabby, the teeth loosen and fall out no matter how white and sound they may be.

Forhan's means healthy gums

It contains the right proportion of Forhan's Astringent, as used by the dental profession in the treatment of Pyorrhea. Forhan's protects and preserves the gums, keeping them in a firm, pink, healthy condition; cleans and whitens the teeth, and keeps the mouth sweet, fresh and wholesome. If you don't care to discontinue the tooth paste you are now using, at least brush your teeth and gums once a day with Forhan's.

Forhan's is more than a tooth paste; it checks Pyorrhea. Thousands have found it beneficial for years. For your own sake ask for Forhan's For the Gums. All druggists, 35c and 60c in tubes.

TO THE COURT OF ST. JAMES goes Alanson Bigelow Houghton, who has served Uncle Sam since 1922 as American ambassador to Germany. He moves over to London to replace Ambassador Frank B. Kellogg, who comes home to assume the secretary of state's toga which Charles Evans Hughes is about to resign. Mr. Houghton is a native New Englander. He was elected to congress twice from his New York home.

A MAN O' WAR GETS ITS ANNUAL BATH at Hunter's Point, San Francisco. It's just like a tub, this drydock arrangement wherein the U. S. S. Tennessee is parked for its yearly overhauling. The Tennessee is one of Uncle Sam's first line battleships, a giant sea battler of 32,300 tons. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND'S SON WINS A PRETTY BRIDE, Miss Alice Erdman, daughter of a Presbyterian pastor at Princeton, N. J. Francis Grover Cleveland is the youngest son of the late President. OFF FOR THE ORIENT and new adventures goes John T. McCutcheon, The Tribune's famous cartoonist. John is having a good time here on the liner bound for Hawaii. He's showing Mrs. McCutcheon how a movie camera works. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

JESSICA, THE FOLLIES COUNTESS, learns to glide smoothly over the snows of St. Moritz with her titled husband, the youthful Earl of Northesk. Jessica Brown and her Scotch nobleman were married in Chicago two years ago. Many columns of publicity marked their union, chiefly because the show girl had divorced Cyril de Witt Reinhard, a civil engineer, shortly before she married the earl. (Photograph from Wide World.)

EAST AND WEST JOINED in a marriage that provided a sensation for staid Washington society. The bride was Miss Margaret Hume, daughter of an old and aristocratic family of the capital. Her husband is Abdullah Entezam, first secretary of the Persian legation. The pair slipped off to Alexandria, Va., and were married without inviting either the bride's family or any member of the Persian staff in Washington.

THE KING OF SPAIN ISN'T CONCERNED about his lineage. Between him and extinction of the royal line there are four strapping princelets, to say nothing of a couple of princesses. In this family group are Princess Beatrice, Prince Jaime, Queen Victoria, Prince Alfonso, Princess Maria Christina, and, in front, Prince Gonzalo and Prince Juan. Alfonso, the eldest and heir-apparent, is 18 years old; Juan, the youngest, was 10 last October.

Lemon for The Hair

The Finest Rinse—By Helene Chadwick

"NEXT time you wash your hair, whether bobbed or long, rinse with the juice of two California lemons in a basin of water, as I do.

"Soap forms a curd which stays on the hair, no matter how frequently you rinse it with plain water. The hair is sticky in comparison, not really clean, when lemon isn't used. The curl comes out.

"Take my advice and try it, and then simply feel the hair. Note, too, its lustrous, fine appearance. See how the curl stays in it. One experience like mine and you'll always use the California lemon rinse as thousands do, including all the better 'Beauty Shops' where moving picture artists go. They know its value. This rinse is most effective, and is harmless."

ONE SHOT finished this man-killer. His knell was sounded by Capt. Eli Laird of Cœur d'Alene, Idaho, champion cougar hunter of the west, who is shown toting in his 200 pound specimen. It is believed this great cat killed and devoured a 13 year old boy recently in the wilds north of Spokane, Wash. The pelt is the twenty-third on Capt. Laird's string. Keep your teeth shining and safe—with Pebeco

WHEN your Mouth Glands dry up -teeth inevitably decay

The only way to protect the teeth successfully is to keep the mouth glands flowing normally

Dentists say that practically no mouth today is normally moist and safe for teeth.

Modern cooked foods, too soft, too quickly swallowed, do not require enough chewing. From sheer lack of exercise your mouth glands dry up.

Instead of protecting your teeth with their alkaline fluids as nature intended, these glands leave your whole mouth dry—your teeth defenseless against the acids that cause decay.

By harsh scouring and washings you can keep your teeth white. But never safe from decay. Five minutes after brushing the acids form again.

Dentists now recognize that there is only one way to keep teeth both white and safe.

Today you can successfully counteract the cids of decay with a tooth paste that restores the normal flow of the mouth glands.

* * *

Pebeco acts directly on the salivary glands. As soon as it enters your mouth it starts a full, normal flow of alkaline saliva. With constant daily use Pebeco completely restores the natural, protective action of your glands. Their alkaline fluids again bathe your teeth day and night. The acids of decay are neutralized as fast as they form.

Pebeco leaves your gums clean and soothed—your whole mouth, normal and healthy. And in this healthy mouth, your teeth are kept not only white and shining, but safe.

How to Go to Sleep at Night

A Simple Way to Secure the Sound Sleep that Keeps You Young in Looks and Spirit

"Picks You Up" while you sleep. Make this test. See what 3 days will do.

Most women spend seven or eight hours in bed each night. But how many get seven or eight hours real sound, restful sleep?

Sleeplessness!

How common it is. What toll it takes. In health. In vitality. In appearance and energy.

Those logy mornings, those languid afternoons. Those laggard eyes and tell-tale wrinkles. They usually come from restless, fitful sleep.

And to what is sleeplessness due? Chiefly to overstrained nerves and digestive unrest. Yet both of those conditions in most cases are easily corrected! It's mainly a matter of getting into the work-exhausted body the proper nourishment in the proper form.

What to Eat to Sleep

During the day you are constantly drawing on your bodily strength and vitality. You've got to take into your body certain food-elements that are restoring and upbuilding.

Your diet as a housewife or woman-worker should have (1) high energy value, (2) contain protein, carbohydrate, fat, vitamines and mineral elements of a certain kind and proportion, (3) be easily digested.

"But," you will say, "how am I to know which foods contain these properties? Admittedly, no layman can be expected to select his or her foods according to these elements. But—in this day no layman has to!

A Swiss discovery in foods makes it possible for everyone to get in the form of a single delicious beverage exactly the food-essentials the body requires.

A Swiss Food Discovery

The name of it is Ovaltine. It has been in use in Switzerland for 30 years. It is now in universal use in England and its colonies, and during the great war was included as a standard war ration for invalid soldiers. Today Ovaltine is known to 20,000 physicians as well as hundreds of hospitals in this country.

Ovaltine is also a wonderful strength-building drink for tired women and backward children.

Ovaltine supplies what your modern daily fare lacks. It gives you several vital foods in the form of one. It is a highly concentrated extract of certain vitalizing and building-up foods converted by a secret Swiss process. One cup of Ovaltine contains more real food value than 12 cups of beef extract.

A cup at night (mixed with milk) brings sound sleep for the night, quickly and naturally. This is why: Ovaltine is both highly and quickly nourishing. It not only digests itself quickly, but also other foods which may be in your stomach. Ovaltine has the power to digest 4 to 5 times its own weight of other foods. This quick assimilation of nourishment is restoring to the entire body. Nerves are quieted. Digestion goes on efficiently. Sleep comes. Sound, restful sleep. And as you sleep, your body is gathering strength and energy.

In the morning you awaken, looking and feeling years younger. You are a new being for a new day. Alive with energy to carry you buoyantly through the day.

Many take a cup of Ovaltine two or three times a day for its natural stimulation. It's truly a "pick up" drink, putting new blood into your veins a few minutes after drinking.

Of course, Ovaltine is a particularlyy fine food for nursing mothers, convalescents, backward children and the aged.

Send for 3-Day Test

Drug stores sell Ovaltine in 4 sizes for home use. But to let you try it we will send a 3-day introductory package for 10 cents to cover cost of packing and mailing. Just send in the coupon with 10 cents in stamps. The Wander Company, Dept. 6215, 37 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

OVALTINE

My husband has had trouble sleeping for more than a year. He sleeps soundly all night now and is full of "pep" and feels fine. I am very glad we discovered Ovaltine.

"Ovaltine" certainly works wonders. I can vouch for it and I take great pleasure in spreading the "good word." It has given me my first restful night's sleep in three years.

"SHINE?" yelled the bootblack, and Alice Terry, Huntley Gordon, and Evelyn Pierce promptly responded to the cry.

BELOW PAR··?

from Constipation, Lowered Vitality, Skin and Stomach Disorders? Boundless energy in this simple fresh food!

THESE remarkable reports are typical of thousands of similar tributes to Fleischmann's Yeast.

There is nothing mysterious about its action. It is not a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense. But when the body is choked with the poisons of constipation—or when its vitality is low so that skin, stomach and general health are affected—this simple, natural food achieves literally amazing results.

Concentrated in every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast are millions of tiny yeast-plants, alive and active. At once they go to work—invigorating the whole system, clearing the skin, aiding digestion, strengthening the intestinal muscles and making them healthy and active.

Dissolve one cake in a glass of water (just hot enough to drink) before breakfast and at bedtime. Fleischmann's Yeast when taken this way is especially effective in overcoming or preventing constipation. Or eat 2 or 3 cakes a day—spread on bread or crackers—dissolved in fruit juices or milk—or eat it plain.

Fleischmann's Yeast for Health comes only in the tinfoil package—it cannot be purchased in tablet form. All grocers have it. Start eating it today! You can order several cakes at a time, for Yeast will keep fresh in a cool, dry place for two or three days.

Write for further information, or let us send you free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Address: Health Research Dept. 682 The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington St., New York.

Above

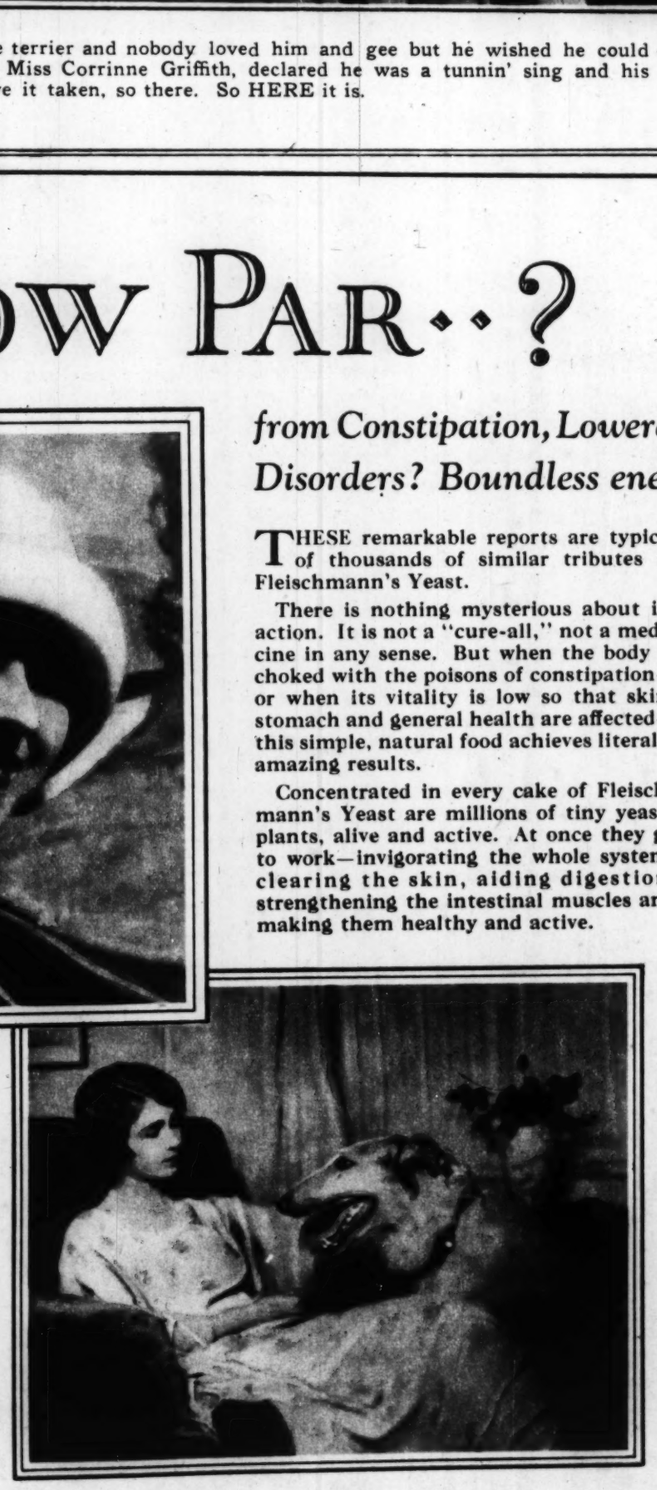
"FIVE years ago I could answer to the description of the 'rundown, nervous, suffering woman' in the patent medicine ads. My sallow complexion was my greatest worry and I was always troubled with constipation. . . . Two years ago I learned from the girls in the office to eat Fleischmann's Yeast. Today I am frequently complimented on my fresh complexion and told I don't look more than twenty-two. I still have one incurable habit—half a cake of Fleischmann's Yeast daily with a glass of milk."

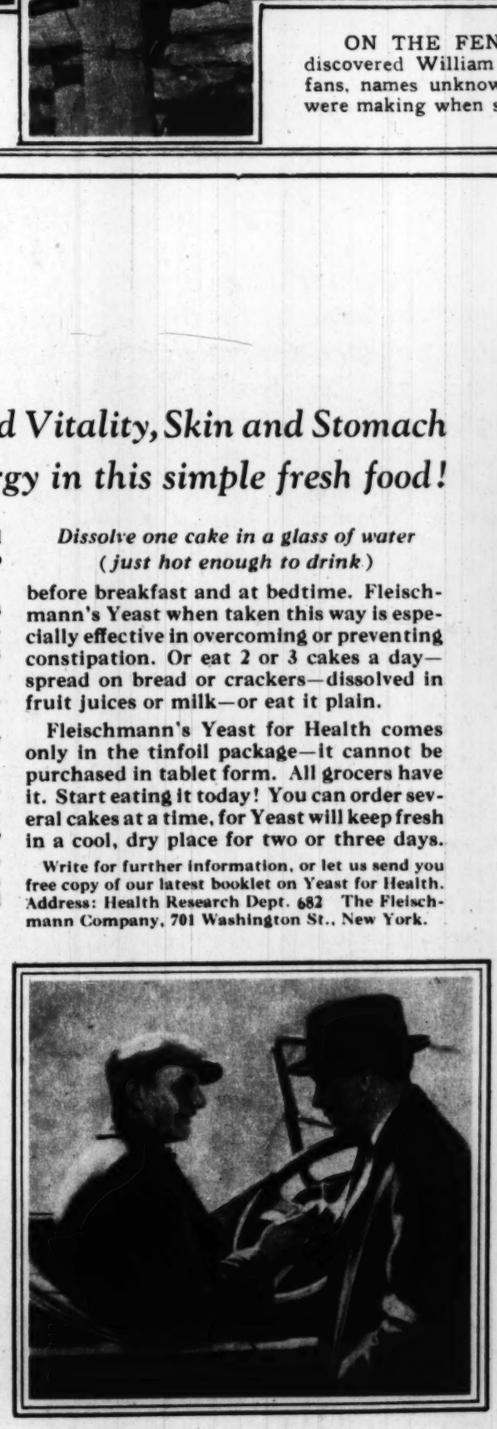
(Mrs. Ella Fitzgerald, of Ypsilanti, Michigan)

Right

"I WAS a wreck and I knew it. Although young, scarcely twenty, indigestion had taken a firm hold; my complexion was bad, vitality gone and life looked black. I had tried everything and yeast had been recommended to me. 'How absurd,' I mused. 'Yet if I only dared hope!' At the end of a month my complexion was noticeably improved, my stomach working properly and my entire system rejuvenated. Miracles like this cannot happen in a day, but now I am the picture of health."

(Mrs. Arthur R. Pagnam, R. F. D. No. 29, Stamford, Conn.)





Above

"IN the Spring of 1920 I had an attack of boils in a very bad form, which lasted for one year and five months. I tried all kinds of remedies. A fisherman friend made me a bet that Fleischmann's Yeast would cure the boils if I took 3 cakes a day. He said he would buy the yeast cakes. In 10 days my boils began to dry up, in 4 weeks only the marks were left and no new boils coming. I lost the bet and paid for the cakes, but I have not been troubled with boils since."

(Mr. John Faulkner, of Nanaimo, B. C.)

Left

"AT the age of forty I found myself slipping in health. I was troubled with indigestion, constipation and nervous debility. I had read about people taking Fleischmann's Yeast, and ordered some. A while later, in answer to a friend's inquiry, I was surprised to hear myself reply, 'I feel like a prize-fighter' and realized then that I had not felt any sign of indigestion for some time, and was putting in ten to twelve hours' hard brain work daily. I knew I was back again."

(Mr. W. L. King of Washington, D. C.)

Yeast is especially delicious as a sandwich "filler" with jam or peanut butter

Two Creams that give the line-free, lovely skin that Social Life demands

THE LADY DIANA MANNERS

"Beauty is the touchstone of life! So it's every woman's duty to foster her beauty. And every woman can have a clear-skinned glow of health if only she'll take care of her skin, keeping it supple and protected by the Pond's method, by using Pond's Two Creams."

Every skin needs these Two Creams.

MRS. GLORIA GOULD BISHOP

"The women of the younger set today ... permit the strain of many engagements ... mar the smooth delicacy of their complexions. Fatigue can leave no trace on the skin that is cared for by Pond's Two Creams. They are really remarkable."

MRS. JULIA HOYT

"In spite of her many interests, the active woman today is expected to appear always fresh, always youthful, always exquisitely groomed. And the same loveliness of clear, smooth skin may be acquired by any woman through the daily use of Pond's Two Creams."

THE DUCHESSE de RICHELIEU

"The woman whose life is given to society must always appear with a complexion fresh and radiant. Care of her skin can best be obtained by the daily use of Pond's Two Creams. They keep the skin exquisitely soft and lovely."

Oiliness banished, clogged pores cleared, rough patches smoothed away, a dry skin softened, the whole complexion brightened—rejuvenated!

Of the greatest importance to all women who want to keep their youth and beauty is the Society Woman's choice of a way to care for her skin.

For it's a leading tenet of her social code that she must always keep untarnished the glamour of her exquisite complexion, never permitting the effects of irregular hours, of entertaining and of being entertained, to show in the color and texture of her skin.

With the leisure and money to test the best products for the care of the skin and with the determination to use only those that give effectual results, she turned, at last, to just Two Creams.

For Fine Texture, keep the Pores Free

They afforded so simple, so sure a way of keeping her complexion flower-like, fresh, giving her a more alluring loveliness than she'd ever had before. Now she's telling all her friends about this wonderful method of skin care:

First, the Refreshing Cleansing. At least once a day, always after any exposure, she spreads Pond's Cold Cream thickly over her face and neck. She lets it stay on long enough for its pure oils to sink down into the pores and bring up the powder, dust, excess oil with which they have been clogged.

Then with a soft cloth she wipes off all the cream—noting how much dirt comes, too. Once again, she creams her face and wipes off every vestige, finishing with a dash of cold water or a rub with a bit of ice. If her skin is inclined to be dry she puts Pond's Cold Cream on again before retiring, and lets a little stay on all night.

The glow of roses is in her cheeks and throat now. Her skin looks — and feels — clean, invigorated, refreshed.

Next, the Delicate, Protective Finish. She smooths into her skin just the lightest fluff of Pond's Vanishing Cream and sees it instantly absorbed—for it is greaseless. She notes what a soft pearly glow it brings to her skin. How velvety-smooth the finish it gives.

The Last Touch—a soft Pearly Glow

And then she powders—and rouges—remarking how well the rouge and powder blend and how evenly and smoothly they cling over this delicate foundation of cream.

And when she goes out, Pond's Vanishing Cream is an invisible cloak that protects her from winter wind and cold and the sooty air of the city.

You, too, may have this same refreshment, this rejuvenating cleansing for your skin, this same soft finish and protection.

Read, in the panels at the side, what the beautiful women of the most exclusive Society of two continents have said of Pond's Two Creams. Then buy your own in two or four ounce jars, and begin today to use them, proving for yourself that all these words of praise are true.

THE PRINCESSE MATCHABELLI

"American women do not allow the effects of exposure to mar their complexions. Indeed their charming youthfulness is due largely to their clear, fresh, beautifully cared for skins. Women everywhere can acquire the same perfection with the use of Pond's Two Creams."

MRS. CONDÉ NAST

"The very clothes women wear—so chic and simple of line—call for unadorned youth in their faces. So the smart woman must keep her skin youthful, radiant. Pond's Two Creams are a sure means of keeping the complexion in exquisite condition."

THE PRINCESSE MARIE de BOURBON

"The skins of beautiful women must be watchfully cared for or, like fragile flowers, they fade. Happily, however, no woman's skin need fade if she uses Pond's Wonderful Two Creams. They keep the complexion perpetually young and beautiful."

THE VICOMTESSE de FRISE

"Every woman may possess a lovely skin. But she must give it daily a delicate cleansing and a soft protection. These can best be had by the use of Pond's Two Creams. I use them constantly and find them indispensable to the freshness of my own complexion."
